Plymouth Laid Waste, All Civilians Ordered Out

Roads Are Clogged As Thousands Flee; Raid After Raid Has Devastated the City

BULLETIN

London, April 30 (AP).—A government communique early today said a large number of persons were feared killed in a southwest coast town "severely" raided by the German air force during the night.

(Germans in Berlin said the town was Plymouth, which thus received its fifth heavy attack in eight nights.)

Literal Devastation

London (Wednesday), April 30.—Plymouth's civilian population is to be evacuated. This is the first British city to yield under the devastating punishment handed out by German bombers on an average of every other day for a week—and before this, months of the worst that high explosives and fire can bring to any civilized community.

The decision to evacuate the civilians of Plymouth was taken yesterday by the ministry of health and the Plymouth emergency committee after it became apparent that many people were forsaking the city of their own accord.

At last, the German air force has achieved its objective, which is believed second only to that of destroying military objectives—namely, to force the civilian population to pack up, bag and baggage, and to leave the city, and in so doing leave behind a trail of dislocations too broad to appraise at this time.

Thousands of Bombs

The people of Britain have often wondered why the Germans did not follow up the severe attacks on Coventry, Bristol, London and other key cities—now they have done it to Plymouth.

The official reason for the evacuation is Monday's raid, in which oil bombs started many fires, one of them very large. Countless thousands of incendiaries and explosives were dropped in a steady rain. Once that night fully 50 flares floated in the sky, flooding the stricken city with a ghoulish white light as bright as day. Plymouth by then was ruin upon ruin, with bombed buildings blown asunder anew while fires added their red glow to the nightmare scene.

Last night and early this morning strong formations of heavy German bombers returned to the south coast of England to carry on their blistering attack.

Second Town Bombed

Raiders flying in massed formations last night risked destruction in attacking a southwest coastal town by swooping extremely low to drop their bomb loads in the teeth of a fierce antiaircraft fire. It is unofficially said that one enemy plane crashed in flames.

Fire-bombs were spread over a wide area while the town was peppered with high explosives. Despite the intensity of the blitz civilian

Halifax Chats in D. C. Park With 3 Barefoot Waitresses

It's All Very Democratic as Girls Tell Him They're Strictly Pro-British

By John D. Morris

Three barefoot Washington waitresses had a parley with Lord Halifax in Rock Creek Park yesterday afternoon, and . . .

"Was he thrilled!" cracked one of the girls, Elizabeth O'Connor, 21, in telling of the experience.

"He was so nice I couldn't get over it," remarked another, Ann Magnotto, 21.

"It was almost as much fun as seeing President Roosevelt," said the third, Mrs. Marie (Billie) Young, 34. "He sure was cute."

The young women, all of whom live at 1305 Tenth Street Northwest and work in the Silver (Dine and Dance) Cafe, Fifth and G Streets Southwest, were wading near Pierce Mill, when Billie recognized the British Ambassador as he walked past with Malcolm MacDonald, high commissioner of Canada.

He's Much Run After

Billie and Elizabeth had fallen down in the water, so they weren't entirely presentable, but they took their shoes and stockings in hand and took after the Englishmen.

"I think he was flattered that we recognized him," related Billie. "We asked him for his autograph, and he said, 'But you don't know who I am.' He wrote his autograph on the top of our popcorn box.

"He asked me what my name was, and I told him 'Billie.'

"He said: 'I say, Billy. Billy what?'

"'Billy Goat,' I said.

"Then he laughed and said, 'Oh, don't hand me that stuff.'"

Billie said she invited his lordship to come down to the Silver Cafe and join in the merrymaking some night. He asked what it was like.

It's Gay, Rather

"Well," Billie quoted herself, "we have a little colored orchestra and a small dance floor and a lot of jitterbugs. You'd like it."

"I probably would," replied his lordship. "Don't be surprised if you see me there some night."

Halifax asked the girls for some of their popcorn and peanuts, they said, and he and MacDonald helped them eat it and feed the ducks.

"I told him to call me Klondike Liz," said Elizabeth. "He introduced me to Mr. MacDonald. He said, 'You've heard of Ramsay MacDonald, and I said, 'I think I've heard the name.'

"'Well,' he said, 'this is his son.

Decree Believed Aimed To Cut Off War Supplies to Reich

(Washington Reaction, Page 7)

Moscow, April 29 (INS).—In a move apparently aimed to cut off one of Germany's principal sources of war supplies, the Soviet government tonight issued a decree forbidding the transit of war materials through the U. S. S. R.

An order signed by A. I. Mikoyan, foreign trade commissar, prohibited the through shipment of all munitions, aircraft, aircraft parts and accessories, machine tools for the manufacture of munitions or explosives and poisons.

Shipment of other goods, it was announced, will be closely watched. Such shipments will be allowed only under special authorization or trade agreement.

Curran Will Get Senate Cafe Theft Data; 2 Suspended

The Senate Rules Committee yesterday voted to send "available facts concerning alleged defalcation and irregularities in the United States Senate Restaurant" to United States District Attorney Edward M. Curran "for such action as he may deem proper and appropriate."

At the same time, Senator Harry F. Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, committee chairman, announced that both the manager and assistant manager-auditor of the restaurant have been suspended.

W. W. Arbuckle, the manager, has been under suspension since February 18 and E. Harvey King was ordered suspended yesterday.

Move to Open South's Coal Mines Balked

Union and Operators Disagree on Details; Work Was Scheduled To Start Tomorrow

Efforts to arrange for the reopening of the Southern soft-coal mines tomorrow coincidentally with the return to work of miners in the Northern Appalachian field failed last night.

As a result, it appeared that only the Northern workings, employing 250,000 of the 400,000 men who have been idle since April 1, will resume production as scheduled.

Following a conference of several hours, seeking to work out the details of the scheduled reopening in the South, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, and L. T. Putman, spokesman for the Southern operators announced the failure to agree. Their conference was recessed until 10:30 this morning.

Lewis Regretful

Lewis said, "We regret the delay, and consider it unfortunate that we are unable to order the Southern miners back to work the same as the Northern miners."

L. Ebersole Gaines, chairman of the Southern operators conference, said that "to date we have been unable to complete additional details under which the Southern miners are to return to work."

A basis for reopening the bituminous mines was reached late Monday night when Southern operators accepted a suggestion by President Roosevelt that mining operations be resumed pending a settlement of wage differences between them and the United Mine Workers. The Southerners also agreed to increase the pay of their workers from $5.50 to $6.60 a day and to continue discussions on an additional increase of 40 cents a day asked by the union. The northern operators and the union had agreed some time before on a new contract raising wages from $6 to $7 a day.

Freight Differentials Foreseen

At his press conference yesterday Mr. Roosevelt said he thought the modification of southern freight rates was one thing that would be brought forth in further mediation conferences, but that the modification would not apply to coal alone.

Consideration of the question, he suggested, would open a Pandora's box. Previously, he had indicated he believed adjustments were necessary to alter freight rate differentials against which the South has complained.

Meanwhile, in New York, an agreement was worked out to keep the Pennsylvania hard coal miners in operation for 10 days beyond tonight's contract expiration date. Three weeks of negotiations have failed to bring an agreement on a new contract covering the 100,000 anthracite miners, who are asking a $1 a day increase for day workers, a 20 per cent increase for contract workers and two weeks annual vacation with pay.

Navy Will Patrol War Zone If Necessary, Says Roosevelt; Sea Vigil Now 2,000 Miles Out

'Business as Usual' Impossible Under Arms Program, U. S. Chamber Told

It is "physically impossible" for this Nation to carry on a defense program of its present size and still have "business as usual," Donald M. Nelson, director of purchases for the Office of Production Management, declared last night.

His address closed the second day's session of the annual United States Chamber of Commerce convention where 1,500 delegates are learning the scope of the United States effort to help the democracies win the war.

Earlier the convention was told by Secretary of Commerce Jesse H. Jones that it is probable the national debt will increase to "at least' $90,000,000,000.

Nelson told a dinner gathering at the Willard Hotel last night that "this defense program is so tremendous that in the way we handle it we shall be shaping our future for many years to come. Whether we like it or not, the program is an instrument of change."

Two Basic Problems

Two basic problems of the Nation's defense planning are the concentration of industry in the northeast and the lack of adequate armaments shops, he said. Illustrating the latter, he said, "one year ago the United States Navy could have fired, in a single broadside, an entire day's production of the privately owned explosives industry in the country."

The achievement of a new armament industry never could have been achieved so rapidly had it not been for the study of the problem made by the Army and Navy since the last war, he added.

"Extremely grave problems" have been raised by the concentration—both geographical and financial—of the defense program in the already existing concentration in the northeast, Nelson said.

He stated that these problems lie in the fields of military strategy and in social and economic troubles.

"Unhealthy Situation"

"Looking farther ahead," he said, "you build up a terrifically unhealthy situation. You create a whole new series of distressed localities—territories that have been bled white and lack the human and industrial resources to face the future."

These territories will face a letdown "that will make the experiences of our recent depression look mild," he said.

Now that the first phase of the defense program has passed, it is possible to shape the future stages with due regard to these considerations, Nelson affirmed.

In the automotive and airplane industries productive facilities already are being spread, he said, pointing to the work of the newly organized Plant Site Committee of

Congressional Experts Study Credits on Taxes for Children

Treasury Also Has Plan to Foster Larger Families by Slash in Levy

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Separate plans for preferred tax treatment of married couples with children last night were reported under study by experts of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue and the Treasury.

Joint committee experts were known to be working on a formula for progressively higher allowances for dependents, to cushion the new tax impact on families with two or more children.

An independent Treasury study of a related "bonus for babies" idea to broaden the tax base while increasing credits for dependents meanwhile was requested by a ranking Ways and Means committeeman.

This plan, on which the Treasury was asked to compile revenue estimates, would lower the exemption for married couples from $2,000 to $1,600, but partly offset the burden by raising the exemption for each dependent from $400 to $500.

The joint committee formula, proposing a higher allowance for each added child in a large family, may be offered as a supplement to tax suggestions already laid down by the group, when the Ways and Means Committee gets down to actual work on a bill.

It was seen as a possible joint committee answer to Treasury arguments that the Congressional staff's rival tax plans would hit big families in the lower income tax brackets more heavily than the Treasury's own surtax proposals.

Under the joint committee's tax plan a $2,000 flat exemption would be ordered for all, before starting surtaxes at 6 per cent on income in excess of that amount.

The Treasury's own plan starts surtaxes at 11 per cent, but first permits the usual deductions and exemptions for married, single and dependent persons. Though this plan taxes middle class incomes generally heavier than the Congressional staff rates, persons with large families claiming dependents' exemptions

OPM Alarmed As Draft Takes Skilled Labor

Deferment of Key Industrial Workers Will Be Sought

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Seriously alarmed at inroads of the Selective Service on the increasingly inadequate supply of skilled labor for defense industries, the Office of Production Management is planning action within the next few days to insure deferment for key industrial workers, The Post learned yesterday.

Chief difficulty, it was indicated, rested with various local draft boards throughout the country who failed to realize that at this point in the defense program "10 skilled tool and dye makers are worth a regiment," according to the judgment of OPM officials.

Particularly alarming reports have been received, it was said, of industrial employers declining either to initiate or to continue apprentice training courses because of a feeling that the time and effort would be wasted, since the draft would catch the novice craftsmen.

A month ago, it was stated, the worst "sore spots" were in Virginia, New Jersey, Michigan and Ohio, where overzealous draft boards failed to "use their heads" in granting deferments, as one well-informed executive declared.

The situation is somewhat relieved at present, it was indicated, and the Army is discharging skilled workers needed in key defense shops at the rate of about one a day.

Officials pointed out that the national force of skilled machine tool operators numbers only about 78,000 and that any inroads whatsoever by the draft were damaging in the extreme.

U. S. Needs Idle Boats For Self-Defense, Bland Tells Committee

By Hedley Donovan

The House Rules Committee yesterday cleared the way for an early vote on legislation to give the President power to take over all idle foreign shipping in American waters.

The committee reported out a rule for House consideration of the bill, which is expected next week, after hearing the measure's sponsor, Representative Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, assert that the United States "needs these ships as a simple matter of self-defense."

Bland, who is head of the House Merchant Marine Committee, and Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, were closely questioned by several committee members who contended

James Roosevelt Arrives in Midst Of Chungking Raid

Chungking, China, April 29 (AP).—United States Marine Capt. James Roosevelt witnessed a Japanese air raid today and then delivered a personal message from his father, President of the United States, to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

With United States Naval Attache Maj. James McHugh, Roosevelt crossed the Yangtze River in a native sampan just after the air-raid signal sounded and observed the conduct of the masses of Chungking during a raid on nearby objectives.

Still a Cloud of Dust

President Anxious to See His Dream Airport in Service

President Roosevelt drove past his dream airport at Gravelly Point yesterday and later told reporters that it still was a cloud of dust.

He said the quicker air traffic left the old Washington-Hoover Airport, the better it would be. He once had a "dream" in which he saw a serious crash at the old airport, and this led him to sponsor the National Airport at Gravelly Point.

The President said that it seemed a long time since he dedicated the airport last summer.

It also takes a long time to find out what has been delaying completion of the airport. One reason for this is that six Federal agencies have had a hand in it—the Army Engineer Corps, the Civil Aeronautics Administration, the WPA, the PWA, the Public Roads Administration and the Public Buildings Administration.

The Army did the dredging and the filling, the CAA let out the contracts for the runways and became the administrative agency, the WPA did the grading and later will do some landscaping, the PWA advanced a good part of the $12,500,000 that is going into the airport, the Public Roads Administration is building the roads leading to the field, and the Public Buildings Administration let the contracts for the big terminal building and the first hangar.

A delay in completing the terminal building appears to have held up the actual operation of the airport.

W. E. Reynolds, administrator of the Public Buildings Administration, which let the contract for the terminal, was out of town last night, and so was John Carmody, the Federal Works administrator.

Persons familiar with the project said that the contract for the terminal and hangar went to the firm of John McShane, which also is building the Jefferson Memorial, the new War Department Building, and other structures in this area. Changes in the terminal requested by the air lines were given as one reason for the delay. Weather was suggested as another, but it was conceded that there might be still others.

At any rate, the east-west runway has been finished since January. Transport planes that encountered a cross wind at Washington-Hoover have been using this runway ever

Senators Hear First Opposition By Citizens to D. C. Self-Rule

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

Citizen opposition to both national representation and local self-government developed yesterday for the first time since a Senate Judiciary subcommitte opened hearings on the Capper-Sumners suffrage resolution two weeks ago.

But before opponents of the measure spoke their views for the now voluminous record of Senator Pat McCarran's subcommittee, District Commissioners John Russell Young and Col. David McCoach, jr., put the city heads on record as "unanimously in favor" of the bill.

In a three-paragraph statement, the Commissioners declared, in part: "It is our belief that this proposed amendment is not only in complete conformity with American principles, but the interest of the District of Columbia would be materially benefited by representation in the two houses of Congress.

"The feature of the resolution which would extend judicial power of the United States to controversies to which citizens of the District of Columbia are parties, would supply a long-standing need."

In the view of Mrs. Morgan Pryse, spokesman for the Marietta Park Women's Club, the apparently overwhelming popular indorsement for suffrage is explained by the failure

General Defies Engineers

Parsons Takes Responsibility For Meade's Costly Location

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

An Army major general yesterday took full responsibility for the location of the new Army cantonment at Fort George G. Meade, Md., on a site which engineers had warned in advance would cost much more than the area they had recommended.

Maj. Gen. James K. Parsons, commander of the Third Corps Area when the camp site was chosen, told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that he was "the only man in the Army or elsewhere responsible for it."

"I wanted to have every space available for training," he declared. "I assume that the Twenty-ninth Division was sent there to train and not to save money."

John A. Stalford, president of the Consolidated Engineering Co., of Baltimore, which built the camp at a cost of $21,000,000—more than double original estimates—declared the site chosen was "terrifically expensive to build on."

He said the area insisted upon by the Army commander had no natural drainage and practically no roads or sewers. Such facilities exist at the site of the World War cantonment at Meade, it was explained.

Earlier, W. C. Roberts of J. R.

President Explains Hemisphere Defense Will Determine How Far Ships Will Be Sent

The Convoy Issue

TWO ANTICONVOY resolutions to be acted on by Senate committee today, with Administration seeking to table them. Page 2.

Sea Vigil Extended

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

American naval vessels are not barred from entering war zones, President Roosevelt reminded the country yesterday, emphasizing again that he will extend the neutrality patrol as far as necessary to protect the Western Hemisphere.

The President declined even to be bound by a 2,000-mile offshore patrol limit, mentioned earlier in the day by Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations.

Admiral Stark, in informal remarks preceding a prepared address to the United States Chamber of Commerce, said:

"I wish I could talk about convoys. I'd like to tell you about our patrols 2,000 miles out from the high latitudes to the Antarctic in both oceans."

Stark later told reporters that 2,000 miles offshore would be a better approximation of the patrol's extent.

Refuses to Fix Limits

President Roosevelt, asked to explain this revelation by Stark, said that mention of a 2,000-mile patrol area depends on where you measure from.

In the face of an insistent barrage of press conference questions, the President refused to fix any mileage figure as the limit of the patrol operations.

Again and again he repeated that the United States vessels, whose extended patrolling has been warmly greeted by British Prime Minister Winston Churchill, will cruise as far as necessary for American security.

Proclamations under the Neutrality Act ban only commercial vessels from the combat zone and do not apply to naval craft, the President reminded his listeners. But that does not mean, he added, that the Navy will enter those zones.

He criticized maps and columns based on his announcement of extended patrols last Friday as cockeyed and made it plain that the only time he mentioned a 1,000-mile limit for the patrols was in telling how far off the Eastern Shore of Maryland they operated in September, 1939, when the neutrality patrol was instituted.

Noncommittal on Ship Transfers

The President was noncommittal, however, about a hint by Stark that more naval vessels may soon be transferred to Britain.

Stark, in his prepared address to a "defense luncheon" of the chamber, declared that if the United States can build up its Navy "good enough, big enough, fast enough, we might be able to spare something within our own security."

At another point Stark reported that "substantial portions" of the Navy's building program are ahead of schedule.

"We must be prepared to share our resources," the Chief of Naval Operations also said. "This we will do within the limits of our security."

President Roosevelt, asked about these hints of further ship transfers,

Anticonvoy Moves to Get Test in Senate

Two anti-convoy resolutions, long the spearhead of Senate isolationist attacks on the President's foreign course, will be made the special order of business at a meeting of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee this morning.

A leadership motion to table both resolutions is expected to be presented. Indications were it would carry by a predominantly party line vote.

Senator Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, author of the original anti-convoy measure again took the floor of the Senate yesterday to quote reports of "a move to pigeonhole the resolution" and to demand public hearings and debate.

Meanwhile Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, introduced a separate resolution to ban use of convoys except in wartime unless the President requests they be used and Congress approves within 14 days after submission of the request.

Chairman George of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee declined any forecast on what action the committee might take but said he will suggest that the committee consider the related resolutions at the same time.

An independent survey of the Tobey resolution's probable voting strength indicated nine votes for it in a 23-man committee. It was learned that proxies against the resolution probably will be supplied by Senators Harrison of Mississippi and Wagner of New York, both ill.

A group of 50 Congressional noninterventionists last night pledged "unalterable opposition" to American convoys "by whatever name they may be called."

Meeting in the Senate Office Building caucus room, they voted to petition the Senate Foreign Relations Committee to approve the anticonvoy resolution of Senator Charles W. Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, when the committee takes it up for consideration tomorrow.

Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican), of Ohio, who presided at the meeting, told reporters that "surely this vital issue should be debated before our Nation before 130,000,000 people are dragged into war by professors and columnists."

Taft said that possible future action, in the event the Foreign Relations Committee pigeonholes the resolution, had been discussed but that no decision had been reached.

"'Hiya Malc,' I said.

"I asked him if he was married," said Ann. "He said he was, so I said I'd better be getting along, then."

Only One Carnation

Elizabeth asked the Ambassador to give her the carnation from his buttonhole, which he did, remarking:

"I wish I had one for each of you." Elizabeth put it in her memory book when she got home.

"We asked him to go wading with us," Billie said, "and he said, 'You don't know how much I'd love to take off my shoes and go wading, but I don't think I'd better.'"

Halifax asked the girls their nationalities. They told him the parents of Billie and Elizabeth were born in Ireland and those of Ann in Italy.

"Sa, you're Irish, eh, Billie?" Billie quoted the Ambassador as saying. "But there are two kinds of Irish. Shanty Irish and lace-curtain Irish."

"I told him I was strictly shanty Irish," Billie said. "I said I was born on the other side of the tracks."

All Very Democratic

"We told him also that we were strictly for England. We said we're really for you. Ann's parents can't even speak English, but they're all for England and so is she."

"Yes," said Ann. "I think Mussolini is crazy and Hitler is too."

All in all, it was quite a satisfactory interview, lasting half an hour or so. Other park strollers joined the gathering, and when Halifax and MacDonald went along, Billie and Elizabeth and Ann struck up a conversation with the Ambassador's chauffeur, who was parked nearby.

Of course, there's the obvious moral in the incident, with something about democracy as the keynote.

Fighting Men Guests of Chamber Luncheon

STARK HINTS MORE U. S. SHIPS FOR BRITAIN—A statement by Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, that the U. S. will share its resources "within the limits of our security" indicated that more United States fighting ships may be transferred to Britain. Admiral Stark spoke at yesterday's luncheon meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce at which he and Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, were guests. Left to right—Gen. Marshall, Thomas H. McInnerney, vice president of the chamber; Admiral Stark and Philip J. Fay, chief of the chamber's defense committee said he did not know to what ships Stark was referring.

He advised reporters, however, to watch for an announcement soon on transfer of some Coast Guard vessels to the Navy, a step usually taken only in time of war.

The President's emphasis on the point that no boundary line can be drawn for the area in which patrols will operate was taken as added proof that he intends to have the Atlantic force act as the "eyes" of the British navy, leaving to British vessels just the work of coping with attacks on cargo vessels along a narrow shipping track between the American continent and Europe.

As indicated by Churchill in his speech Sunday, it was surmised that the United States would thus release many British vessels for actual convoy duty which have hitherto been performing scout work.

President Roosevelt had no fault to find with news reports of his press conference announcement of patrols last Friday, but took exception to later interpretations and maps based on his remarks.

The President said he hadn't yet seen a map picturing the patrols that meant anything.

Asked whether the patrols had been extended since last week's announcement, Mr. Roosevelt answered that he couldn't say, that it was an operational question involving the positions of the ships then and now.

Stark said informally to the chamber luncheon, however, that the patrols had been considerably extended during the last fortnight.

The combat zone in the Atlantic Ocean defined by a Presidential proclamation in September, 1939, is roughly similar to the war zone proclaimed by Germany, within which the Germans have promised to sink any enemy or neutral ships.

Germany, in a recent pronouncement from Berlin, extended its zone of "sink-at-sight" operations to within three miles of the coast of Greenland.

Among other defense disclosures made at his press conference Mr. Roosevelt said he thought that a project for building dirigible bases along the country's coasts had been approved by him.

War Next Step, Tokyo Press Says

Tokyo, April 29 (AP).—The newspaper Kokumin declared today the United States decision for extended patrol of Atlantic waters of the Western Hemisphere "means the United States is but a step from entering the war."

"The United States Navy is taking care of this route to England, which should be the work of the British navy," Kokumin said. "No one can deny this.

"This also means conflict will begin between the United States and Germany."

The Times Advertiser, controlled by the Japanese foreign office, carried a headline, "war worry causes general price drop," over a story which said "concern is felt on the market that the United States at last is bracing up to take a catastrophic plunge into the European war, and this caused a wholesale fall in stocks."

The usually temperate newspaper Asahi described the United States as "going headlong into war" and said "the grim determination of Roosevelt to take the offensive against the Axis powers means letting loose American patrols on all the seas of the world for convoying United States transports carrying war materials to Britain."

Aid "Considerable," Soviets Say

Moscow, April 29 (AP).—Red Fleet, organ of the Russian Navy, said today in a review of the battle of the Atlantic, that the expansion of the United States patrol brought "considerable" aid to Britain.

The newspaper said President Roosevelt's action "is already having an effect on the position in the Atlantic."

The United States' aim, Red Fleet said, was to "place under its control a considerable part of Atlantic communication lines over which the German air, submarine and surface forces are operating."

"The American patrol will considerably facilitate plans of the British fleet to realize a blockade of the eastern approaches of the European and African continents," the newspaper declared.

'Business as Usual' Impossible—Nelson

OPM.

Through this agency it is planned to place defense contracts in cities where there is existing unemployment and away from congested areas of defense jobs.

Nelson emphasized that defense is nevertheless the most important consideration, that "whatever happens and whatever the cost, we must get what we need for defense and we must get it when we need it—not six months or a year or five years after the crisis has passed."

He cited two pressures under which the Nation is rearming: the pressure of the national emergency and the pressure of the size of the program itself.

The goal of the defense program is "the goal toward which Americans have always worked—freedom," he said.

Forecasting an increase of the national debt at the morning session, Jesse Jones declared that "we have not yet made any sacrifices." He added, "But there are plenty in store for us, plenty of them."

Must Repay Some Day

Of the national debt, Jones said: "It has never occurred to me why we could not carry a national debt equal to a year's income, and as we build the national income we can add more debt.

"But whatever amount we have to borrow, we must commence to pay back the day the emergency is over."

He declared that "much more" money will be appropriated for national defense within the next four years.

Requesting full cooperation in aiding the battle of the democracies, Jones said:

"We have chosen our course and should not waste too much time over road maps."

He cited an estimate that one-fourth of the normal man-power working hours will be required to produce for the rearmament program.

"That means, he said, "that one hour in every four must be taken from the production and manufacture of things we used in our normal everyday life.

At a luncheon session at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday the role of the Navy and Army in the armament picture was described by Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff, and Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations.

More Troops to Alaska

More troops shortly will be sent to Alaska, Gen. Marshall said. He pointed out that the Kodiak Island garrison in Alaska already has been increased and that more troops have been sent to Newfoundland, Bermuda and Trinidad.

He said that without morale an army is "largely ineffective" and praised the high morale of the United States Army.

Stressing the Army's demands on industry, he said: "This is a war of smokestacks as well as of men. We need all the efforts you can give us; the more you do, the more effectively it is done, the stronger our position is."

International trade was emphasized as a sound means of national defense by Justin R. Weddell, vice president and director of the American Chamber of Commerce in London, at a dinner of American Chambers of Commerce abroad held last night at the Willard Hotel. Receptly returned from London, he described conditions there.

"Our economic and political security lie in an opposite direction from the aggressors, namely in the direction of a strong and free, rather than a divided and subjugated world economy," he said.

He warned against abandoning our present commercial policy, saying it "has not been determined by economic considerations alone; its aim has been peace as well as prosperity."

Tax Credits For Children Under Study

As an answer to this argument, and in perfecting details of their own plan, Congressional staff men are understood to have worked out the added credits for to be applied against the normal tax.

For a single child, the dependents deduction would remain $400. But starting either with the second or third child in a family, larger credits would be progressively allowed. The change, it was said, could be made with only slight loss of revenue, and this could be recaptured elsewhere.

Independent of this study, a ranking Democrat on the Ways and Means Committee, who asked that his name be withheld, was compiling data on a plan to combine a broadening of the tax base with liberalization of allowances for dependents.

On the theory that "two can live as cheaply as one," this member proposed to leave the single person exemption where it is, $800, and make the exemption for married double the single, or $1,600. It is now $2,000. To soften the effect on married persons with children, they could deduct $500 instead of $400 for each dependent.

Revenue Not Sole Object

Submitting the plan to the Treasury for estimates, he told reporters it "would make for a sounder social principle" whether or not it was vastly productive of revenue.

In the second day of public hearings on its projected $3,500,000,000 tax program, the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday ran out of witnesses at noon. Hearings will resume this morning.

Clinton Davidson, representing Fiduciary Counsel, Inc., asked the committee to permit individuals to deduct expenses incurred in obtaining their income, such as bookkeeping and safety vault rent. Under the present law, he said, gambling houses can deduct business expenses from their taxable income while a widow cannot charge off expenses incurred in handling her estate.

Banks Seek Reserves

R. H. Stout, president of the Morris Plan Bankers Association, asked that certain industrial banks be allowed to accumulate reserves against their deposits without being subject to surtaxes against such accumulations.

Harry P. Taylor, Winston-Salem, N. C., tobacco manufacturer, protested Treasury proposals to double the present excise on tobacco, suggesting it go first to products not produced by farmers. He favored taxes on staples such as sugar and coffee.

Other witnesses included C. V. Sursa, of the Muncie (Ind.) Industrial Co., and Carl H. Wilken, of Sioux City, of the Raw Materials National Council.

that transfer of seized Axis ship to Britain would be "a warlike act."

"If we take over the sabotaged ships under legal right," Admiral Land replied, "then we have the right to do as we damn please with them."

Halleck Disturbed

Representative Halleck (Republican), of Indiana, said, "It disturbs me to see this country take the line that we are living in a world of burglars and we might as well be burglars ourselves."

"There is something sordid and somewhat hypocritical underlying this whole proposition," asserted Representative Oliver (Republican), of Maine, a Merchant Marine Committee member. "We sanction these steps toward war one by one, but we haven't the guts to declare war."

Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, said he didn't consider the United States to be at peace today and was supporting the Bland bill "as a war measure."

Admiral Land told the committee that the emergency shipbuilding program now getting under way represents "a better job than we did in 1917." Productive capacity will reach its peak a year from now, he said.

The Senate Commerce Committee yesterday opened hearings on the Bland bill and will discuss it further at a meeting tomorrow.

Ready to Repair Ships

Meanwhile the Maritime Commission yesterday was reported ready to prepare for service the 30 Axis ships recently seized in American harbors. Marine engineers have surveyed the extent of sabotage aboard the ships and could order the necessary repairs immediately after a formal Government order to prepare the vessels for sea.

Other developments on the shipping front yesterday were:

Viscount Halifax, British Ambassador, and Sir Arthur Salter, head of a British shipping mission here, conferred with Undersecretary of States Welles on Latin-American anxieties that Britain might seize Axis ships at sea after they had been put into inter-American service. Britain has always contended that belligerent vessels cannot be transferred from one flag to another during hostilities.

East Coast maritime unions and shipbuilding concerns continued behind closed doors their negotiations looking to a uniform agreement on wages and working conditions to cover the Atlantic seaboard. Defense officials said they expect an agreement to be reached after several more days of conference.

U. S. Will Buy Civil Planes Under Aid Plan

President Roosevelt yesterday ordered an inventory of civil transport airplanes to see how many could be bought for use by nations fighting aggression, but aircraft circles doubted if he would find many.

The President revealed at a press conference that he has asked Secretary of Commerce Jones to survey the supply of transport planes to see how many could be bought up for the defense of democracies.

There is a real need for such craft, the President said, and he hopes to obtain a substantial number.

He would not specify how the planes would be used, saying only that he was interested in all types.

Government figures showed that the 17 domestic airlines have 358 transports licensed, and 82 more are operating on United States foreign routes.

All these planes are in use and it is only by arrangement with the Priorities Division of the Office of Production Management that airlines are obtaining any replacements. It is understood that 85 transports have been accorded the airlines for 1941 by priorities officials, who are diverting all others to military use.

A total of 400 transports are on order, but airlines despair of getting delivery on any but actual replacements.

So tight is the supply of transport planes that the Civil Aeronautical Board announced last week it would authorize no new or extended routes involving new equipment or personnel unless prior approval is granted by the Army and Navy.

Observers said that the only way the President could secure new transport ships would be to commandeer the planes that have been promised as replacements to the commercial airlines.

British Housewives Pay High for Fruit

By Beryl Jenks

United Press Staff Writer

London, April 29.—Housewives who wanted strawberries for dinner were able to buy them today in a few stores—at 20 cents a berry or $8 a pound.

The greenhouse-grown strawberries were just about the only fresh fruit for sale anywhere, and the 8,000,000 oranges that reached England last weekend were grabbed up so fast there wasn't one to be found in the markets today.

Women formed long queues at fruit shops all day Monday, but every store had its supply bought out within a few minutes after opening.

Most imported fresh fruit has disappeared for the duration of the war, as the cargo space it would occupy in incoming ships is needed much more for war supplies.

Street peddlers with their barrows of fruit disappeared last December. Fruit stores for a time displayed canned fruit, but even this has vanished within the last month or two.

Lemons were the first fruit to disappear. As long ago as last October a housewife had to wait days, sometimes weeks, to buy two or three from her regular fruit dealer at 20 cents apiece. There haven't been any since January.

Bananas were next. The last bunches were sold in December, when the government suspended shipments to release shipping for duty carrying supplies for the African war. One small shipment, squeezed aboard a ship which had a little cargo space, arrived about a month ago, but nobody I know has seen any of these bananas for sale.

In midwinter, grapefruit disappeared from the shops. The last I bought, in December, cost me 20 cents each—more than twice the former price.

Eating apples were last seen in January, and the last cooking apples disappeared last month.

There haven't been quantity supplies of tomatoes since last summer, largely because the Germans occupied the channel islands, England's main source of supply.

Labor Shortage Alarms OPM

day by the Maritime Commission reported that the draft also was depleting the already scanty supply of trained merchant seamen.

One curious effect of the draft, it was learned, is to contribute to a growing scarcity of agricultural labor. As outlined by officials, the situation has developed from a large-scale migration from farm to city of youths of draft age. Drawn to urban centers by high wages in defense industries, the potential selectees are more successful in obtaining deferments, and the full weight of the rural draft quotas falls on the farm boys who stay at home.

OPM officials declined to reveal what steps they would take to remedy the general situation, but indicated that action of some sort could be expected soon.

Stimson Promptly Accepts Col. Lindbergh's Resignation

Copyright by New York Times

Another verbal attack upon Charles A. Lindbergh was made at the White House yesterday as Secretary of War Stimson accepted his resignation as a colonel in the Air Corps Reserve.

"I understand from the press that Col. Lindbergh is returning his commission to the Secretary of War," Stephen Early, Presidential secretary, told reporters. "That leads me to wonder whether he is returning his decoration to Mr. Hitler."

The comment was made by Early in his regular daily press conference soon after he had returned from a chat with President Roosevelt in the latter's bedroom. The decoration referred to was the Order of the German Eagle, which was presented to Col. Lindbergh by Field Marshal Goering in Berlin about four years ago.

Subsequent to Early's comment, Army press officers told reporters that the Secretary of War had accepted the flier's resignation from the Air Corps Reserves shortly after its receipt.

Medal "in Storage"

Col. Lindbergh testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee this year that at the request of the American Ambassador he attended a dinner at the American Embassy in Berlin at which Marshal Goering handed him a box containing the decoration. He added the medal was in storage.

Early's remarks and Secretary Stimson's prompt action indicated that the Administration has not relented in the attitude expressed by President Roosevelt last Friday. The President then linked Col. Lindbergh with defeatists and appeasers and pointed to Clement A. Vallandingham, Copperhead of Civil War days.

Col. Lindbergh made public Monday his letter of resignation from the Air Corps Reserve, saying that he was resigning because he "had no honorable alternative" and asserting that the President had "clearly implied that I am no longer of use to this country as a reserve officer."

Discourtesy Charged

Yesterday Early indicated a view that the flier had acted with discourtesy toward the President of the United States by making public a letter to him before it was received. He said that it was the second time Col. Lindbergh had adopted such a course, the first time being in 1934 when the President canceled all air mail contracts and placed the carrying of air mail in the hands of the Army. Col. Lindbergh protested the action.

"Newspapers printed a telegram on Monday morning which had been released on Sunday afternoon," Early said yesterday. "The White House did not get the telegram until about 10 a. m. Monday. This latter apparently is an example of the same procedure."

Asked whether Mr. Roosevelt would regard the flier's resignation as a loss to the Air Corps, Early stated that Secretary Stimson's action would provide a final verdict.

"From what the President indicated last Friday," Early remarked, "he (Lindbergh) wouldn't have any duties even if he continued to hold his commission. Now there is a commission that someone else can hold."

Nye, Tobey Deplore Roosevelt's Attack

Senators Tobey (Republican), of New Hampshire, and Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, two of the critics of the President's foreign policy, yesterday deplored President Roosevelt's verbal attack on Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as an attempt to abridge the right of free speech.

Tobey declared in a Senate speech: "Shame on any man—President, Senator or rank and file—who tried to deny another man the right of free speech. Is this free America? We'd better sing 'God Save America' instead of 'God Bless America' if the Constitution is to prevail."

Nye followed with this:

"Col. Charles Lindbergh offers a direct and clean-cut appeal for some consideration for America in this hour when we are being marched to war, by an organized minority of interventionists.

"None undertake to answer the arguments of Col. Lindbergh, but columnists and the President proceed with an effort to tear him limb from limb as a rank 'Copperhead' for his brilliant exercise of his right as an American to freedom of speech and expression."

Jackson Tells Antitrust Defense Policy

By the Associated Press

Attorney General Jackson announced yesterday a seven-point policy for applying the antitrust laws to the national defense program under which the Justice Department will pass on problems submitted by the Office of Production Management and the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply.

Jackson's policy was outlined in identical letters to John Lord O'Brien, OPM general counsel, and Leon Henderson, OPACS administrator.

The Attorney General repeated the view expressed in a statement last week that some splitting-up of orders among many companies and production curtailment would be necessary to assist the defense effort.

"Some of these acts, if accomplished by private contract or arrangement within an industry and carried on for private advantage," he said in his letter, "would probably constitute violations of the antitrust laws.

Entitled to Cooperation

"On the other hand, it is obvious that in the present emergency acts performed by industry under the direction of public authority, and designed to promote public interest and not to achieve private ends, do not constitute violations of the antitrust laws.

"In these circumstances, the Department of Justice recognizes that business interests which are asked to comply with public plans for increasing production and preventing inflation are entitled to the cooperation of agencies of the Government in eliminating any uncertainties which may exist as to the application of the antitrust laws to their activities."

The Government will keep strict control of any arrangements made within an industry for redistribution of orders or the operation of any other phases of the program. Jackson outlined these points:

1. It will not be illegal for representatives of industry to meet with representatives of OPM and OPACS, and industrial committees may be formed at the request of either agency to work with the industry.

Agencies' Responsibility

2. he question of need for such a committee, the manner of selecting it and its membership will be the sole responsibility of OPM or OPACS.

3. No industry may undertake to determine policies for the industry or attempt to compel anyone to comply with any request or order made by a public authority.

4. Any request for action by an industry unit must come from the OPM or the OPACS.

5. Requests for action within a particular industry, such as allocation of orders, may be made only after the general character of the action has been cleared with the Justice Department.

6. The Justice Department agrees not to prosecute "acts performed in good faith and within the fair intendment of instructions" from OPM or OPACS.

7. The department reserves the right to begin civil actions to enjoin the continuing of practices found not to be in the public interest if persisted in after notice to desist has been given.

United Nearly Doubles Plane Engine Output

By the Associated Press

Hartford, Conn., April 29.—Eugene E. Wilson, president of United Aircraft Corporation, today announced deliveries to the United States and British governments at the rate of 1,200 aircraft engines and 2,000 propellors a month, with shipments running by the hundreds ahead of schedule.

The company manufactures Pratt and Whitney engines of as much as 2,000 horsepower. It also makes Hamilton Standard Propellors. Both are used in combat planes of the Army and Navy.

The company, in a report to stockholders, disclosed shipments in the first three months of 1941 of $54,863,135, an amount which was 41 per cent of the entire shipments made in 1940—a total of $126,755,000. In the first three months of 1940 shipments totaled $16,550,721.

Production really got under way in the last three months of 1940, when deliveries zoomed to $48,040,454.

The net income of the company in the March quarter was $4,806,496, or $1.80 a share, compared with $2,380,029, or 89 cents a share, in the first quarter of 1940.

Wilson said the present building program of the corporation, although running far ahead of the "impossible schedule" of deliveries laid down last year, might be hindered in coming months by limitation of deliveries of magnesium castings and nickel for alloys.

Said Wilson: "We have anticipated we must be rationed on magnesium and have taken steps to meet the situation in order to continue our accelerated production."

Magnesium rationing, if and when it comes, will affect the company chiefly through its sub-contractors who fabricate the castings and other parts. United aircraft has long been recognized in defense industries as a leading proponent of this system of sub-contracting for parts and company officials regard it largely responsible for the success of current extended production.

Plane Orders at $4,000,000,000

By International News Service

New York, April 29.—Unfilled orders of the American aircraft industry have reached an unprecedented peak of more than $4,000,000,000, it was learned tonight, and the industry expects to pass the German rate of military plane production during 1941.

Production of military planes in the United States last year, according to monthly Government announcements, was approximately, 6,000 of which 3,500 have been exported to England. Even the more conservative leaders in the industry are now talking with growing confidence of a 1941 production of 18,000 fighting planes.

Most reliable estimates in aviation circles place British and German plane productions both about 1,500 ships a month or 18,000 a year.

Parsons Takes Responsibility for Costly Meade Location

Greiner & Co., who made the engineering and architectural surveys for the cantonment hospital, testified the location recommended by his firm had been disregarded and as a result the hospital had been delayed and its cost was "very much higher."

The site proposed was adjacent to the post airfield, was suitable for construction and had sewers and roads, he said. Describing the area the Army chose instead to leave more room for training, Roberts said that roads built there during the construction period were "swallowed up" by mud. Tractor-drawn sleds had to be used and even they often bogged down, he stated.

Gen. Parsons told the committee that he had personally surveyed the Meade reservation and picked out the camp site. He was asked by Hugh Fulton, committee counsel, if he hadn't obtained the advice of engineers.

"I hadn't any engineers on my staff," he replied, 'but I didn't need any. I know how to lay out a camp site."

Stalford told the committee that the company employed about 14,000 carpenters on the Meade job, with about 5,000 working at any one time. In reply to questions, he also said that the initiation fee charged by the union for carpenters hired was $57.50.

Senator Brewster (Republican), of Maine, declared he knew of cases in which carpenters were "suddenly found incompetent" after working long enough to pay their fees and discharged. He said this "indicated possible collusion" between foremen and the union.

Newell T. Cox, vice president of the Consolidated Engineering Co., admitted the turnover of carpenters was unusual, but declared such collusion was "impossible."

"We never had enough carpenters," he said, "they'd never fire good men."

Stalford testified that his company would profit $226,000 on the $21,000,000 job. He said the fee had been agreed upon on the basis of the original cost, and would run less than 1½ per cent of the final cost.

Farm Produce Prices Advance 7 Points in Month

By the Associated Press

Prices of farm products at local markets advanced seven points during the month ended April 15 for the sharpest monthly rise since the war started in September, 1939.

In reporting this yesterday, the Agriculture Department also said that the farm commodity price index in mid-April was 110 per cent of the 1910-14 level, that it averaged 12 points above a year earlier, and was the highest since October, 1937.

The department said the increase in the index reflected material gains in the prices of chickens and eggs, market advances in meat animals, and some improvementin cotton and grain prices over mid-March levels.

Secretary Wickard called upon dairy farmers yesterday to increase milk production between 6 and 8 per cent to meet prospective needs of Great Britain and an expanding demand at home for dairy products.

Auto Union Head Put in Class 1-A By Draft Board

Detroit, April 20 (AP).—Walter P. Reuther, a member of the International Executive Board of the United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) and head of the union's General Motors department, has been placed in Class 1-A for military service, his draft board announced today.

The board is scheduled to deliver its next group for Army induction May 21.

Reuther has been prominent in current negotiations between the U. A. W. and General Motors for a new contract which have led to a strike threat and intervention by the National Defense Mediation Board.

U. S. Army Planning Largest Maneuvers

Raleigh, N. C., April 29 (U.P.)—Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the First U. S. Army, tonight announced the largest Army maneuvers in peacetime history of the United States—involving 400,000 men—would be held next fall.

The maneuvers will be held in a 4,800-square mile area along the North Carolina-South Carolina border in October and November, Gen. Drum said in an announcement issued jointly with Gov. J. M. Broughton of North Carolina.

Red Cross to Enlist Frst Aid Volunteers

Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis yesterday authorized the organization of Red Cross Volunteer First Aid Detachments in cooperation with industries, office buildings, hotels and other similar organizations in a letter to 3,700 chapters.

The detachments shall consist of not less than 15 or more than 50 persons, he stated. More than 2,500,000 persons have been trained already in Red Cross first aid, he said.

Citizen Leaders Crowd Suffrage Hearing

Mrs. Pryse said she voiced opposition to the bill on behalf of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association, a "minority" of the District Federation of Women's Clubs and the Marietta organization. She informed the subcommittee that "this is not a one-sided argument," describing Washington as the "best-governed United States city . . . free from local politicians."

When the suffrage referendum was taken in 1938, Mrs. Pryse said, the "newspapers were filled with propaganda for only one side of the argument." The Washington Post, she said, was at that time the only Washington paper to publish an article giving views of opponents of suffrage.

Teacher Against Suffrage

Mrs. Pryse declared that if Washington were enfranchised the Negro population would not vote but "would be voted." Giving the District representation in the House and Senate, as authorized in the resolution, Congress, she stated, would "create an entity without parallel in the United States, a city-State."

Mrs. Pryse was supported by Charles M. Thomas, executive secretary of the District of Columbia Maryland-Virginia Civic League, who told the subcommittee that he personally was opposed to suffrage and national representation.

Thomas, teacher of American History and economics at Armstrong Junior High School, declared that Congress has abandoned its former policy of apportioning school funds among colored and white on the basis of enrollment.

Colored schools as a consequence, are overcrowded, he stated. But, he added, "the vote wouldn't settle it."

The "whole truth" behind the "agitation for the vote," declared William H. Lowder, 1333 Rosedale Street Northeast, is the "lousy" government of the District.

"The town's practically under martial law," he declared. "And on top of that the Commissioners give one-half of our $12,000,000 municipal center to the War Department."

D. C. Ruled as Colony

Mrs. Ernest William Howard opposed suffrage "as an individual."

Joseph W. Cheyney, 2615 Myrtle Avenue Northeast, told the subcommittee that only the States, under the Constitution, are entitled to choose Presidential electors and representatives in Congress. Cheyney, however, declared himself in favor of self-government.

"This Congress is governing the District as a colony," he said. "Local self-government isn't a gift, it's a heritage."

Fred Walker, appearing for the Central Labor Union, characterized the present District government in its relation to Congress as "little more than a company union."

Speaking for the Socialist Party in Washington, Albert Hamilton called for both self-government and national representation and asked for "some reflection of the democratic principle" in improved housing, schools and public health. To his charge of discrimination against colored in allotment of school facilities, Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, asked: "Wouldn't the colored stand a better show in Congress than in a local government dominated by whites?"

Parents Back Resolution

Edgar Brown of the United Government Employes, declared that Negroes "might get along better" without the vote. However, he said he felt the District "should have the right to elect officials."

Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers, cited that organization's indorsement of the resolution. Personally, she said, she is more interested in self-government than representation.

President Elevates 4 Army Officers

President Roosevelt yesterday sent to the Senate nominations of the following Army officers: Lieutenant colonel to be colonel—Harry Dumont Offutt, Garret Park, Md. Majors to be lieutenant colonels—Ray L. Owens, Bethesda, Md.; Gerald Bradford Devore, Wheeling, W. Va. Captain to be major—John William Westerman, Baltimore.

Strike Faces Capital Area Construction

Stoppage of all union construction work in the Washington metropolitan area, and at Fort Belvoir, Indianhead powder plant and Quantico Marine base building, "within a week" was threatened last night unless an existing deadlock is broken in negotiations over renewal of a hod carriers' union contract.

Failure to agree on a method of arbitrating the new contract was given as reason for the deadlock, which was between the International Hod Carriers, Building and Laborers Union and a committee representing six District contractors' organization.

Contract demands by the union involve a wage increase from 80 cents to $1.05 an hour, with an additional 25 cents hourly for carriers working "in dangerous" positions, a contractors' spokesman said.

According to Larry Kelly, the union negotiator, the hod carriers have agreed to arbitration by the Government or by a body of three men, one chosen by the union, one by the contractors and one named by the two mentioned.

James R. Skinker, head of the employers committee, said last night that the contractors are willing to submit to arbitration before "any impartial board," but would not agree to a board including a member chosen by the union.

The present contract expires today at midnight and union leaders say that if an agreement is not reached by that time an estimated 7,000 hod carriers in this area will not report for work tomorrow.

This, according to Kelly, would result in immediate stoppage of much vital construction and total stoppage of all union construction within the next week.

A mutually acceptable method of arbitration was being sought last night by the Labor Department's Conciliation Service, headed by Frank Sheehan.

Contractors involved are members of the Master Builders Association, the Mason Contractors, the Cut Stone Contractors, the Excavating Contractors and the Cement Contractors organizations.

Girl Slain, Detective Accused

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

ADA JENNIE MARTIN, 24, of Chicago, who, police said, was shot and killed yesterday by one of the State's attorney's ace detectives who then beat her mother and himself with his service revolver. The Chicago police chief said he believed the slayer, Daniel Moriarity, 40, was mentally unbalanced

Weiner Named Assistant Price Administrator

Joseph L. Weiner, director of the Securities and Exchange Public Utilities Division has been named assistant administrator of the new Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply, Administrator Leon Henderson announced yesterday.

Weiner will have charge of civilian allocation of the residual supply of scarce materials among competing civilian industries after defense needs have been met, Henderson said.

In his post at the SEC, responsible for administering policies under the "death sentence" clause of the Public Utility Act, Weiner has been the storm center of a series of disputes with utility companies on the issues of integration, competitive bidding and utility financing.

President Roosevelt indicated yesterday at his press conference that Henderson's agency is considering legislation to augment its price-fixing authority, but declared that as yet Henderson has no concrete program.

Asked whether he expected to request price-fixing legislation, the President said the answer was both yes and no. He explained that he did not know when it would be advisable to take further steps on price control, but that the question was being given attention every day.

Earlier in the day, Presidential Secretary Stephen Early had told reporters that Henderson might discuss such legislation at a White House luncheon with the President. Henderson declined to make any statement, however, after his visit.

Garden Club Visit

Kiowa Indians, Haitians Arrive For Folk Fete

Minstrels, ballad singers and folk dancers began to pour into Washington yesterday for the eighth annual National Folk Festival which will open its three-day program in Constitution Hall tomorrow. There will be afternoon and evening performances. The festival is sponsored by the Washington Post Folk Festival Association.

Among the first to arrive was a group of Kiowa Indians from Anadarko, Okla., who will be opening performers on each of the six programs, in their war, ritualistic and occupational dances. Stephen Mopope, well-known as a painter, is the group leader.

The Haitian singers, dancers and instrumentalists, who also will appear on each of the programs, arrived in Washington Monday, and presented a series of dances at the reception in the Carlton given by President-elect Elie Lescot, who has been the Haitian Minister in Washington. Their leader is Madame Lina Mathon-Fussman. Like the Indians, they passed the day in seeing the sights.

Ten boys from the School of Organic Education, at Fairhope, Ala., who will present English Morris dances, registered at the office of The Washington Post, and then passed the day in visiting the Capitol and other public buildings.

The cowboys from Anson and Stamford, Tex., are coming through by automobile, but their costumes arrived a day earlier. Representative Samuel Russell received them.

The Jarabe Dancers from Pasadena, exponents of Spanish colonial dances, were expected late last night, and Fred W. Colby, of Nashville, reached town with 24 dancers and singers from the Tennessee Mountains.

French choristers and Lithuanian dancers, both groups from Chicago, also were among yesterday's arrivals, and after registering at Festival headquarters, went about seeing the sights of Washington.

All of the 500 participants in the Festival are expected in town tonight for a dress rehearsal in Constitutional Hall.

Schram to Assist OPM's Director Of Priorities

Emil Schram, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation will take a temporary post as assistant director of the OPM priorities division, President Roosevelt announced yesterday.

He said the request for Schram's services came from Priorities Director Edward R. Stettinius, jr., and had been approved by Schram's superior officer, Jesse H. Jones, Federal Loan Administrator.

The new assistant will replace James F. Towers, executive vice president on leave from the New York engineers firm, Ford, Bacon, Davis, who has asked to return to his private business.

Schram will retain his status as RFC chairman, Mr. Roosevelt said.

Strike at Plants Making Cables For Planes Due to End Today

The strike which shut down two plants of the John A. Roebling Sons Co., since April 15 was expected to terminate this morning following acceptance yesterday by the disputants of an agreement proposed by the National Defense Mediation Board.

Representatives of the striking C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee left Washington by plane yesterday to present the terms to workers at the closed Roebling and Trenton (N. J.) plants.

The board meantime turned its attention to forthcoming meetings with C. I. O. Auto Workers Union and company officials of General Motors, where a threatened strike was postponed at the board's request. Board Vice Chairman William H. Davis yesterday asked the disputants to advance the conferences, scheduled for Friday, to tomorrow. No reason was given for the change of date.

Negotiators Look to Board

From Detroit, the Associated Press reported that negotiators in the 2-month-old General Motors dispute indicated that their hopes for settlement rest with the board, following a conference Monday in which Union President R. J. Thomas said "no progress whatsoever was made."

The board's settlement of the Roebling strike included:

A promise by the company not to seek to influence any employe against the union to cooperate in a prompt Labor Board election ordered on April 21, for collective bargaining.

A promise by the union not to coerce any employe to join the union against his will.

Agreement by the company to hear grievances presented by the S. W. O. C. for its own members.

Agreement to avoid provocation for further strikes, lockouts or stoppages.

Immediately following their signature to the settlement, management and union representatives joined in a resolution "expressing to the National Defense Mediation Board their appreciation of the board's work in effecting a settlement of this controversy in the interest of national defense."

Observers said that at the conclusion of the conferences an entirely changed attitude of conciliation and goodwill prevailed among both parties to the dispute. When the strike was first certified, on April 22, an atmosphere of bitterness and obduracy was evident, it was said.

The company employs 6,500 workers, and is the most important supplier of aircraft control cables for military planes.

Success story—The above chart, released yesterday by the National Defense Mediation Board, shows that of 18 strikes certified to the board, all but 4 have been ended, although in some cases the board is continuing a study of the issues involved to effect a final closure of the dispute. In four additional cases, certified before a strike was declared, the board has been thus far successful in averting the threatened stoppage.

President Hints He'll Name Byrnes

President Roosevelt yesterday indicated that he would appoint Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, one of his Democratic leaders in the Senate, to the Supreme Court within the next five weeks.

Told at his press conference that the people of South Carolina were wondering if he was going to fill the vacancy on the high court before the session ends five weeks hence, the President said he hoped the people of South Carolina would not be disappointed.

For some time Byrnes has rebeen reported slated to fill the vacancy created by the retirement of Associate Justice James C. McReynolds in January.

Deyber Heads Salvation Army Advisory Board

Victor B. Deyber was elected chairman of the Salvation Army citizens' advisory board at a meeting yesterday. Also elected were Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, vice chairman; Mrs. Florence Huff, secretary, and Thomas P. Hickman, treasurer.

Four new members were nominated to the board: H. Clifford Bangs, Thomas H. McNamara, Isaac McBride and Charles Dake.

The board approved a move to provide a lounge room for men of the armed forces and a gymnasium in the building at 606 E Street Northwest.

Conquests Make Nazis Vulnerable, Briton Says

Germany's increased conquests are spreading her military line thinner and making it easier for the eventual British victory, Sir Gerald Campbell, the British Minister, said last night.

Addressing delegates of the American Institute of Decorators quarterly convention at their banquet in the Shoreham Hotel, Sir Gerald asserted that Britain's position is becoming stronger through United States reinforcement and increased armament, while Germany is becoming more vulnerable through spreading of her forces.

The Nazi strategy now is concentrated in the "Battle of the Atlantic," through attempts to starve Britain by sinking her supplies from America, the Minister said. America, he added, has now become Britain's largest arsenal, greater even than her own empire.

Richardson Honored

Following Sir Gerald's talk, the institute's "Rorimer Medal" for outstanding service in the decorating field was presented by its donor, James Rorimer, to Frank Richardson, founder of the institute.

A wire was read from Elsie de Wolf, 85-year-old French refugee now in New York, who was voted honorary membership at Monday's session of the institute meeting.

At yesterday's afternoon session, Nathan Straus, U. S. H. A. Administrator, told the delegates that "Never has America been so home and building conscious as at present."

Defense Leads Boom

Defense housing has been an impetus to a general housing boom, he said, crediting "groups such as this" with much of the success of his agency's housing program.

He urged that the decorators "be vocal" in efforts to further the housing program and follow housing legislation for the Nation's and their own interests.

The delegates also visited the National Gallery of Art, the Freer Gallery and the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Mourice Morris, an old New England house brought here piece by piece and reconstructed at 2401 Kalorama Road Northwest.

The institute meeting will close today with conducted tours of Mount Vernon and Dumbarton Oaks and luncheon at the Arts Club.

1st Congressional Secretary Drafted

William E. Chandler, secretary to Representative Joseph R. Bryson (Democrat), of South Carolina, will be inducted into the Army in two weeks, the first Congressional secretary to go.

Chandler, 26, of 226 First Street Southeast, attended the George Washington University government and law schools. "He formerly worked in the War Department, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the Library of Congress.

Three years ago, when Chandler became Bryson's secretary at 23, he was known as the "baby secretary" because he was the youngest person in that capacity on Capitol Hill. In 1932 he had served as page boy in the South Carolina State Senate.

As local selection headquarters made public the names of ten registrants to be sworn in at Baltimore tomorrow, Gen. Albert L. Cox, Washington's draft chief, warned registrants about failing to notify their local board of a change of address. Cox reminded them that a penalty of five years' imprisonment, $10,000 fine, or both, was provided.

Registrants to be inducted tomorrow are:

Board 12—Joseph E. Bostic, William C. Brandford, Edward H. Henry, Warren Hooker, William H. Mason, Jr., Ammon L. Miller, Roland R. Milton, Winton Postell, John W. Scott and Milton V. Seraile.

Treatment Urged to Cut Draft Rejections

Medical treatment which would cut in half the 12 per cent of selective service registrants now being rejected because of curable defects was urged here yesterday at the Thirty-ninth Annual Conference of State and Territorial Health officers.

Lieut Col. Richard Eames, assistant to the chief medical director of the selective service system, was among speakers advocating establishment of such a program.

It was declared at the opening session yesterday, which was sponsored by the U. S. Public Health Service, that "50 per cent of cases now classified for limited military service could be fitted for full military duty."

Speaking on the subject during the afternoon meeting, Dr. Raymond A. Vonderlehr assistant surgeon general of the health service, suggested that men rejected for service be automatically referred to the health service for treatment.

Health officers from every State, as well as Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, and other territories, are in Washington attending the conference. Health problems in each area are discussed at the yearly meetings.

Men at Fort Meade to Shift From Garrison to Field Rations

By the Associated Press

Fort George G. Meade, Md., April 29.—Mess halls of the Twenty-ninth Division will change Thursday from "garrison rations" to the Army's newly approved "field rations," a system under which all men in the division will receive the same basic foods daly.

Division officers said the "field ration" system does not necessarily mean every man will have the same breakfast, dinner and supper, for the day's meals may be varied by individual mess sergeants.

It does mean, they said, that the quartermaster will issue standard amounts of the same basic foods each day throughout the division and unit mess sergeants may vary the menu as they see fit with these foods and with extras bought out of unit funds.

Under the "garrison ration" system unit mess sergeants have planned their own menus and ordered whatever amount of food they thought necessary. If at the end of the month they had not used their full allotment the unit received the difference in cash and this "ration savings" could be used for subsequent purchases of extra food.

The field ration menus will be based on an allowance of 44 cents a day per man. But two cents of this will be held out of funds for the planned meals and will go to unit funds for the mess sergeant to continue to supplement the menu as he desires or plan extras especially liked by his outfit.

Staple foods will be issued once a week, meats and perishable goods every three days. Bread, milk, ice and other things of this nature will be issued the day of use.

The 121st Engineers Regiment, from Washington, now has 490 selectees who are receiving preliminary training in the care and use of engineering equipment as well as basic military drill. All the present selectees are specialists. With the addition the regiment, commanded by Col. John W. Oehmann, has 865 men and 42 officers.

Second Lieut. R. E. Garner of Company F, Hyattsville unit of the 115th Infantry Regiment, has been transferred to the regiment's antitank company. He has been replaced by Second Lieut. J. P. Kemon.

District Mother Indicted On Charge of Beating Son

Mrs. Evelyn M. Stewart, 24, 2133 First Street Northwest, was indicted here yesterday on charges of cruelty to her 7-year-old son, Kenneth James Ford. She was alleged to have beaten the boy with a strap and then placed him in a tub of hot water.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Stewart's former husband, Kenneth Ford, Government health worker, asked Justice James W. Morris to award him custody of the boy. The child had been with his mother under a previous court decree.

Justice Morris will hear more evidence in the case next Wednesday. He forbade either parent to take the boy from Sibley Hospital until then.

Twenty-nine indictments accused Roland A. Williams, 19, colored, of a total of 53 housebreakings and larcenies. The police said Williams confessed breaking into 29 homes in the Northwest section.

The grand jurors presented a total of 64 indictments before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough.

The charges against those indicted were:

Manslaughter—Benjamin F. McCalif, 21, colored, for the death of John W. Curtis, 18, colored, when a speeding truck hit a pole near Morris Road and Hunter Place Southeast on April 3.

Abortion—Gorman M. Hendricks, 46.

Cruelty to child—Mrs. Evelyn M. Stewart, 24.

Forgery and passing a forgery—Clarence L. Haywood, 26; Gustave A. Liebsch, 47.

Perjury—John P. Hausmann, jr., 47.

Embezzlement from the Government—Emerson Waldo Browne, colored.

Unauthorized use of automobile—Henry Louis Smith, 24, colored; Thomas H. Brown, 21, colored; Kenneth Wilcher, 18, colored; Baron Dunmore Hall, 18, colored; Lawrence Mitchell, 29, colored.

Grand larceny—Kenneth Wilcher, 18, colored; Baron Dunmore Hall, 18, colored; Lawrence Mitchell, 29, colored; Nettie Kinnison, 24, colored; Angelo Burke Johnson, 19, colored; Elsie B. Johnson, 19, colored.

Receiving stolen property—Arthur B. Walker, 23, colored; Carl R. Austine, 24.

Housebreaking—Richard Thaxton, 20, colored; Melvin M. Tolson, 20, colored; Joseph A. Brown, 25, colored; Roland A. Williams, 19, colored (29 indictments); Andrew E. Henderson, 17.

Larceny—Thaxton, Tolson, Williams (24 indictments), Henderson.

Assault with dangerous weapon—Henderson, Alexander Watkins, 28, colored; Condoza Nelson, 24, colored; James Brice, 25, colored; Joseph H. Fant, 53; John R. Adams, 38; Everett Sinclair, 32, colored.

Robbery—Sonnie Pearson, 43, colored; Robert W. Thompson, 18, colored; Robert Jackson, 19, colored; Andrew Wolfert, 28; Irving Medlin, jr., 19; Charles Ellis, 34, colored; George T. Carr, 20, colored; Thomas N. Baker, 20, colored.

The grand jury dismissed these charges:

Rape—David Hawkins, 34, colored, and Thomas H. Brown, 41, colored.

Assault with dangerous weapon—Steve Manthon, 45, and Elmore P. Mudd, 27.

Drive Begun Here To Enlist Student Aid for Britain

American students, from kindergarten to post-graduates, can do much to relieve suffering in Britain, Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt said here yesterday.

Coming to Washington from New York to spur the "Young America Wants to Help" campaign for British war sufferers, the daughter-in-law of formed President Theodore Roosevelt reported that the drive is making good progress in schools and colleges throughout the country.

At present, she declared, the Washington drive is centering on private schools. "Young America Wants to Help," in corporation with its parent organization, the British War Relief Society, will sponsor the premier showing of "Fantasia" at the National Theater May 12.

Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, jr., is local chairman.

NOW IT'S LIGHTER! IT'S CRISPER! DON'T FAIL TO TRY THE IMPROVED "GOLDEN SOFT" KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

NOW YOU'LL ENJOY JOINING THE "REGULARS"

THE CEREAL that helps so many Americans keep "regular" is now a regular treat!

IT'S DOUBLY DELICIOUS! It's made of finer quality bran from one of the world's softest wheats. Bright as shreds of gold, the improved ALL-BRAN is now crisper, lighter, more delicate! Ask your grocer for it today.

For years you've known KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN as a natural laxative cereal. Now try it for its delicious taste as well!

Kellogg grain buyers have discovered an extra-soft, extra-delicate wheat that is used for the finest pastry flours. And from this special grain comes a bran of exceptional quality.

Put through Kellogg's cooking and toasting ovens, this bran came out bright as shreds of gold, and lighter, crisper, more delicious than any we had used in 20 years of making ALL-BRAN.

And now the improved and more delicious ALL-BRAN is at your grocer's. If you or other members of your family are troubled with constipation due to lack of proper "bulk" in the diet, try this better ALL-BRAN. It is just as effective as ever—but doubly delicious. But be sure to eat it regularly; it takes a little time for best results. Make ALL-BRAN your steady breakfast cereal, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation due to lack of "bulk."

ALL-BRAN is made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. It is sold by grocers and served in restaurants everywhere. Ask for it today.

FROM ONE OF THE WORLD'S SOFTEST WHEATS

THE BRAN used in the improved "golden soft" ALL-BRAN comes from a special wheat that is grown for the finest and most expensive pastry flours. Now ALL-BRAN is doubly delicious! Crisper! More delicate! Try it today.

U. S. Convoys Mean Sinkings, Nazis Say

By the United Press

Berlin, April 29.—The German press warned the United States today that any attempt to convoy or carry war supplies to Britain can result only in the "rapid sinking of American ships," and simultaneously stepped up her general offensive against the British Empire.

"The blockade of German weapons is waiting on all routes between America and England," said the influential Deutsch Algemeine Zeitung, after warning that any American attempt to ensure shipments to Britain would meet with disaster.

Regarding the extension of the American neutrality patrol zone the newspaper said:

"Americans would do well to harbor no illusions. With or without the use of their warships, traveling in convoys or alone, all war deliveries fundamentally are 'good for sinking'."

Other developments along the war and diplomatic fronts reported here included:

1. The sinking of 18,600 tons of Allied shipping in Greek waters in a continuation of bombing of imperial forces fleeing from Greece.

2. An advance by German and Italian troops deep into British territory on the Egyptian frontier south of Salum in the Oxis drive toward the Suez Canal.

3. Annihilating aerial bombardments of Plymouth and other British objectives and heavy shelling of English soil by "Big Berthas" on the French coast. A clash between German and British speedboats in which several of the British craft were damaged and forced to flee.

4. Rumors that President Ismet Inonu of Turkey might come to Berlin, the ostensible implication being closer ties between Germany and Britain's Near East ally.

5. A sudden burst of denunciation aimed at Switzerland.

6. A speech by Adolf Hitler, back from Balkan field headquarters, before 9,000 officers of the German armed forces, in which he was said to have discussed their duties and tasks.

The daily war communique said that in the mopping up of the Peloponnesus and conclusion of the campaign in Greece, German troops had reached Tripolis in the middle of the Peninsula and were driving on southward, threatening last remnants of British and Greeks embarking for Crete.

German sources said that before encountering the British speed boats the German vessels had attacked a British convoy with torpedoes, sinking three ships. Two of the ships were of 3,000 tons and the other of 3,500 tons.

In air fights over the English Channel, during the long-range bombardment of Dover, Nazi fighters shot down three Spitfires near the French coast and two British Bristol Blenheim bombers in mid-channel within a half hour around noon, informed Nazis said.

Last night, the high command said, German bombers made a "destructive attack" on Plymouth and made other raids on Portsmouth, Great Yarmouth, the Scottish east coast and a number of military objectives in interior England.

East of Dundee and southeast of Lowestoft two merchant ships totaling 10,000 tons were said to have been destroyed by bombs.

The high command communique reported a successful attack on the port and air field of La Valetta, Malta, yesterday.

"Very heavy caliber bombs struck a cruiser of the Southampton Class amidships," it said. "An oil depot and a merchant ship were set fire and other bomb hits were scored on government shipyards and docks.

Numerous bombs were said to have fallen and exploded among grounded planes at night airdromes in southwest England Monday night.

(In Cairo, British headquarters announced that evacuation of the British Expeditionary Force from Greece still was "continuing" late today.)

German bombers were credited with sinking a number of small vessels, increasing the volume of transports sunk in Greek waters to 305,600 tons and raising the number of badly damaged transports to 87.

Informants said that German parachute troops who lauded in Corinth seized 30 antiaircraft guns and 72 British trucks in good condition. They said two separate battle operations were carried out, one group undertaking a rear attack on a strong defense guard stationed on the south bank of the Corinth Canal and another pursuing Greek and British forces in the Peloponnesus.

'Dream' Airport Still Cloud of Dust

since then, and Wendell Willkie landed there on one occasion.

However, it wasn't until April 15 that the airlines and CAA itself could get into the terminal building to begin installing ticket booths, radio apparatus, weather equipment and other things necessary to the safe and orderly operation of an airport.

The Pennsylvania-Central Airlines already has moved stenographers and other employes into its space in the terminal building, and Eastern Airlines and American Airlines are expected to do likewise in the near future.

John Groves, who was named manager of the airport in mid-March, said last night that the opening of the airport had now been set for early in June.

"I feel very sure we are going to make it," he said.

The reason President Roosevelt saw a cloud of dust as he drove past the airport was that WPA workers won't be turned loose on the landscaping until the construction work and the roads are finished.

Russia Forbids Arms Shipments

opinion that Russia's ban on the transportation of material was "probably more window dressing than anything else."

They indicated, however, that "it might be Russia's answer to Germany for occupation of Balkan countries," since Russia's major exports of war materials in the past have been going to Germany and this move might cut off supplies needed by the senior Axis partner.

Most observers did not think that the move would have any tendency to stop shipments of supplies from Japan to Germany, since "Russia's transportation system is so bad" it seldom is used by the Japanese.

Radio Warns Russians

London, April 29 (INS).—Moscow's official radio tonight warned the Soviet Union that it must be prepared for a possible attack, according to a broadcast picked up by the British Broadcasting Corporation.

After a long delay, said the B. B. C., controlled newspapers in Moscow published the recent speech of Prime Minister Churchill, in which the Briton warned that Germany aimed to attack the oil fields of the Caucasus and wheat plains of the Ukraine. But, according to B. B. C., "all references to Hitler's designs on Russia were cut out."

The Moscow broadcast as relayed by the London radio said:

"The Soviet people will remember Stalin's warning not to stop at the point which has been reached. It is necessary to be in a state of readiness, even to a state of mobilization."

Cites Nazi Difficulties

Significantly, the Moscow radio also pointed to the difficulties confronting Germany in the Eastern Mediterranean. Moscow, according to the B. B. C., said:

"Despite the loss of their position in Greece, the situation of the British in the eastern Mediterranean remains stable.

"An attack against Egypt through the western desert still provides enormous difficulties, while the Red Sea secures supplies for the British army and the transport of reinforcements."

B. B. C. also quoted the publication of Red Fleet, organ of the Soviet navy, as saying that extension of the United States neutrality patrol "is already affecting the position in the Atlantic.

"The American patrol also will facilitate considerably plans of the British fleet in the blockade of the eastern approaches to the European and African continents."

Soviet Transshipment Ban Called Empty Gesture

A report from Moscow last night that Russia henceforth will prohibit shipment of war materials through the Soviet Union was variously regarded in Washington as an empty gesture and as evidence of a widening breach between Moscow and Berlin.

Some well-informed circles expressed conviction that the decree was designed to impress the democracies with the idea that Russia is not cooperating closely with the Axis. It was pointed out that such materials as listed in the decree (munitions, aircraft parts and accessories, machine tools for making munitions, explosives and poisons) are not now being shipped across Russia.

All the items listed are under export control from this country, requiring special license, and have not been shipped from here to Russia in recent months. Neither are any of the goods being exchanged between Germany and Japan by way of Russia, the New York Herald Tribune service pointed out.

One official, the United Press reported, said the decree raised the question whether Russia, convinced that she may be in danger of external military attack, is getting in a state of readiness. It has been reported that one of Germany's next moves may be into the Russian Ukraine, the Soviet "bread basket."

The new Chinese Foreign Minister, Dr. Quo Tai-Chi, conferred yesterday with President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull, and said afterward that Moscow had assured his government that the recently-signed Russo-Japanese non-aggression treaty would not alter the Russian attitude toward China, which has been one of helpfulness.

Fascist Journalist Calls Switzerland British Spy Center

Rome, April 29 (AP).—Switzerland was pictured tonight as an anti-Axis hotbed of British espionage by the prominent Fascist journalist, Ezio Maria Gray, who raised the question whether that neutral country should be allowed to exist in her present form in Axis-dominated Europe.

"Partisanship is not limited to the more or less innocuous manifestations of the press," Gray wrote in the Gazzetta del Popolo at Turin. "Festival processions in some cities flaunted comic figures vulgarly offensive, especially to Italy."

"A regular center of British espionage which is scarcely masked" has been established near the Italian border in Switzerland, the writer charged.

Should the Swiss attitude continue, Gray said, the "possibility or advisability of her further collaborative usefulness in the Europe of tomorrow" would be "placed on the agenda of definitive continental rearrangement."

STEEL

...for the arsenals of democracy

THE call of defense has come to Timken's mile-long steel plant and it is producing now as it never has before. Day after day, night after night, tons of special electric alloy steel pour forth to be fed into the arsenals of democracy.

Three great electric furnaces have already been added to those melting this special alloy steel. Two are in operation now pouring out steel for defense; a third will be in operation this month.

Production will then be increased from 15,000 tons a month to 27,000 tons a month. Timken is the world's second largest manufacturer of electric furnace steel.

Much of this steel, as in peace time, will be used in tapered roller bearings; but America needs millions more of these bearings now because they are the heart of America's war machines, and of practically every machine tool used in the manufacture of these war machines.

A great deal of this Timken Alloy Steel will be made into such vital mechanical parts as crank shafts and connecting rods in the motors of bombers and pursuit ships; in the propeller hubs and vital fuselage parts of all aircraft. It will be turned into shafts, into important elements of truck and tank motors, into machine guns, trench mortars and cannon.

Timken's steel plant, like its bearing works, is rolling onward for national defense. No manufacturer of war machinery will have to wait for Timken Steel or Timken Bearings.

Aosta's Last Stand

With the fall of Dessye, the Italians have lost their last remaining stronghold in Ethiopia. Part of the Duke of Aosta's sadly diminished army is said to be trying to reach Gondar and Jimma in the west, where sporadic and isolated resistance by small Italian units continues. But the end of the war in East Africa is now in sight, a development which has its encouraging possibilities for the British, who can well use their East Africa forces for the strengthening of their defenses in Egypt.

One region in East Africa is still outside their control, however. That is French Somaliland, which fronts the Red Sea and controls the terminus of the railroad from Addis Ababa. In view of the Vichy government's ambiguous attitude toward the Axis, the British cannot be certain that Jibuti, if left in the hands of pro-Vichy officials, might not sooner or later become the center of German intrigue. This the British cannot afford to see happen. Furthermore, when the rainy season begins, the railroad will be the only means by which the British forces in East Africa can speedily be brought out. No wonder, then, that British troops (cooperating, it is said, with "Free French" forces) are reported to be putting pressure on French Somaliland.

This pressure, Vichy itself admits, has thus far only taken the form of propaganda urging the French troops in the colony to join the De Gaullist movement. But the propaganda is powerfully directed. For the De Gaullist leader in that area happens to be Gen. Le Gentilhomme, former commander at Jibuti. Accordingly Vichy is becoming disturbed and hints darkly of resistance, even of going to war against the British if the attempt is made to sever the connection between French Somaliland and Vichy by force. Such a possibility is to be discounted unless the Vichy leaders are already prepared to give way to Hitler's demand for complete collaboration and are only seeking an excuse to justify such action.

Anyway, the British must risk the possibility of a clash with Vichy. For it has become of paramount importance to the British to have the unhindered use of the Addis Ababa-Jibuti Railway at this time and to prevent French Somaliland from becoming a spearhead through which the British victory in East Africa can be made nugatory.

Railway Improvement

The railroads both as an investment and as a contributor to defense are showing up well. Last year net railway operating income for Class 1 roads increased 16 per cent compared with the preceding year, and brought an average return of 2.6 per cent on property investment. During the first two months of the present year, earnings amounted to 4.27 per cent on property investment (on an annual basis), compared with 2.79 per cent in the first two months of 1940, and 3.79 per cent in the corresponding period of 1930. With net earnings rising, and further increases expected, the immediate outlook is thus extremely bright. Optimism regarding earnings prospects is further heightened because the roads are not subject to excess profits taxes. These are applicable only to earnings in excess of 8 per cent of invested capital. The fly in the ointment, however, is that it has required a national emergency of unprecedented character to produce modest returns on capital investment. When the country returns to a more normal state of economic activity, the problem of inadequate railway revenues will doubtless again bring demands for remedial action.

Of even more interest at this time is that, in spite of the call on the railroads, no transportation shortages have developed. During the present year, to be sure, the ability of the roads to meet emergency transportation needs will be severely tested. For not only will they be called upon to handle an expected increase in shipments; they must take care of tonnage diverted from ships to trains by transfer of vessels from coastal and intercoastal traffic to overseas service. The roads had over 2,250,000 freight cars and over 61,000 locomotives when we entered World War I. Today they have about 1,600,000 freight cars and fewer than 40,000 locomotives. However, Mr. Ralph Budd, transportation member of the Defense Commission, points out that since 1923 $9,500,000,000 has been spent on rehabilitating and improving the railway plant. Locomotives are speedier and have increased drawing power, while freight cars have a greatly increased carrying capacity. Furthermore, new equipment is coming rapidly into use, and this, it is believed, will enable the roads to keep abreast of current needs. Altogether the railroad picture looks more satisfactory than it has been in years.

'Comes In The Light'

The name of an almost forgotten Victorian poet has suddenly blazed into the consciousness of the whole English-speaking world by virtue of the quotation of eight of his lines in Sunday's speech by the British Prime Minister. It proves once more the ancient platitude that poetry is indeed deathless. Whether those eight lines came spontaneously to Mr. Churchill's tongue, or whether by some happy circumstance he stumbled upon them, we must wait to know. But eight lines better suited to convey the message that was in Mr. Churchill's mind and the hopes that are in the hearts of his countrymen would be well-nigh impossible to find.

The quotation was apt in still another sense. Arthur Hugh Clough was a poet who had ties on both sides of the Atlantic. He had spent part of his childhood at Charleston, S. C., where his father was in business, and some of his early manhood in New England at the invitation of Emerson. Clough was at Oxford at the height of the Tractarian movement, and was profoundly influenced by it, though the influence was wholly negative, and to it has been ascribed his later religious skepticism. At Balliol College his close friends included Benjamin Jowett and Matthew Arnold. Arnold, especially, admired him, and it was on Clough's premature death at 42 that Arnold wrote his monody, "Thyrsis." It was to some extent through Arnold's influence that Clough's infrequent verses were read with close attention by other poets of his own day, though more perhaps for their metrical experiments than for their content. To the rest of the reading public he was better known for his revision of Dryden's translation of Plutarch. Nevertheless, the poem, "Say Not the Struggle Naught Availeth," from which Mr. Churchill quoted, is his finest single work.

Nothing could better attest the special power of poetry to move the soul than this tendency of public men to resort to it in moments of great crisis. But perhaps it is because the English have produced so much great poetry that they seem even more susceptible to its influences than other peoples. How many times, and with what fervor, have the metaphors which Shakespeare puts into the mouth of John of Gaunt been quoted since the Battle of Britain began. About ten years ago that grim Yorkshireman, Philip Snowden, all but resolved a budgetary governmental crisis merely by quoting four lines from an ode by Swinburne. The lines are even appropriate now:

> All our past proclaims our future,
> Shakespeare's heart and Nelson's hand:
> Come the world against her, England yet shall stand!

Mr. Roosevelt on various occasions has quoted Shakespeare, Wordsworth and, as Mr. Churchill reminds us, Longfellow. But Mr. Churchill, himself one of the great masters of the political uses of rhetoric, seems so far to be the more effective.

Business Loans

The United States Chamber of Commerce is staging its annual meeting at a time when business activity is rising rapidly under the impetus of defense orders. One sign is the rise of commercial loans by the banks to the highest level in nearly a decade. This is characterized by the Federal Reserve authorities as "the most striking banking development in recent months." Between the end of August, when the upturn became pronounced as the defense program got under way, to the middle of April member banks of the Federal Reserve system in 101 leading cities reported an increase of over $1,000,000,000 in commercial loans.

This growth has been greatly assisted by two circumstances. One is the service done by the Emergency Plant Facilities Contracts under which the Government promises to repay manufacturers for the cost of plants erected for defense purposes. The other circumstance is the passage of legislation permitting borrowing on the assignment of Government contracts. A special survey by the American Bankers Association shows that about one-fourth of the defense loans made by 196 large commercial banks were made on assignment of Government contracts as collateral, mostly on the basis of these Emergency Plant Facilities Contracts. It was further brought out that nearly 90 per cent of the defense loans reported in the A. B. A. survey were used for working-capital purposes. Indicative of the changing character of so-called "commercial" loans is the fact that a number of large loans are stated to have been made by banks to finance defense housing and cantonment construction. However, the expansion of loans is due not only to the demands from industries engaged on defense work. It is due as well to the increased credit needs of nondefense businesses feeling the effect of general industrial expansion.

The recent marked increase in commercial loans has not prevented the banks from adding concurrently to their holdings of Government securities. In the case of reporting member banks these holdings rose by $1,032,000,000 during the first three and a half months of this year, following an increase of $1,350,000,000 for the full year 1940. This is not at all surprising in view of the immense volume of idle banking reserves. On April 23 excess reserves of all member banks were estimated at approximately $5,760,000,000, and that is considerably lower than they have been during the past year. There is no need to worry, therefore, about the ability of the banks to provide the funds needed both by industry and Government for defense purposes. The real danger is that the abundance of idle funds will encourage too great reliance upon the banks to finance Government needs when wise fiscal policy calls for maximum sales of bonds to individuals to be paid for from savings.

Back To Work

Resumption of work in the coal fields ends a strike which constituted the most serious threat so far to our defense program. Any further delay might well have been disastrous. When the walkout began, on April 1, the steel companies had relatively large reserves of coal and coke on hand, but in the last week or so they have run so low that at least 20 blast furnaces have had to be closed down. What this means in steel output is apparent from the latest figures of ingot production. From a rate of 99.2 per cent of capacity, ingot production is currently down to 94.3 per cent, the difference being equal to about 80,000 tons of steel. Yet our machine shops, our shipyards, and our arsenals need all the steel they can get, certainly more than the furnaces are turning out. That lag can never be made up, but will add to the time we have lost from labor stoppages in embarking upon our all-out effort, which was begun tardily, anyway.

The galling part of the coal trouble is that work could have been resumed a week ago just as conveniently as now. Between the operators of the Northern mines and the U. M. W. a new understanding on wages had been arrived at, but the U. M. W. still could not win agreement with the operators of the Southern mines, with the result that the U. M. W. kept all the men out. The Southern operators had been balking basically at a proposed wiping-out of the differential which has hitherto been in effect between Northern and Southern mines. All that the President proposed was that the men should go back to work, and that the unsettled problems, including the differential, be remitted to the negotiators. This is what the Southern operators, following the example of the U. M. W., have now accepted, and the mine-opening terms leave the differential still in effect, though the Southern operators have agreed to boost the basic rate, as the Northern operators had already done. $1 a day.

The differential is a thorny problem. But in common sense the pros and the cons cannot be argued against the background of idle mines which threatened, in the words of Edward F. McGrady, special labor consultant of the War Department, a complete paralysis of our national effort. The times are too serious for any such luxury. The coal strike may have degenerated into an intermanagement feud, but it will put an impetus back of the forces in Congress which are seeking to pass new industrial legislation which shall protect the defense program from interruption without at the same time being repressive of the rights of labor. It is time we became conscious that in the safeguarding of our liberties every section of the community must put its duties above its rights.

Virginia To England

Against a background of box and yew, a bridal wreath is blooming today in the Old Dominion, and the formal gardens which had their inspiration in England are on show this week to help sustain a newer England whose own gardens have been plowed under to grow food. For the proceeds of the Garden Club Tours of Virginia will be donated to Bundles for Britain, and so, in a way, a debt will be paid. In Williamsburg, in Albemarle, in the Northern Neck, in Alexandria, Americans will renew their spirit on walks and terraces that were conceived in ancestral minds. This year they will have the satisfaction of knowing that because of their visit a reminder will go back across the water that the seed which England gave to America was planted in fertile ground.

WHAT NURSE SAID

Down by the sycamores
She said she found me,
The brook flowing past the tall
Prairie-grass round me,
Sky bending with the wind
Blue round my head.
She was passing—heard a cry—
And there I was, she said.

Nothing of earth or air—
Rainbow—or thunder—
Compares with a sycamore
To fill me with wonder!

War Of Machines

Whenever the United States gets down to serious business in constructing the machinery of defense, no nation, or group of nations, can equal our productive power. This war is not a war of men, but rather one of machines. We, who devised and developed the mass production methods, can excel the world with our genius to produce.

Give us arms, give us heavier tanks, greater bombers and fighting planes, and the united spirit of America in support of England, with two planes, tanks and guns for every one that Hitler can produce, the tide will turn the other way, and the right of freemen, wherever they are, will be assured. Let's get serious and be about our business of aiding those who believe in the right of people to live according to the conscience of humanity.

Of Immigration

I was interested in the suggestion in a letter in Saturday's Post that we should "open the door to immigration." At a time like this, when we have more trouble within our boundaries than we can take care of, more mouths than we can feed properly and more uprisings among our working people than can be coped with successfully, such a suggestion is certainly idiotic to say the least. The United States is taking on too much of other people's troubles already without trying to be a haven for the whole world.

The Lone Eagle

In 1927 a young American aviator electrified his countrymen by accomplishing the hitherto impossible and demonstrating that the human spirit can overcome tremendous obstacles regardless of the odds.

In 1941 the same man preaches that the British Empire and 130,000,000 Americans cannot prevail against Hitler and 80,000,000 Germans because the odds are too great.

Whatever the cause, this incredible change represents a great human tragedy.

That the spirit he exemplified in 1927 is the true symbol of America no one will doubt.

Preparedness Parades

I have just completed one of 26 trips across this beautiful country (San Francisco to Washington). It is quite evident that most of our people do not realize what a crisis we as a whole face. May I suggest that a campaign of preparedness in the form of parades be launched in every city and town in the country, such as were held in 1916.

Of A Female Draft

Just how does Mrs. Roosevelt, with her plan for saving America by making girls serve a year of compulsory training, propose to train our young womanhood in the tasks that would greatly benefit our employment problem in wartime? Does she want our girls banded together in female youth organizations and placed in training camps, such as are the Nazi women? Perhaps she would like the Government to conscript them, and then force our hospitals and industries to train these girls in all the intricate details of each particular job. However she would have it done, you cannot make a good graduate nurse roll on an assembly line as you can make a machine. In training them in any industry, there is bound to be a loss of speed and efficiency during the training period. It is true that separate training schools could be built, but that would have to be at Government expense, thus increasing greatly our national debt, that has already gone high above the comprehension of almost every man in America.

I am afraid that until there is an acute shortage of young manhood eligible for cannon fodder, our girls will have to do without their $21 a month and help Uncle Sam in the best way possible at their own expense.

Board Of Inquiry

If, as Westbrook Pegler has so often asserted, there are a lot of racketeers, communists, and other undesirables among the ranks of the labor leaders, why can't there be a board of inquiry formed to work in conjunction with the NLRB to pass upon the character and qualifications of such leaders before they are entrusted with so responsible a position?

That they wield tremendous power is evidenced by the current strikes which are delaying critical defense production, and it does not seem at all out of line that a man who sets himself up as an arbiter of the welfare of other people should be willing to undergo a searching inquiry into his right to assume so important a function. Any man not measuring up to the required standards would thus be eliminated as a leader of labor. This would undoubtedly be a benefit to the entire Nation.

It seems to me as an innocent bystander and an eligible for conscription that the first major battle this country must fight in the defense of democracy will be on our own home grounds. I can't think of a better start than the purge of some of the so-called "labor leaders."

Boston's Transcript

"Throughout its long life the (Boston Evening) Transcript, under a series of eminent editors, was a newspaper of the highest literary and intellectual distinction. . . . The fact that such journals . . . cannot survive in such a civilization as this one is a reproach not to them but to the civilization." So said an editorial, "Boston Transcript," in The Post of April 26.

Nonsense! The Transcript failed to survive because it ceased to be "a newspaper of the highest literary and intellectual distinction." Its old readers died off, and their children found better local news coverage in the Boston Globe and Traveler, better national and international coverage in The Christian Science Monitor and New York Times, better musical, dramatic, art and literary departments in magazines.

District Of Columbia Art Projects

The Citizens' Advisory Committee of the District of Columbia Art Projects, a group of citizens representing a large number of other interested citizens in all walks of life, desires to express vigorous disapproval of proposals to curtail the District Work Projects Administration by certifying only so-called construction projects.

If the District of Columbia Arts Projects—art, music and writers—are eliminated, more than 100 community institutions, serving the citizens of the District in an educational or welfare capacity or both, will lose services that are extremely important to them. These services are important in the light of internal or home defense.

We feel we have a right to speak out against the proposed dismantling of these projects because of the wholehearted support accorded our voluntary defense of both the workers and their right to work. We have the support of a great many groups of citizens and service organizations. Many of these have written letters to the Citizens Advisory Committee expressing their views. They are 100 per cent against abandonment of the so-called cultural WPA projects, believing these community services are vital home defenses.

We are listing below three reasons which alone we believe to be sufficient to demonstrate why the art, music and writers projects should be maintained:

1. These projects give needed employment to trained groups of workers, who are equipped to perform valuable work in connection with the national defense in the District.

2. One hundred and four institutions in the District will lose teaching and other services if these projects are abandoned.

3. The WPA music project alone reaches an average of 22,000 participants each month. These activities include music appreciation classes, instrumental classes in public schools, choral singing groups, children's and adult orchestra, and bands.

Does the public realize that the loss of these units by the community and loss of jobs by the workers means a lowering of morale in the District at a time when it is badly needed? If these projects are abandoned by the WPA, who is going to conduct cultural training for the children involved? Are the parents of these children willing to accept for them a full stomach as the only kind of food to which they are entitled?

At slight expense to the District government, thousands of dollars of Federal money for the services of the arts and music and writers projects have been made available to the District. The advisory committee desires to point out to the citizens of the District that for every dollar the District contributes, the Federal Government puts in three. The Federal Government must necessarily expect support of the work by the District.

It would be in most cases impractical, in many cases impossible, and in all cases unsound, to try to retain these professional workers on the construction projects. Furthermore, a large percentage of the workers involved are not considered employable by commercial firms. Does anyone think any professional man or woman who has to accept public relief rather than to continue working along lines to which they have been trained is a national benefit?

For the District Commissioners and Congress to fail to certify these projects is to destroy confidence in democracy's ability to provide a better way of life.

HARMON NICODEMUS,
Chairman Citizens' Advisory Committee.

Golden Star Cafe

The Golden Star Cafe and Pool Hall no longer holds out nightly promise of gain to the gamblers of San Diego's Chinatown. The law has demolished it. There, however, for two epicurean weeks I displayed my charms from behind a green baize Twenty-One counter and ate as only kings and gods are reported to eat. Thirty magnificent feasts a week—five a day—went with my $10 per check, and the knowledge that I shall never find such food again has left me a sad and embittered girl.

Although I have tried to forget, visions of bright, pink-fleshed shrimps, nested in abundant hills of flaky rice; of round, tender slices of aromatic roast pork, ranged one upon another in long green dishes; of supposedly ordinary garden chickens, spiced and flavored to taste like something out of a gourmet's dream; of the rice cakes, crisp and thin; the golden almond cookies, the powdery anise biscuits; visions of all these, and more, rise before my eyes and fill me with a longing that your fine Connecticut Avenue roast-beef-and-brown-gravy restaurants can never satisfy.

Since illicit gaming, not food, occupied the interest of San Diego's police force, the Golden Star necessarily operated under a cloud of municipal disapproval. This burst finally, letting fall such a torrent as to sweep the object of its fury and my gastronomic delight quite away.

My landlady viewed the police proceedings with malicious satisfaction; she couldn't get used to the idea of a sweet, pretty young girl (as she described me) working all night in an Oriental gambling hell (as she described the Golden Star). Her name for the place was, I suppose, justified.

The Golden Star was boarded off into three big rooms—a kitchen, a pool hall and a game room. My Twenty-One counter was in the pool hall, which faced the street and served as a none-too-effective blind for the real business. As for the "cafe" part of the name, that was a mere euphemism. It should have been just plain kitchen, since nobody ate but the employes. They, however, feasted—the word for once is justified—and I (can I ever forget it) was one of them.

I worked from 3 till midnight, running the dice game for the patrons who hadn't the wherewithal for serious gambling in the back room. They paid me 10 cents for a game and could win up to 40 cents in tobacco and candy.

Generally I didn't mention the Golden Star to the respectable middle-age souls in my rooming house. I knew they'd be either awed or horrified, and I am constitutionally unfitted to cope with either attitude. The food angle wouldn't have helped either, as chicken fricassee of a Sunday was to them the ideal.

For myself, however, I had a warm enthusiasm for the job and have no regrets for its illegal nature. During my two weeks there we had three raids—or so they called them. On each occasion a pair of plain-clothes men invaded the premises and gawked at the pool tables while Charlie, the boss, threw the loose money into white cotton sacks and hid them under my counter. After that they gave the back room a languid glance, helped themselves to our best cigars and departed, all this without a word.

I was beginning to suspect that these visitations were aimed more at good tobacco than law enforcement, but apparently the boys were just warming up for the pinch. On the fourth trip they copped Charlie and took him to jail—along with a handful of cigars.

People asked me if I didn't have trouble handling those tough men—gambling and drinking and all—and no one quite believed me when I denied having difficulties. Rotund Oriental Charlie, all courtesy and solicitude, shared the fears of my disapproving acquaintances. He always protected me against any possible unpleasantness and if a customer hung overlong about my stand, he'd make some excuse to get the loiterer away. Then he'd come back and ask, "He say bad to you? Soon you tell, I throw out!" But Charlie needn't have worried; nobody ever bothered me. They did want to give me presents, though, and I was hard put to it to refuse without giving offense. Little George Yee, No. 2 boy around the shop, came in one day with some swatches—gorgeous, vivid silks—and asked me to say which pattern I preferred so that he could bring me a length of it for a dress. It took some effort to reject that gift.

But food—that was a legitimate part of my salary and I never refused anything to eat. The meals more than made up for the insignificance of my salary. Compared with those banquets, my own grandmothers' cooking is poor stuff. Just to remember that lobster, that chicken, swimming in undreamed-of sauce, is to render the best of Western delicacies dull and tasteless. And the shrimps—those lovely, delicate little shrimps! There is no food like Chinese food, and I don't mean chop suey.

When I arrived for work at 3 each day, George Yee would bring in a steaming platter of rice and pepper steak, and while I ate he'd pass the time teaching me how to get the dice off the board and into the cup without using the fingers. I became wonderfully proficient after a week's application, and I expect this accomplishment to come in handy some day.

Aside from a little trick of holding a couple of dice in the crook of the little finger, which accounted for one night's uprush of winnings, there was very little cheating, and what little there was was practiced by the floater population. The bulk of the steady patronage was made up of very cheerful, very polite, oldish businessmen who lived right on the block—we were located in the exact center of Chinatown. The gamblers' wives and children, who sat and played in front of the nearby dwellings, looked chubby and well-to-do. The Golden Star apparently took no food out of their mouths, and I know that nothing, anywhere, will ever put better food into mine. BROOKE STEWART.

Reply To Lindbergh

By Ernest K. Lindley.

One Famous Flyer Answers Another

NAME-CALLING will not sway Lindbergh and probably will have little effect on most American citizens who share his views.

LINDLEY

Apart from the fringe of Nazis, Communists and Fascist sympathizers, the American people are overwhelmingly dedicated to the defense of the United States and its institutions. Every poll bears this out, and so does the attitude of Congress toward appropriations for national defense.

The real question on which opinion is divided, or spread out, is where the defense of the United States can best be made. The arguments advanced by Lindbergh and his comrades are chiefly military. Official spokesmen for the Administration have done a poor job of explaining the military and naval strategy which lies behind the President's foreign policy. This task has been performed chiefly by journalists.

One of the most impressive replies to Lindbergh is Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky's in the May issue of the American Mercury. Seversky is one of the world's foremost designers and builders of airplanes. He has been a combat pilot and is a student and prophet of the strategy and tactics of air warfare.

SEVERSKY may be too much of an air power enthusiast to be accepted as an authority on warfare today by our leading military and naval experts. But Lindbergh's only claim to expertness comes from his knowledge of aviation—and it has been widely assumed and asserted that he speaks for other apostles of air power. But now comes Seversky, with a far wider acquaintance with military aviation, both in practice and in theory, to blast every one of Lindbergh's principal tenets.

Lindbergh's main contentions on the strategic or technical side have been:

1. That Great Britain cannot win, even with American aid.

2. That by shipping large quantities of weapons to Britain we are "depleting" our own forces and weakening our security.

3. That, with defensive measures on this side of the oceans, the United States can become and remain impregnable.

SEVERSKY replies, bluntly, that Lindbergh "has failed to grasp the full potentialities of air power; he has failed to understand the revolution in warfare that it is forcing relentlessly upon the world, the United States included." He is amazed that anyone so close to aviation as Lindbergh could remain "so profoundly unaware" of the growth of air power and its implications, "even if he has not himself designed, built or fought in warplanes."

To Argument No. 1, Seversky answers that England not only has a chance of winning, but that "given full material backing of the United States, it has only a minor chance of not winning." The ultimate victory, he is convinced, will lie on the side of superior air power. The British Empire and the United States "add up to an aviation potential decisively outweighing Germany's, even with a conquered Europe in tow."

The German area "will be more and more plagued by shortages of critical materials; it will be under continuous and growing attack by enemy aviation, operating with increasingly undernourished labor working in large part sullenly under coercion."

THE ANGLO - AMERICAN bloc, on the contrary, has access to materials scattered all over the world. In most of its area voluntary and well-fed labor is working under peaceful conditions.

So, Seversky concludes: "Equality in air power for the Anglo-American bloc is already within sight, and rapid establishment of supremacy seems in the cards."

He derides Lindbergh's contention that Germany and the United States are "natural air powers" while England is not. He reminds us that "all nations are surrounded by air." And he cites Britain's superiority in quality, especially in fighter planes and pilots, and the rise of its productive tempo as being quite as impressive as Germany's early lead in the air race.

If Germany, with its French and Norwegian bases, half surrounds England, Germany itself is under siege. And the better employment of aviation, Seversky asserts, is the best line of counter-attack on the submarines and bombing planes which threaten to cut the British life line to North America.

TO LINDBERGH's second argument, Seversky replies that the very process of building for Britain fortifies our own strength. It is far more important to have huge capacity to produce than to pile up planes which rapidly grow obsolete. Almost everything we have now, he says, will be out of date and useless in the kind of air war we may have to tackle.

To Argument No. 3, he replies simply that invasion is an "obsolescent concept." Not invasion, but "total destruction," is the aim of air power. And if the destruction is, in fact, great, invasion can follow in due course.

Lindbergh's great miscalculation here, according to Seversky, is in assuming that aviation is not going to advance much further. He suggests that Lindbergh's inability to see ahead may be due to the healthy respect for the ocean he acquired in the 33-hour flight to Paris which made him famous. But the Atlantic already has been narrowed to eight hours or less.

To "practical men in the aviation industry," Seversky says, military aircraft with a range of 25,000 miles are feasible within the predictable future—in five years at the outside. It is only a matter of a short time until the United States will be almost as vulnerable to air attack from Europe as England is now.

In other words, according to Seversky, the young eagle has become something of an old fogy.

Defense Needs Too Pressing For Strikes, Martin Asserts

By the Associated Press

Trenton, N. J., April 29.—Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said today "the need for an invincible national defense is too great, too vital, too pressing, for us to lose a single day in any strike."

"Demand the truth about the strikes in the defense industries," Martin declared in a speech for delivery at a luncheon honoring the four Republican woman members of the New Jersey Assembly.

"It is a waste of time to argue about whether the fault is that of the employers or of the employes. . . . Let us demand the work be kept going and let the decisions, through mediation and compromise, be retroactive. But let nothing stop the work on the national defense."

Martin urged all persons to "insistently demand the truth about defense production."

"Demand the truth about defense expenditures," he continued. "We are not getting the facts from the Administration now. Republican members of Congress have personally investigated these matters and have found waste, corruption, graft, incompetency. . . .

"This is no time to turn over to New Deal theorists the management and production of our national defense. They totally lack the necessary training, temperament and ability to do the job," Martin asserted.

With a newspaper editor's background, Martin urged defense of free speech and free press with an end of "un-American intolerance."

"We must make sure this so-called voluntary censorship of news is not misused," he said. "It will not conceal a single essential fact from our potential enemies. It might be a very clever and effective way of concealing the facts—however dangerous or ugly they may be—from the American people. . . .

"A new tax bill which will shock the Nation when the people learn the rates is already on the way to enactment. The waste, the graft and the inefficiency must be paid out of the family pocketbook the same as the money legitimately and efficiently spent. . . . It is damnable for any man or any group of men to be allowed for one hour to leech on the people through the National defense. . . .

"There has been built up by means of a clever and widespread propaganda the claim it is unpatriotic, un-American, treasonable, to dare question a single statement or act of the Administration in regard to Government, or the national defense, or in regard to its policies. That simply is the device of political bureaucrats who do not want the facts to be known to the people."

The War At Sea

By Mark Sullivan

Battle Of The Atlantic

BY THE COMING Senate discussion of a resolution against convoying, and by other developments, America will be educated about the Battle of the Atlantic, what must be done to win it, and the part America is to play in it. With this goes the fundamental question, how far America is to go toward participation in the war.

SULLIVAN

Some education, the public has already received. Through discussion a few weeks ago, it is now generally recognized that building more cargo ships, alone, is not enough to win the Battle of the Atlantic—and never can be enough. That is merely raising more sheep, while letting the wolves also breed. As we build more cargo ships, so do the Germans build more submarines and bombing planes. German destruction of cargo ships by her existing submarines and planes is more than twice as great as current new construction by America and Britain combined.

The only way the Battle of the Atlantic can be won is by hunting down and destroying Nazi submarines, planes, and surface raiders. Whether done by Britain alone, or by Britain with what help we decide to give her, that is the way.

PATROLLING, as now done by our Navy, is not enough. All our patrols do is to spot and give warning of the location of German submarines and raiders. We now patrol only this side of the Atlantic, and in these waters only a fraction of the German destruction takes place. President Roosevelt says we have the right to patrol anywhere in the seven seas. If so, we can extend our patrol, if we choose, right up to the coast of England. That would be much, but still not enough.

Convoying by our Navy would not be enough if kept within our side of the ocean. To convoy only on this side of the Atlantic would merely be to make safe waters already practically safe. In these waters the Germans do not prowl much, and they could retire wholly, concentrating all their destruction in the waters close to England.

Complete convoy by our Navy all the way to English harbors would of course be a great help. Complete convoying by our Navy and the British combined, both navies working in the waters close to Britain, would go a long way toward winning the Battle of the Atlantic.

A long way, yet not quite enough. For in the Battle of the Atlantic, air power plays an immense part. It is not exclusively a sea battle. It is in large part a battle in the air over both sea and land. Not only do German planes have effect against cargo ships coming into Britain. Destruction by German planes of docks and harbors in Britain, and even of cities within England, is a part of the Battle of the Atlantic. For this is a battle to determine whether Britain can survive.

IT IS TENABLE to say that there is one condition in which Britain can win the Battle of the Atlantic. It is when and if Britain, with our help, or as much help as we ultimately decide to give, and as we may be able to give within sufficient time, has a clear advantage in the air over Britain and adjacent waters. Such clear advantage would consist of a preponderance of three elements: a larger number of airplanes, of better quality, with better pilots than the Germans. In that condition Britain not only could win the Battle of the Atlantic, but also carry the air war into Germany, doing to Germany what Germany now, with her present superiority in air power, does to England.

Whether we should convoy cargo ships carrying American supplies to Britain is not a simple decision to make. There are two principal ways by which we could make our Navy available to the British for convoying purposes. One is by simply transferring a number of vessels from our Navy to the British, letting the British man them and put the British flag over them. This is what we did last September with 50 destroyers, and later with some smaller craft.

This method has some disadvantages from our point of view, and some from the British point of view. One is that it takes time for British crews to learn to operate American vessels. Another is that Britain may be coming close to the end of her supply of trained men. Not only has she extreme need for such men in her own navy, she needs them also for the manning of cargo ships which are essential to her existence.

FROM OUR point of view, the disadvantage of transferring naval vessels to the British, is that we lose title and possession of the ships. The ships would become a part of the British navy; and, in the possible event of defeat of the British, would suffer whatever might be the fate of the British fleet. Secretary Knox some weeks ago expressed objection to transferring any considerable further number of our naval vessels to the British.

There is a second method by which we could help in convoying. It would be simply to have naval vessels of our own, manned by American crews and carrying the American flag, do the convoying directly. This method apparently would not be resisted by Secretary Knox, if one can make inferences from the spirit of his speech last week. By this method, if we chose to do it, we would retain the convoying vessels as a part of our own fleet, and our seamen would get valuable experience.

Whether to convoy must be considered in the light of the whole situation. Not only is there a Battle of the Atlantic. There is also a potential Battle of the Pacific. How best to dispose of our Navy as between the two oceans, in our interest as well as the interest of the British, must be a factor in all calculations.

Aftermath Of The Balkan Campaign

AMONG THE INFORMED officials at the State, War and Navy Department, Winston Churchill's great speech on Sunday was taken as no mere pep talk to the democracies. It was taken as an open intimation that Britain's only reliance today is American aid, and American aid of a much more active kind, on a vastly greater scale, and in a far shorter time than any disclosed plans of the Administration now call for.

ALSOP

Churchill's words, which were probably seen at the White House long before they were heard on the air, were necessarily veiled. But the reasons for reading so serious a meaning into them are too well-grounded in the facts to be ignored by any thinking person. To put it bluntly, the facts suggest that the final hour of decision for the United States may come before full summer is upon us.

THE FIRST GROUP of facts requiring careful consideration are those indicating the probable aftermath of the Balkan tragedy in the Eastern Mediterranean. Despite the loose talk on the subject, Britain's investment in Greece and Yugoslavia's resistance was probably worth the tangible gains. The German transport system to Eastern Europe disorganized for at least six months; sabotage of the canal through the iron gates of the Danube, through which Rumanian oil must pass westward, and of the crucial Yugoslav copper and lead mines; the spread of the war through the entire Balkan peninsula, which Germany had relied on as a larder—these are gains well worth fighting for.

Unfortunately, on the other side of the ledger, are intangible losses. And these are so great that they may lead, eventually, to capture of the oil of Iran and Irak by Germany, and liquidation of the British position in Egypt.

The oil is Germany's grand objective. The wells can be destroyed, by salting and breaking down the oil sands. But the process requires much special equipment, takes some time, and will be very difficult indeed for the British engineers to carry out under the eyes of the Shah of Persia and the German-sympathizing Iraki government. Moreover, even if the wells are destroyed, the British Mediterranean fleet is dependent on the oil, and the British position in Egypt is ultimately dependent on the fleet. Such is the harsh logic of the situation.

THUS THE greatest intangible loss of the Balkan campaign is the change it has wrought in the position of Turkey, through whose territories in Asia Minor the Germans can most easily get at the oil. Where all Turkish leaders formerly joined in a grim determination to fight any German attempt to cross in Asia, the Turkish will to resist is now terribly weakened. The Turks have seen, in Yugoslavia, a brave but ill-equipped fighting nation very like their own suddenly and brutally overwhelmed. Across the Bosporus and Dardanelles, a great German land army confronts them. In the Dodecanese and in Samothrace, Lemnos and the other Greek islands where the Germans are now mopping up, a formidable German air strength is likely soon to threaten them. And Russia, whose policy has had so much influence on theirs, has now become an added danger.

Some American officials have long cherished delusions about Russia, but these are growing increasingly hard to cling to. The German propaganda has planted rumors all over Europe of a forthcoming attack on the Ukraine. The old Tsarist Ukrainian Hetman, Skoropadsky, has been trotted out of luxurious retirement in which the Germans have foresightedly maintained him. On the Russo-Polish frontier, the Germans now have between 40 and 60 divisions, with enough more in the hinterland to cut through the Russian army like a knife through butter.

FURTHERMORE, the Russia of Stalin cannot meet Hitler's divisions as the Russia of Alexander met Napoleon's. Simply engulfing an invading army was all very well, when each Russian province was economically independent. But the five-year plans have been squarely based on Ukrainian wheat and Baku and Batum oil, so that if the Germans drove through Ukraine, along the shores of the Black Sea to the Caspian, they would both stab the Russians in the stomach and cut their jugular. The best authorities here doubt that Hitler really means to attack the Ukraine now, since "Russia is the trussed steer in Germany's cold-storage house." But they have little doubt that the German propaganda is intended to frighten Russia into bringing pressure on Turkey. And the odds that Russia will consent if asked are quoted at nine to one.

THE BRITISH force in Egypt is now contained, and even endangered, by the numerically superior German and Italian armies. With two Panzer divisions, three other divisions of German troops, and an indeterminate number of Italians already past the Egyptian frontier, the British can hardly muster the strength for a defense of Iran and Irak. It will be only a matter of weeks, however, according to the best military authorities here, for the Germans to transform 15 or 20 of their divisions now in Eastern Europe into a Near Eastern expeditionary force. Assuming that the oil wells cannot be effectively sabotaged, the Germans will still have desperate transport difficulties to overcome before they can bring Near Eastern oil into Europe. But if they ever achieve both control of the oil and command of the Mediterranean, their greatest supply problem will be solved. And the war will be indefinitely but cruelly prolonged.

The Gallup Poll

Sixty-Day 'Cooling Off' Period Before Strikes In Defense Industries Favored by 89%

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., April 29.—Michigan's 30-day "cooling off" period for labor disputes, which was invoked in the General Motors-C. I. O. fight, is a piece of legislation approved in principle by a majority of American voters polled in a Nation-wide survey.

Following the national strike crisis of several weeks ago, a flood of bills for the control of strikes appeared in Washington. Some called for a cooling off period of 30 or 60 days before a strike could take place in a defense industry, in order to allow for further mediation. Others went so far as to propose prison penalties for defense workers if they strike.

Basic to all such proposed legislation is the question: How far is public opinion willing or ready to go in handling strikes?

To determine the answer the American Institute of Public Opinion conducted a Nation-wide study in which a cross-section of voters was interviewed from coast to coast between April 10 and 20 on two aspects of proposed legislation.

The results of the first part of the study follow.

"When workers in a factory working on defense contracts vote to go on strike, do you think they should be required by law to wait for 60 days before the strike can start?"

Those with opinions voted as follows:

Yes	89%
No	11

Fewer than one voter in every 12 (8 per cent) expressed no opinion on this issue.

Some voters in favor of the cooling off proposal added that they thought all strikes should be forbidden in the defense industries for the duration of the war. The second part of the study covered the following issue:

"A bill has been proposed which would treat any worker who goes on strike in a defense industry as a traitor, to be punished by one year in prison. Would you like to see Congress pass such a law?"

Those with opinions voted in the following manner:

Yes	37%
No	63

Approximately one voter in every ten (9 per cent) expressed no opinion.

It will be noted that although the cooling-off period is popular, there is substantial public opposition to prison penalties for workers just because they go on strike.

The cooling off period has been in effect in the railroad industry for some time, having been embodied in the Railway Mediation Act. At present Congress is considering the Vinson bill which provides a 25-day cooling off time before a strike can be called in defense industries. But, unlike the Railway Act, the Vinson bill also provides criminal penalties for strikes called before the cooling off period.

With today's sizable vote against prison penalties, it is likely that if the public alone had the power to decide, the Vinson bill would not meet with approval unless modified in its proposal for criminal penalties.

The Institute survey found that even among industrial labor union members reached in the poll the cooling off idea is favored. Of these labor union members, more than two-thirds said they were for the cooling off period, while the rest were opposed.

Fair Enough

Hal O'Flaherty

HAL O'FLAHERTY, the managing editor of the Chicago Daily News, has been appointed assistant to Admiral Hepburn, the Navy's director of public relations, with the rank of lieutenant commander. Mr. O'Flaherty is not an ideologist or Communist but a model T, or primitive, Americanist, and thus will be a queer bird among the forces of press agentry which has been recruited for Government service in the last eight years and a bit. Moreover, he was not out of a job, but gave up a much better salary to accept the President's shilling, wherein the same difference will be observed between him and the general run of misanthropic failures who have crept into the woodwork of the Government under the New Deal to serve their personal grudges against the economic system and the profession in which they couldn't keep step, some of them because they staggered.

TIME MAGAZINE, with a weakness for capsuled and insulating characterization, used the word "brawling" to describe O'Flaherty, whose only fist fight of which I have knowledge in an intimate friendship of 28 years was a stout remonstrance against a remark by another journalist in the Adlon Hotel in Berlin in 1920. The remark left him no alternative, so Mr. O'Flaherty tagged his colleague out, and that settled that.

In 1914 in Minneapolis, he cracked a beautiful cherry wood bar, but he and his companions were not brawling. They were singing and beating time on the bar. He used to love to sing songs in saloons and was partial to a ribald Wisconsin college air which began "Minnesota, see the badger; you can stroke his tawny hair."

That, however, was mere rejoicing by a robust, ambitious, self-confident young reporter who had worked in a quarry and didn't know his strength. He had also served briefly as coachman of a farm vehicle near What Cheer, Iowa. This equipage, being loaded with fertilizer from the pile behind the barn, is driven sedately across the fields while mechanical arms, operated by gears and chains, hurl nourishment in slow, graceful arcs to the hungry soil. Mr. O'Flaherty set out behind a team of spanking mules, one of which stepped on a ground-hornets' nest, arousing the inmates. The mules then ran away while the spreader-arm flailed wildly, and the young driver accidentally achieved distance records which are believed to stand to this day in this event.

In the spring of 1913 Mr. O'Flaherty, employed then as Omaha manager of the United Press, was sitting in a bathtub in his rooming house one morning. A few minutes later he was still sitting in his bathtub, but not in his rooming house. The rooming house had left on the wings of a big wind which was famous for a few days as the Omaha tornado. When he had found clothes for his nakedness, Mr. O'Flaherty went downtown, captured the only wire left standing, and scooped the world for 12 hours. For that he was acclaimed, but before he could enjoy his celebrity his triumph was washed away in the Dayton flood which drowned out public memory of the Omaha tornado.

Mr. O'Flaherty, still a cub, arrived in London in the spring of 1916, and it was there your correspondent shared with him a life of toil and not too miserable poverty on $30 a week in a number of Bloomsbury boarding houses. There, in the sooty, foggy mornings after a long night trick, he would lean out his window and revile the catmeat man, the lavender woman and the unsightly old woman who would come trudging by when he was trying to sleep, yelling in a dark, deep voice, "Rose's sweet lovely roses!" The romance of the ancient cries of London was not irresistible at such hours.

MR. O'FLAHERTY returned home in 1917 to enlist in the Army, becoming a pilot second lieutenant just as the war ended.

And when he went back to London with his young bride he discovered to his own consternation, no less than hers, that he had achieved a romantic conquest over a young woman he had scarcely ever seen. During the old London days the young American reporters habitually patronized a cheap Fleet Street restaurant called the Wellington, and now, when O'Flaherty returned with his American dream girl, there arose from the scullery such a squalling and yowling as you never heard. And then there emerged a red-eyed, sallow little pot-walloper to point angrily at Mrs. O'Flaherty, screaming for all the world, "She ain't 'alf good enough for 'im. 'E deserves better than the likes of you, Miss . . . 'E's beautiful, 'E is!"

'E weren't 'alf-bad looking at that, 'e weren't.

Under Hitler's Heel

By Barnet Nover

The Subjugation Of A Continent

A POPULATION greater than that which inhabits the whole of North America lives under German domination today. Some, like the Poles, the Norwegians, the Dutch, the Belgians, the Yugoslavs and the Greeks, were subjugated only after they had made a brave fight against hopeless odds. Others, like the Magyars, Bulgars, Rumanians and Italians, were sold into slavery by Quisling rulers. Even those who, like the Swiss and the Swedes, live in relative oases of freedom in the desert the Nazis have created are never sure from day to day how much longer they will be able to cling to their freedom and their independence. Already Hitler has turned the heat on at Vichy and Madrid and Ankara to get those governments to join the "new order."

NOVER

Europe today is a continent in which the so-called master race is greatly outnumbered by the subject population. And the "master race" itself is the slave of an all-powerful dictator and a ruthless system.

HOW LONG can this system last? Some insist that it cannot last very long. Sooner or later, they say, the misery and destruction and death which Hitler has produced will set in motion a wave of hate that will engulf him and his evil crew. It runs contrary to nature and to history, we are told, for one man to dominate a continent of so many diverse nationalities.

In the broad perspective of history these optimists are undoubtedly right. But in the present era of tanks and dive bombers and machine guns, not to mention all-pervading systems of espionage, rebellion is not easy. No matter how bitterly the subject peoples may hate the Nazi yoke, there is little they can do about it at this moment except pray for deliverance and place what minor obstacles they can in the path of the conqueror. There has been and there continues to be far too much wishful thinking on the subject of the possibility of a revolution capable of overthrowing Hitler either in Germany or in other areas under the Nazi boot.

THE ONLY HOPE of salvation which the subject peoples of Europe have today is that somehow Great Britain will survive the German onslaught and with the aid which this Nation will increasingly be able to render turn the tide of battle in her favor.

When, last summer and fall, the British bravely withstood the fierce battering they received at the hands of Goering's Luftwaffe, there were numerous indications of increasing resistance in Norway, the Netherlands, Poland and elsewhere. British victories in Africa and the evolution of American opinion in favor of transforming this Nation into an effective arsenal for the democracies helped further in the same direction. And it can be said that as long as the British hold out, the hope of salvation will not die out in the hearts of Poles and Czechs and Norwegians and Frenchmen, of Yugoslavs and Greeks and Belgians and Danes and others who live in the shadow of the hooked cross. Yet, it cannot be denied that Hitler's spectacular triumph in the Balkans has weakened the spirit of resistance in Europe, particularly in those regions where the disposition to cooperate with Hitler already exists among the rulers. That is particularly true in Spain and unoccupied France.

WE ARE in the midst of a renewed debate regarding the action we should take in the developing emergency that confronts us and the world.

Powerful voices are being raised in support of bold measures. Public opinion is moving in the same direction. But it is doubtful whether in Vichy or Madrid or Ankara these voices are making any real impression. The promise of American action in the future may have had force in the past, for nobody in Europe underestimates America's potential strength; it has little force now.

The argument voiced by German propagandists supported by American defeatists that our aid is certain to come too late has made headway. The only American propaganda that could have a real bearing on the situation in German Europe at this time is the propaganda of action.

IF BRITAIN falls, the possibility of a European uprising against Hitler will fade into the distance. We need only examine the history of Soviet Russia, of Fascist Italy, of Nazi Germany, to discover how great can be the life expectancy of a regime which has vast and ruthless force back of it even though its popularity may be limited. Even in their hour of greatest agony the Italians who have reason to hate Mussolini for the evils he has done them did not command the strength to overthrow him. Now their land has been taken captive by the Nazis.

If Hitler wins, he will be able to organize the Continent. He may not be able to do so with the maximum degree of efficiency for a long time to come. But he will at least be able to organize it, and organize it speedily, as an arsenal to supply his armies and his air force with the weapons for further conquest. And here and there he will find enough Quislings to make the task easier.

On the other hand, if a total victory by Germany is not speedily achieved, the presence in Europe of so vast a number of people who hate him and his works with an all-consuming hate will provide an instrument with which to bring about his undoing. Captive Europe is an army without arms. Given time, so that American aid to Britain can swing the balance in Britain's favor, this army can be armed and can be mobilized. Then the fires that Britain will be able to ignite along the periphery of German Europe will quickly sweep on toward the center.

The long-hoped-for rebellion of the conquered peoples of Europe can only occur when and if the military balance begins to swing against Hitler and the prospect of a German victory, which he is seeking to persuade his captives is imminent, gives way to the possibility, and then the certainty, of a German defeat.

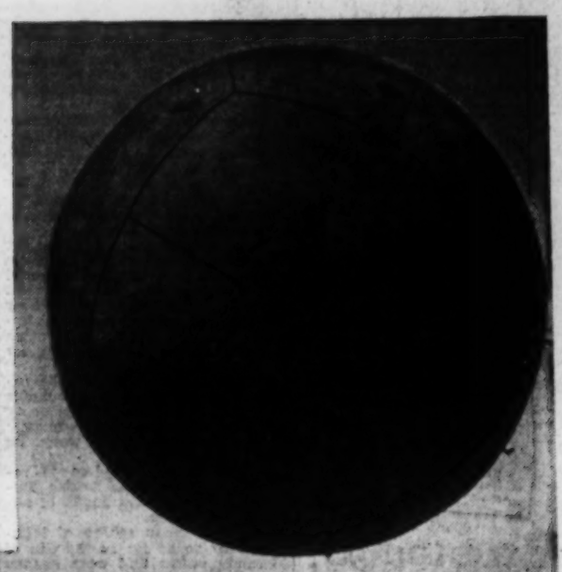
Soldiers 'Relax' With Battle Royal



Seven hundred soldiers at Arlington Cantonment, on the site of the former Arlington Experimental Farm, yesterday held their monthly 2½-hour "recreation day"—recreation in Army parlance means anything from a battle royal to a 2-mile foot race. In a battle royal (above), which began at 8:30 a. m., 11 soldiers representing their companies, pummeled and punched opponents to the accompaniment of the 30-piece post band. There was no winner.

Next came a 400-man "push-ball" competition (right). Two hundred soldiers from the first and third battalions tried for nearly half an hour to get the ball past the opposing team's goal line. At a late hour yesterday the post's public relations officer said that the first and third battalions were still arguing over which had won.

Highlighting yesterday's competition was the "egg-in-spoon" race (below). Balancing eggs in tablespoons, soldiers awkwardly raced for the goal line. The program yesterday was directed and planned by Recreation Lieut. Thomas G. Dickenson.

PAGE OF NEW TEXT—Paragraphs replace verses; language is brought up to date; box headings are used

By Robert Tate Allan.
Post Church Editor

After five years of laborious research and editorial work, a revised edition of the New Testament, written in the present-day idiom of the English-speaking world, will make its appearance on May 18—Catholic Biblical Sunday.

A modernized version of Bible text last revised by Bishop Richard Challoner 192 years ago, its language has been brought up to date, changes have been made in certain interpretations of ancient texts and modern printing styles have been employed.

There are many striking changes. For example, the word "Calvary" has been translated into "Skull" and "Holy Ghost"—reference to the third person in the Blessed Trinity—into "Holy Spirit."

While the basis of the new edition is Latin Vulgate, church scholars from throughout the United States have referred to the earliest written records to clarify and retain the original meaning of the Bible.

The Rev. Edward L. Donze, S. M. T., S. T. D., of Catholic University, and secretary of the Catholic Biblical Association, and the Right Rev. Msgr. William L. Newton were closely concerned with the revision. Father Donze said yesterday that "countless man hours" were spent on the project.

In the beginning, each reviser was assigned one book of the New Testament. He made what changes he deemed necessary and then subjected his work to the editorial board, of which Msgr. Newton is secretary.

The board had a department which studied the material in the light of its original text, polished the English expressions, checked footnotes and did other research. The editorial board's findings were presented to the Catholic Biblical Association, and then were returned to the advisers with recommendations. The editorial board was the final authority.

Most prominent among changes

are elimination of many archaic forms and phrases. While "thou" and "thee" are retained, third person singular verb forms, such as hath, doth and runneth, are modernized.

The well-known phrase, "gave up the ghost" has become "died," "traffic" has become "business" and "expound" has been changed to "explain."

Discussing the significance of the revision yesterday in an interview, Msgr. Newton said that "at no time has any vernacular version been produced with greater care and with the cooperation of so many trained and experienced scriptural scholars."

Family Bombproof, Latest Model, $250

By George Thorpe
Post Staff Writer

The War Department and the Office of Emergency Management have drawn up plans for putting air-raid shelters on a mass production basis. For $250 you should be able eventually to put the "family," or six-person, model in your backyard and be comfortable when the bombs begin to drop.

Description of the recommended shelters is contained in a pamphlet prepared by civilian defense experts of the two departments and now coming off the Government Printing Office presses.

The pamphlet begins with a "now don't get excited" touch in the introduction: "In no sense should issuance of this bulletin be construed as a signal to start work immediately on any of the protective structures described."

But descriptions include diagrams and specifications precise to the fraction of an inch. The impossible is not claimed for the shelters. They are no protection against a direct hit of a heavy bomb.

This is what they protect you against: Blast and splinters of a 500-pound bomb exploding not nearer than 25 feet; direct hit of a light incendiary; debris from falling buildings; earth shock from a 500-pound bomb exploding not nearer than 25 feet; gas.

The $250 type, designed, it is stated, "with possibilities of mass production in mind," is made of standard corrugated iron plates. It is 7 feet 10 inches long and 6 feet 3 inches wide and is placed underground, a foot below the surface.

Two entrances are provided in the shelter—which is recommended for residential rather than downtown areas—so that those in the shelter have an exit, if one is blocked by debris.

The main entrance is a corrugated iron pipe, 3 feet wide, and slanting down from the surface as a ramp. Ramps are preferred to stairs because of "the danger of falling in the rush to get into the shelter" it was said. The other entrance can be so placed as to lead by a tunnel into the basement of the house.

Sandbags are placed around the ramp entrance and there are double doors to form a "gas lock"—a means to keep out gas. By this arrangement a person entering the shelter closes the first door before opening the second.

In permanent shelters, doors should be of steel, heavily constructed, and gas tight. In improvised structures, a makeshift gas lock can be made with blankets

Japanese Paper Suggests Terms to End War

By Otto D. Tolischus

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, April 29.—The Japan Times Advertiser, foreign office organ, today presents what it calls "exploratory" peace terms to end the present war and establish a new world order and submits them for the consideration not so much of the belligerent powers as the United States, in whose hands, it says, lies "the momentous decision of war or peace."

The terms as outlined include:

The nations called upon to settle world peace would be Germany, with Italy as a junior partner; Japan, the British Empire, Russia and the United States. Such a peace should include:

A. Parity of naval strength of Britain and the United States on one hand and the Axis powers on the other hand, with a naval holiday after this is established.

B. Demilitarization of such strongholds as Gibraltar, the Eastern Mediterranean, Malta, Aden, Red Sea, Singapore and Hongkong.

C. Complete withdrawal of the British navy from the Mediterranean and joint Anglo-Axis administration of the Suez Canal.

D. All North Africa from the Straits of Gibraltar to Somaliland to be placed at the disposition of the Axis, though France may be permitted to retain colonies under certain conditions of co-administration. Certain British and other African colonies to be placed under German and Italian control.

E. Continental Europe to be organized into a corporate state under the Reich with domestic autonomy for unit members, whose economic and political cooperation would be based on Berlin.

F. The United Kingdom to remain the heart of the British Empire, with a gradual transfer of authority to Canada.

G. The German sphere of influence may go as far as the Sea of Marmara unless that were handed over to the joint administration of Turkey and Russia. But Germany may demand participation in the oil wells of Iraq and Iran.

H. The United States sphere of influence would be Canada, Central and South America, New Foundland and Greenland with islands and regional waters, but the United States would undertake not to form hegemony over South America inimical to the Axis and would accord the fullest freedom and equality of opportunity to Germany and her allies in that continental brotherhood. No American naval bases would be west of Hawaii, and that stronghold would be reduced in importance.

I. In the Pacific, the Netherlands Indies might be detached from the Netherlands and placed under an independent government with native participation, and British possessions would obtain increasing self-government. Throughout all these Pacific islands Japanese advisers would be admitted and entrusted with the duty of rationaalizing forms of cooperation in the "coprosperity sphere," particularly in regard to the retention of natural sources. French Indo-China would receive independence on the same terms.

J. As reassurance to Japan and as a gesture of confidence, Russia might demilitarize Siberia and remove the menace of Vladivostok, in return for which Japan would reduce her forces in Manchukuo and Mongolia to the minimum required for safety. Australia would remain within the British Empire, but would eliminate immgration bars and permit Japanese settlement on terms of equality.

L. India would obtain self-government.

M. Religious and political liberty would be enjoined throughout the world.

Churchill Calls for Vote Of Confidence

By the Associated Press

London, April 29.—Prime Minister Churchill told a cheering House of Commons today that debate would be held next week on the Greek campaign and the conduct of the war, and he demanded a vote of confidence for his government.

Suggestions for creation of a small supreme war cabinet and for debate on war and peace aims drew a flat "No."

The open discussion was scheduled for the first sitting day after this week. (If Parliament follows custom, this will be next Tuesday.) Churchill indicated that Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden might report on his diplomatic efforts in the Middle East.

In reply to Edgar Louis Granville, Laborite, who demanded to know whether the country would get more news of the war situation, Churchill said:

"I hope the country will always get all possible news on the war situation, but I hope—in fact, I am sure—the country would not wish to receive news which would add to the dangers of our troops, whose dangerous and critical operations are being successfully carried out."

Members cheered loudly, taking this as an intimation that a large part of the forces in Greece had been saved.

The house shouted down a member who asked if Churchill "alone" was responsible for war strategy.

Granville asked if Churchill would consider establishment of a small supreme war cabinet without departmental responsibilities and including men of the caliber of the Australian prime minister, Robert G. Menzies.

"No, sir," replied Churchill.

Rejects Empire Cabinet

Granville then asked whether empire statesmen would be invited to join an imperial war cabinet, since the whole empire was involved in the war.

Churchill replied that this question had been fully discussed in Commons some months ago and there was nothing to add.

Another inquiry by Granville, whether summoning of an empire war conference was contemplated, drew the response:

"At present there is no such intention."

British Stall Axis in Raging Desert Storm

By the Associated Press

Cairo, April 29.—British troops and planes, aided by a furious sandstorm which has been raging in the western desert since Saturday, have halted the eastward advance of three Italian-German columns attempting to follow up the recent capture of Salum, informed sources said today.

All three columns were brought to a standstill within 5 miles of Salum, just inside the border of Egypt. Harassed by a British armored division, attacked repeatedly by the R. A. F. and hampered by the stinging fury of the sandstorm, the Axis units quickly lost momentum and finally stalled, the British said.

The R. A. F. was outnumbered by Italian and German planes in this area, but still dominated the desert skies yesterday, successfully hampering the Axis service of supplies, officers said. They reported the Germans apparently are relying heavily on aircraft for bringing up fresh troops.

Heavy casualties were inflicted on such air-borne Axis soldiers at the Libyan airport of Benina yesterday, the R. A. F. Middle East command announced. It was the second destructive raid on that base in as many days.

Benina, just outside of Bengasi, has been one of the main terminals for air-borne troop movements. In yesterday's attack, British guns and bombs were said to have killed or wounded many Nazis and destroyed one of their Junkers transport planes as they were preparing to take off for another sector—presumably Salum.

On the Ethiopian front, the British claimed capture of 2,000 Italians and 400 native troops, also quantities of guns and other war material, in the seizure Sunday of Dessie.

British Smash Mock Invasion 'Back Into Sea'

London, April 29 (AP).—A British army of 75,000 men, using 10,000 fighting vehicles and hundreds of tanks, drilled in anti-invasion exercises in East Anglia today.

In this area, one of the most likely locations for the beginning of a cross-Channel blitzkrieg, Nazi troops theoretically landed with tanks and tried to break through the home guard but were "smashed back into the sea."

The landing of German parachute troops was simulated by Britons actually dropping from planes and being rounded up after theoretically causing considerable trouble.

Germans Shell Channel Coast For 7 Hours

By the Associated Press

London, April 29.—The vast artillery the Germans have assembled on the French invasion coast burst thunderously into the Battle of the English Channel today with a seven-hour shelling of the British shore—the heaviest and most protracted of the war.

The big guns employed between Calais, Cap Gris Nez and Boulogne spoke with only a one-hour interruption from shortly after 8 a. m. until almost 4 p. m., but even as they were fired, the R. A. F. was dropping heavy bombs about them.

The R. A. F. also made a determined stab at the channel ports and shipping generally along the Nazi-occupied side of the channel, but had to cope with strong German air formations. There was at least one stiff dogfight, and planes were almost continuously in the air over the southeast coast and channel throughout the day.

Messerschmitts Beaten Off

R. A. F. offensive patrols bombed and machine-gunned four medium-sized ships north of Dunkerque, it was reported, and fighting escorts beat off a number of Messerschmitts which tried to intercept the British en route home.

Other fighters reported damaging Messerschmitts in the Channel dogfight.

At Dover, the ground shuddered, houses rocked and windows and doors rattled to the explosions of the German shells.

(The German said five British planes, flying to attack the big guns, were shot down within half an hour.)

The British guns on the Kentish Coast also blasted back at the French coastline. At one point, yellow smoke billowed majestically from Calais Harbor, suggesting to observers that oil tanks had been hit.

The German shells for a time were bursting every minute on the British side, but, after it was all over, the British press association reported that the damage, for the most part, was confined to shoreline cottages. Three men were reported wounded slightly.

First Shrapnel is Loosed

[In the bombardment, the Germans for the first time used shrapnel—shells which explode in the air before striking, hurling showers of death-dealing steel splinters, a United Press dispatch said.]

(Berlin announced that German speedboats had undertaken an early morning attack along the English southeast coast, presumably under cover of the shelling. D. N. B., the German news agency, said that several British speedboats were damaged when they fought the raiders, but that the German boats escaped unscathed.)

Actually, it was the second successive day of German shelling. This morning it began with single shells from at least two cross-Channel guns in the Calais area. Salvoes of four and six followed. The Dover "Hell's Corner" area was placarded with yellow notice boards, "Shelling in progress—take cover."

Most of the shells were of the high-explosive type, bursting in the air with terrific flashes and scattering heavy metal splinters.

The night before, planes of the R. A. F. again had pounded at Brest, where the British say the German surface raiders Gneisenau and Scharnhorst are berthed.

The attack was the twelfth raid in a month on the warships, and a well-informed source said the fact they were still at Brest indicated they were crippled so badly they could not be moved.

Other sources said extensive reconnaissances, moreover, had established to the full satisfaction of the R. A. F. that the craft rt Brest are not dummies—a suggestion advanced in some Swedish circles and considered here to be "of German origin."

Civilians Ordered Out of Plymouth

The following statement covered the important decision to declare Plymouth an evacuated area:

"The question of evacuation was considered last summer and the ministry of health did not consider that the step ought then be taken, in view of the heavy pressure on reception areas, but Ernest Brown, minister of health, visited Plymouth March 24, shortly after the first recent air attacks on the city.

"The question was then discussed on the spot and it was agreed that it was not necessary or desirable to take the action. Authorities responsible locally have now requested that Plymouth should be made an evacuated area and arrangements are being made to remove school children from the areas affected as quickly as possible."

There are 10,000 youngsters between the ages of 5 and 16 who will be taken to rural parts of Devon and Cornwall. Mothers with children, aged persons and others who are needy, will be provided with free transportation.

Roads Already Clogged

These facts do not begin to touch the subject. For days the roads leading from Plymouth have been crowded until late every afternoon with a pathetic throng of refugees, slowly moving, by car or afoot, away from the haunting presence of death and injury in a community which comes close to the literal meaning of being "devastated."

Some carry only food and blankets. Others cling to precious family possessions as long as they can. They filled churches, schools and meeting halls along the wayside—those unable to gain shelter slept in the open, often lying in shadow of hedges.

Lady Astor, mayoress of Plymouth, came out with a bitter criticism of the ministry of information yesterday for spreading "Pollyanna" reports. A sample of this is an early bulletin stating that "the raid lasted two hours and some fires were started, but casualties were not believed to have been heavy," which was then reissued saying, "A heavy loss of life was reported in some areas while fires were caused, one being large in character."

For the third night in succession London yesterday had no air raid alarm.

All Americans In Yugoslavia Believed Safe

By the Associated Press

Budapest, April 29.—Arthur Bliss Lane, United States Minister to Yugoslavia who is resting here after an arduous automobile journey out of that conquered country, said today his war experiences were "hell," but that all Americans in Yugoslavia were believed to be safe.

Belgrade is without water or means of sewage disposal, he said, and there is danger of widespread disease, with some cases of typhoid and typhus already reported. However, the American Red Cross is giving valuable preventive aid, he said and also is feeding several thousand persons daily.

Lane said he believed Robert St. John of the Associated Press and other American correspondents were safe in a Dalmatian coast town in Herzegovina, although he had had no direct contact with them.

"I have reason to believe they are safe with Macatee (R. B. Macatee, secretary of the Belgrade legation)," he said.

Lane said he preferred not to discuss the war or its political aspects. He chose rather to emphasize that "Red Cross aid is proving valuable in connection with the people's feeling toward the United States."

The American minister, who was in Belgrade when the war began, emerged from the war-ravaged country to cable his report to Washington and to telephone the State Department from here, if possible.

U. S. Envoy Sees Ciano

Rome, April 29.—United States Ambassador William C. Phillips saw Foreign Minister Ciano today. The disposition of Ray Brock, former New York Times correspondent in Belgrade was brought up.

Brock and perhaps some other American correspondents were with a party headed by the British minister to Belgrade, Ronald Ian Campbell, and his military attache, Lieut. Col. C. S. Clarke, who were picked up by an Italian torpedo boat somewhere off the Dalmatian coast. They were supposed to be trying to reach Greece in a small boat.

U. S. Attache Given Military Post at Tangier

The United States yesterday assigned a military observer to Tangier, which is directly opposite Gibraltar, the point at which some experts believe the next German thrust may be aimed.

The man chosen for the post was Maj. William C. Bentley, recently relieved at Italy's request from the position of Assistant Military Attache for air at Rome, after the United States asked the withdrawal of Admiral Alberto Lais, Italian Naval Attache in Washington, accused of directing the sabotage of Italian ships in United States harbors.

The War Department, in what some interpreted as an implied dig at Italy, announced Bentley had been promoted from the rank of Assistant Military Attache to Military Attache and assigned to the "important post of Tangier."

Tangier was recently occupied by Spain. It previously had been under international administration.

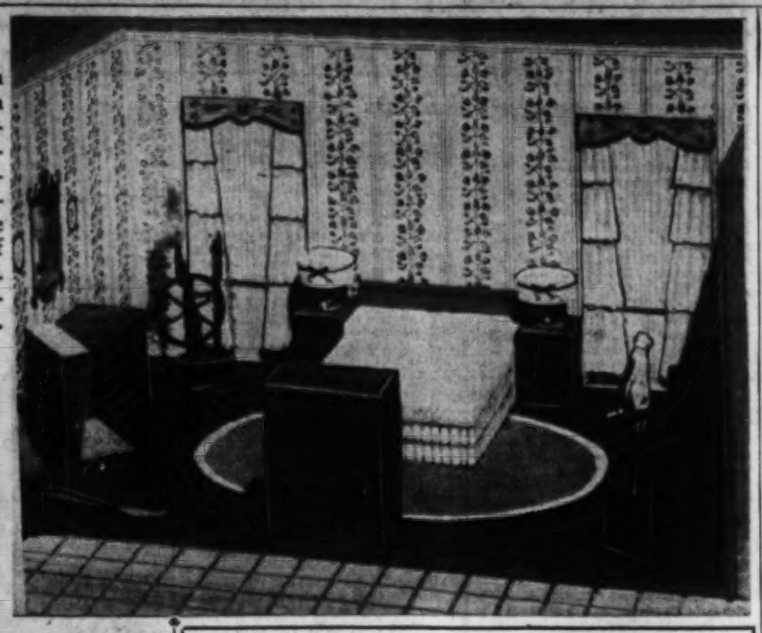
Chart for Decoration

Planning the decorations for a home can be done with great assurance if the plan of the noted decorator, Paul R. MacAlister, is followed. Mr. MacAlister's Plan-a-Room Kit not only gives the opportunity for the correct placement of furniture but also inspires the use of creative ability in making the home a place of charm and comfort. Shown below is Mr. MacAlister. At right is a miniature colonial bedroom planned according to his kit.



Mistakes in Decorating Avoided By Use of Plan-a-Room Kit

By Martha Ellyn
Post Household Editor

DID YOU ever push a piano across a room only to find when it reached the spot you had decided upon that such was not the proper place for it at all? Many a woman has experienced similar problems in her home when rearranging or planning a room.

Martha Ellyn.

Paul R. MacAlister, a member of the American Institute of Decorators — which organization is now holding a convention here—decided that something should be done for the average homemaker who doesn't consult a professional when it comes to the matter of choosing paint, selecting slip-covers or buying new furniture. Besides the mistakes being expensive, Mr. MacAllister considered that oftentimes the results were pretty ghastly. So this decorator decided that if women had some plan by which they could experiment with a room, scaled to its own dimensions, they could save themselves many a headache and dollars, too.

Gives Bird's Eye View

To meet this thought, Mr. MacAlister originated and designed a Plan-a-Room Kit. With this kit you can have a complete bird's eye view of color schemes and furniture arrangements. First you set up your room according to the dimensions of the room you want to decorate. Each half inch equals 1 foot in this kit. After you have set up the room as to doors, windows, etc., then it is a question of choosing any of 76 furniture symbols—chairs, tables, beds, pianos, lamps, fireplace, and so on, all scaled to the proper size. Then place them to the best advantage.

Colors Can Be Tried

You can go even further than placing the furniture and chossing the color of paint you want to use in the setting. If you think you want a rose-colored divan and it doesn't seem to "belong," then you can either try a gold-colored one or adjust the furnishings in such a way that the parts make up a pleasant whole.

Walls and floor coverings are often a problem and difficult to visualize. Various color combinations may be tried in both walls and carpeting to make certain that the blending of colors will be correct.

And then there is the educational advantage of the Plan-a-Room Kit. For many years little boys have had constructions sets from which to build tunnels, bridges, buildings and so forth. But there has been no educational construction set for sister to plan with and have for play. Now, with such a set available, sister, can be learning the first fundamentals of homemaking.

Mr. MacAlister will demonstrate his kit at a local department store Wednesday afternoon, April 30, and answer questions for those attending his lecture.

42 YEARS' EXPERIENCE
42 Years Cleaning Rugs In Washington

Cleanliness in the home carries its own reward of increased health to your family. No doubt you keep linens fresh, furniture dusted, rooms spic and span. But how about your rugs?

Vacuum cleaning will not remove the dirt and grime that has been lodged into the base. It is this dirt that soils the kiddies' clothes, brings possible infection, and menaces health.

For 42 years Mr. Pyle has specialized in rug cleaning . . . 22 of these years here in Washington. You take no chances . . . your rugs are thoroughly cleaned, colors brightened, and the cost is very reasonable.

RIGHT NOW is the time to send winter rugs for cleaning and summer storage.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl, 16, Wonders if Her Father Could Be Divorced From Mother, Long Confined in Mental Hospital; She Wants Him to Marry 'Sweet' Woman, Who Loves Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 16 years of age and I would like your advice on my father's problem. My father is 47. A number of years ago, my mother was sent to an asylum for mental sickness. At that time, the doctors gave little hope for her recovery, and said if she didn't show improvement in the next two years, she never would be any better. She is still there.

Now my father has become friends with another woman, and she is a very sweet person. They are very much in love with each other. He feels the need of a life companion. There are six children in the family—myself, two older brothers who are working, and three small girls, aged 9, 11 and 13. They need someone to love and understand them, as a mother would—and they scarcely remember our mother. My brothers feel, as I do, that father should marry again and be happy.

And what I want to know is this: Can my father get a divorce and marry this woman? We have very little money, and that is why we are seeking your advice. Father has been told by several people that he would have no trouble getting a divorce; and I hope, for his sake, that this is true. He works hard all day and then comes home to cook and clean and care for the children. I help him all I can, but he should have someone to share his burdens, for he is truly one great man.

CELESTE.

Situation Should Be Reviewed by Attorney

DEAR CELESTE: I have discussed your question with a representative of the Legal Aid Bureau, 1409 L Street, Northwest, who remarks that mental illness, which develops subsequent to marriage, does not constitute grounds for divorce, according to the laws of the District of Columbia. As he says, in pledging one's self to cherish the party of the second part, "in sickness and in health," presumably one is including the possibility of unforseen mental illness.

However, if a person incipiently ailing with an incurable mental disorder (of hereditary origin, say), were to contract marriage while keeping his affliction a secret from the second party, the latter might have legal grounds for annulment, the attorney indicated. Your mother's side of the case would need to be reviewed by an attorney, in full possession of her medical history, before a decision could be reached as to her legal rights, versus your father's, in the wretched situation which exists.

If your father is a resident of the District, he is eligible for legal advice and representation (free of charge) from the bureau aforementioned—supposing he lacks funds to employ an attorney in private practice. Or, if he lives in Maryland or Virginia, he should address himself to the Bar Association of the county in which he resides—asking for a clarification of his legal responsibility toward your mother.

M. H.

How Overcome Habit of Stuttering?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 17 years of age, who has a habit of stuttering. I do not like to talk much, and when I am invited out I rarely talk, for fear of being embarrassed. I have met other girls and men with a similar habit, and they, too, hate to talk unless it is necessary. I wonder if you can tell me how to overcome this habit.

Hopefully, ANNE MARIE.

One Must Treat Causative Factors

DEAR ANNE MARIE: In order to help you overcome your habit of stuttering, one would first need to understand some of the factors which cause you to stutter. This type of ailment is sometimes successfully treated by the psychiatric technique of acquainting the sufferer with the subjective or psychological causes of his nervous excitement—which self-knowledge helps him to assert adequate control over his social reactions thereafter. Again, it may be overcome by diligent practice of certain exercises which make for "good speech."

I have talked over your problem with a psychiatrist, who warmly recommends the remedial work being done, on behalf of the (shall we say?) vocally handicapped, by the head of the speech department of the graduate school of American University. So perhaps the best advice I can give you is,—take your problem to that potential source of help.

Where Can Woman Wear Blue Velvet Ensemble??

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My problem may be a little out of your line, but if you can give me a helpful answer I shall be very appreciative. I have a royal blue velvet dress and hat to match. I would like to know when, and where, it is appropriate to wear such a costume. Thank you.

EMILY.

Pack It in Mothballs; Forget You Have It

DEAR EMILY: To be perfectly honest, I believe you should pack the velvet ensemble away in mothballs and forget you have it. At some future day, you or your children or grandchildren may find modish use for it—but it doesn't seem to fit into the picture of a well-dressed woman's wardrobe today. There was a time, not so long ago, when women "dressed" for daytime occasions—such as the matinee, or an afternoon tea or reception or what not,—in such elaborate materials as velvet, lame, etc. But for the present, to be utilitarian in dress is to be most chic.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Night Owl

I

Do not say to me, "Come on to bed,"
Nor chide me about the valuable sleep I am losing, or warn me
That I'll be sorry tomorrow;
For this quiet midnight hour, in which time at last
Seems to stand still, is the only one in the earth's daily turning
That is wholly my own.

II

Here at last I have found sanctuary
From the voices of those near or distant, from the doorbell, the radio, the telephone,
From the clatter and turmoil of people;
Here at last I can sit peacefully, free of any anxious thought
Of the task just ahead, the appointment, the duty, the mortgage
Others have on my living.

III

Now at last the chores that dogged my steps from morning
Are all accomplished, and tomorrow halts temporarily
Its yet uncertain claims;
Now at last no one is near, nor do I feel the surge and press
Of others' thoughts and feelings, gropings and devourings
Upon my puny spirit,

IV

Here I can read idly trivial things that lull and rest me,
Or, on sudden impulses, look up pictures, records, letters
That make happy pasts live again;
Or I can dreamily and extravagantly
Plan for the future and make mental journeyings
Into idyllic realms beyond.

V

Here the friendly curtain of outside darkness
Temporarily shuts off all the world's distress and terror
That haunt my active hours;
Here in these brief moments that bring no news, no headlines, no discussions,
I feel the universe in perfect order, harmony and peace,
A presage—perhaps—of a day beyond.

VI

In this peacefully flowing hour I can carefully gather
All the shreds and broken ends of my tired, bewildered soul
Back into the unity of self;
And gently I can reach out through the beautiful enveloping stillness
To touch something unseen and unknown, harmonious and infinite,
More restful than sleep.

Watch Your Waistline and Hips To Keep Check of Weight Gain

By Ida Jean Kain

PROBABLY the most popular feminine conception of economy is to spend a trifle more than the budget allows for a frock "because it is an advanced style and will be every bit as good next year." Well, how about your favorite last year's frock?

If it has a "funny fit", perhaps your figure has changed. You may require a whole size larger—in places, at least—and without having put on a pound of weight.

A measurement gain is most conspicious at the waist and hipline. The waistline settles and thickens and the hips may spread just from sitting eight hours a day.

Keeping your figure is largely a mattter of muscle tone. Oddly enough, well-toned muscle weighs more than flabby tissue but it is compact and takes up little space, whereas the flabby tissue is bulky and shapeless. If you condition your waistline muscles and the large gluteus maximus on the back of the hip, you can trim your measurements without counting calories.

Play Best Exercise

Outdoor play is the most enjoyable exercise you can take. The exhilaration that accompanies it imparts additional tone to the muscles. Moreover, the fun and excitement give you a "lift"—you feel like holding yourself erect, and your figure looks slimmer.

But for day-in, day-out exercise, you can't beat a set of streamliners. In ten or fifteen minutes, you can get a workout for every lazy muscle and you can concentrate on your wayward measurements so successfully that you can see an improvement within two weeks.

Waistline Workout

Let's begin on that waistline. Stand on your knees on the floor, knees about 12 inches apart, with arms out at the sides, shoulder level. First, pull slim through the middle. Then, keeping the arms straight and the hips in line, dip to the left and try to touch fingers to the floor. Straighten up, and dip to the right. Keep that up for ten counts, then flop down and relax for a minute.

Now for the hipline. Stand up in a doorway, with hands grasping the door frame at either side, and swing first one leg, then the other, up in front and out in back. Work up a good rhythm, up and back, for 50 counts, before transferring the action to the other leg. Of course, the hip muscles are supposed to do the work.

Eleanor Connolly, Edward Keating Expected to Marry This Weekend

By Hope Ridings Miller

AN APPLICATION for a marriage license, discovered in District Court offices yesterday, indicates that Miss Eleanor Mary Connolly, of 1426 Thirty-third Street, and Edward Keating, editor of Labor, and former Representative from Colorado, are to be married. Msgr. Edward L. Buckey will officiate at the ceremony which, so rumor has it, will take place this weekend.

Miss Eleanor Connolly

The principals in the case are not yet ready to make known their plans. Miss Connolly could not be reached by telephone yesterday. Mr. Keating declined to discuss the matter and close friends of the couple urged that the announcement not be printed until Monday. But Mr. Keating, who has been engaged in newspaper business for many years, should know that good stories can't be kept on the ice of silence that long. Not when the bride-elect is one of Washington's social lights and the prospective bridegroom is prominently known all over the country.

Miss Connolly has called the Capital "home" for many years, having come here first as a student at the Georgetown Convent of the Visitation, and later staying on as hostess for her brother, Lieut. Col. Maurice Connolly, Air Corps, when he was the first Democrat to represent the old Third Iowa District in Congress.

Long Prominent in Welfare Work

Active in civic and welfare organizations here for many years, Miss Connolly has devoted much time to the Visitation Convent Alumnae Association, of which she has been president since 1939. She assisted Miss Mabel T. Boardman in developing a staff assistants corps in the American Red Cross after the World War and, in recent months, she has spent much of her time working on current projects of the Red Cross. She has traveled abroad extensively and has devoted a great deal of attention to promoting Christian and patriotic education for young people.

One of her most recent trips was to Mexico, where she accompanied Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes when the latter was completing her latest book, "The Grace of Guadalupe." A few weeks ago Miss Connolly feted Mrs. Keyes at a large tea at the Sulgrave Club, and it was there I first heard the rumor that the hostess might be walking down the wedding aisle some time soon.

Capital Resident Since 1913

Mr. Keating, a native of Kansas, has been a Washington resident since 1913, coming here as Congressman at large from Colorado. Before that he had been engaged in newspaper work, serving on the staff of the Denver Republican, then on the Denver Times and the Rocky Mountain News, and finally as publisher of the Pueblo Leader. In Congress from 1913 until 1918, he was then appointed by Speaker Champ Clark as a member of the joint congressional committee on the reclassification of Government employes. He drafted the final report of that group.

During his years in Congress Mr. Keating became a leader of the labor group, and, in 1920, he was made editor of Labor, the official Washington newspaper of the Associated Railroad organization. Mr. Keating's first wife was Margaret Gordon Sloan Keating, who died in February, 1939, at their residence, 2311 Connecticut Avenue, where Mr. Keating still lives.

The marriage license was the last one filed in District Court Monday afternoon. So, according to the D. C. law, the marriage can take place Friday—or later. Tea table talk has it that the ceremony will be a very quiet one on Saturday. But I can't vouch for that.

Mrs. Dempsey Fetes Nebraskan

Mrs. Wallace Dempsey entertained at luncheon yesterday at her apartment in Woodley Park Towers in honor of Mrs. Christopher Abbott, of Hyannis, Nebr. Mrs. Abbott accompanied her husband here a few days ago when he came to attend the Chamber of Commerce convention.

Guests included Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Otis Bland, Mrs. Harold Cooley, Mrs. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. Lindsey Warren, Mrs. Harry Coffey, Mrs. Charles F. MacLaughlin.

Mrs. Kemper Entertains 250

Mrs. James Scott Kemper, wife of the National Director of the Chamber of Commerce, entertained 250 wives of the Chamber of Commerce delegates at tea yesterday afternoon in the gold ballroom of the Shoreham.

Receiving with Mrs. Kemper were Mrs. Henry I. Harriman, of Boston; Mrs. John W. O'Leary, of Chicago, and Mrs. Harper Sibley, of Rochester, N. Y. Mrs. Kemper was gowned in blue and wore a small flowered hat with blue veiling.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Chauncey Depew Snow, Mrs. W. J. Moll, Mrs. A. B. Gunnerson, Mrs. Edward Bacher, Mrs. Lawrence F. Hurley, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. Joyce O'Hara, Mrs. Terence Cunneen, Mrs. Ben Lambe, Mrs. Stuart Fitzpatrick and Mrs. Ralph Bradford.

Mrs. Stone Heads Yugoslav Group Formed Here

Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of Associate Justice Stone, is honorary chairman of the Washington Committee of the American Friends of Yugoslavia, organized to raise funds for Yugoslav refugee relief. The parent committee in New York, headed by Frank Polk, includes Hamilton Fish Armstrong, Wendell Willkie, William Chadbourne, Col. William J. Donovan, Malvina Hoffman and Thomas J. Watson.

Mrs. Ernest G. Draper is vice chairman of this group which expects to include educational projects to foster Yugoslav ideals as well as to give to the American public a knowledge of the problems to be solved in Southeastern Europe at the end of the war. Miss Alice Dodge is Secretary and Edward Burling, jr., is treasurer.

Among those who will serve on the committee are Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Lammot Belin, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mrs. Albert Dewey, Miss Pauletta Guffey, Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Miss Bell Gurnee, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, Mrs. Charles L. McNary, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Mrs. Adolph Miller, Mrs. Albert P. Niblack, Miss Mary Patton, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Mrs. Millard Tydings and Mrs. Arthur Woods.

New Yorkers Buy Canterbury Farm

Canterbury Farm in Virginia—second in fame only to the North Wales Club in Warrenton—has been bought by Mr. and Mrs. Leon Cotnareanu, formerly of Rumania and now of New York City, it was learned yesterday.

The 980-acre estate near Warrenton was bought and developed by Temple Gwathmey, well known Gentleman rider.

Mrs. Harry Slocum and Mrs. Detlow Marthinson perch on the rails at Meadowbrook to get a better view of the grounds where their committee will officiate at the Junior League Horse Show, which will be given May 16-17-18 for the benefit of the social service department of the children's hospital. Mrs. Slocum is in charge of the counter car committee and Mrs. Marthinson is chairman of the marionettes committee. Plans for the show were discussed at the Junior League monthly luncheon at their headquarters yesterday

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

COUNTESS DE BAILLET-LATOUR was hostess at a "linger on" cocktail party at her home in Georgetown the other evening. Guests gathered round a buffet table in the garden to the strains of an agreeably soft-toned accordion and as dusk fell candles flickered in crystal hurricane shades.

Most welcomed guest at the party was the hostess' mother, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, who had just arrived back from a long stay in Florida. Mrs. Dunn said she was full of health and, indeed, she looked so, with the prettiest suntan of the season nicely set off by a white-collared navy tailleur and a pert white hat. She told us that her younger daughter, Cynthia, who is engaged to Alexander Cochrane, jr., would not be married before autumn, at the earliest. Cynthia's fiance plans to take his bride out West to live on a ranch and is out there now as a cowboy, learning the business "from the ground up"—not, we all hoped, from the saddle down.

AS THE evening grew cool, Countess de Baillet-Latour invited her guests into the house for a buffet supper in front of the open fire. After supper Mrs. Bennett Wright sang to the accompaniment of the accordion. Her appealing voice was occasionally drowned out by a burst of song from Baron James Baeyens, who apparently couldn't decide whether he most enjoyed listening to Mrs. Wright, or singing himself.

Count George Lasocki was accompanied to the party by his good-looking wife, the latter just back from a trip to New York. Countess Lasocka motored up to the big city with Donna Julia Brambilla and paid a visit to her mother, Countess Helene Chlapowska. Countess Chlapowska, who was a prisoner of the Gestapo in Poland, has been lecturing about her experiences ever since she arrived in the United States last October. In June she will go to California for a lecture tour of several months.

Seen here and there at Countess de Baillet-Latour's were Prince Kyril Sherbatow, about to catch a train for New York, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Page, Baroness Baeyens, Commander Bennett Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. George Howe. Also dropping by during the evening were Angus Malcolm of the British Embassy—he rarely has time for parties these days—Mrs. Arthur Krock, Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Mrs. Anthony Rumbold, the Assistant Naval Attache and the Marquise de Levis Mirepoix, Sylvia Szechenyi, Count Fumasoni Biondi, Theodore Rousseau, Alex Hagner and a number of others.

MRS. Warren Delano Robbins entertained informally at cocktails the other afternoon at her house on Prospect Avenue in Georgetown. Strolling in her pocket-handkerchief garden with its wide and lovely view over Key Bridge, the Potomac River and the Virginia shore, one realizes how Prospect Avenue got its name. It was nice seeing Robert Kelley again. He is home on leave from his post as First Secretary at the U. S. Embassy in Turkey. After an absence of about five years, he was greeted by one lady in the casual manner of Washington, where everyone comes and goes. She merely said, rather accusingly, "You've been away."

Also preparing to take off for foreign parts after home leave were the new U. S. Ambassador to Panama and Mrs. Edwin C. Wilson. Certainly they make one of the most handsomest couples in the Diplomatic Corps and one of the most popular. Others enjoying Mrs. Robbin's hospitality were Donna Julia Brambilla, Mrs. Philip Coffin, Mrs. Marion Warburg, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dewey, Col. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, the U. S. Minister to Latvia—yes he still is—and Mrs. John Wiley, and Prince and Princess Sherbatow.

Many Dinners Given in Honor Of Celebrities

Washington officialdom was dining out in droves last night visiting notables and a number of local celebrities were feted at a record round of events. Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg was guest of honor at a dinner given by the British Ambassador and Lady Halifax. The Chinese Foreign Minister, Dr. Quo Tai-Chi, met a number of Capitalites at the dinner given for him by the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu-Shih. The Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb entertained at one in a series of dinners they are giving this season, and Col. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim had a sizable company dining with them.

Meanwhile, Maj. and Mrs. R. M. Stewart-Richardson, Dr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne and Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman had guests dining with them before going on to the benefit concert at the Mayflower Hotel.

Grand Duchess Charlotte, who came to town in connection with the current Virginia garden tour, will be hostess at dinners tonight and tomorrow night at the Luxembourg Legation. Among those asked to the dinner for her last night at the British Embassy fete were representative members of Congress, several other officials and a few members of the British Embassy staff.

Embassy Dinners Draw Officials

The Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau and the Secretary of War and Mrs. Henry Stimson were ranking guests at the dinner at the Chinese Embassy. Others there were T. V. Soong, president of the Bank of China, and Mrs. Soong; Senator and Mrs. Alben Barkley, Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, the Chinese Minister to Cuba, T. T. Li, who recently arrived here from Havana; the Counselor of the embassy, Liu Chieh and Mrs. Liu; the First Secretary, Tswenling Tsui, and the Second Secretary, Kien-wen Yu and Mrs. Yu.

Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Holcomb entertained in their quarters at the Marine Barracks. The dinner was one of four that they have planned. They will entertain again tonight and also on May 6 and May 16.

Returning home from New York late yesterday afternoon, Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim was accompanied by her mother-in-law, Mr. Daniel Guggenheim, who will be her guest for several days. The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels were ranking guests at the dinner last night. Covers were laid for 28. Mrs. Guggenheim will be hostess at a luncheon tomorrow and the following day she and Col. Guggenheim will leave for Williamsburg, Va., to spend the weekend. They will be back in Washington on Monday.

Several Dinners Precede Concert

Maj. and Mrs. Stewart-Richardson and Dr. and Mrs. Bayne were joint dinner hosts at the 1925 F Street Club. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sard, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilber, Wing Commander and Mrs. D. F. C. Anderson, and Squadron Leader R. S. Mills, of the British Embassy, and Commander and Mrs. William Heard. Later the company went on to the Mayflower Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman had as their guests at dinner, and later, at the concert, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Sir Richard Tute, former Chief Justice of Nassau, and William V. C. Ruxton, national head of the British-American Ambulance Corps, of which Mrs. Tuckerman is Washington chairman.

The concert was given by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Glee Club and proceeds are to be turned over to the British-American Ambulance Corps. Among those who made brief speeches during the intermission were Senator Theodore F. Green, Senator Styles Bridges, former Senator William H. King and Mr. Ruxton.

Mrs. Edwin Parker Gives Garden Tea And Musicale

A garden tea, followed by a musicale, entertained a number of Washingtonians yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Edwin B. Parker entertained at her home, 2001 Twenty-fourth Street.

Guests arriving at 5 o'clock were ushered to the terrace, where the tea and punch tables were centers of interest. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall and Mrs. Charles Acker.

The guest artist of the afternoon was Priscilla Huffmaster Peterson, pianist, whose program was given directly after the tea.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Greek Minister, Cimon Diamantopolous, has returned from New York, where he stayed at the Ambassador Hotel. During his visit to Manhattan he attended a luncheon given by the Friends of the Near East.

The Financial Counselor of the Norwegian legation and Mme. Christensen have returned to their New York apartment at the Waldorf after a visit in Los Angeles with their son, Lars Christensen, jr., and their son-in-law, Oysten Bogen.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken will entertain next Tuesday at their annual cocktail party for members of the American Law Institute.

Edward C. Van Devanter has cards out for a party on Wednesday afternoon, May 7, in honor of Mrs. Alfred Wilcox. The function will take place at the Sulgrave Club.

Dr. and Mme. Ricardo J. Alfaro will be hosts at a tea on Saturday from 5 to 7 at their residence.

Mr. and Mrs. William Marion Guthrie have issued invitations to a tea on Sunday, May 11, from 5 to 7 at their home, Ayrlawn, 3200 Ellicott Street.

Dr. ad Mrs. M. Burtrum Crabill, of 1747 P Street, hope to return May 4 from Jacksonville, Fla. Their departure has been delayed because Dr. Crabill is ill.

Col. and Mrs. N. T. Kirk and Dr. and Mrs. F. R. Hook, of Washington, are at the Greenbriar Hotel in White Sulphur Springs this week for the meeting of the American Surgical Association.

Totourskys Entertain For Miss Mollari

Dr. and Mrs. Basil Totoursky entertained at a reception at their home last night in honor of Miss Erna Mollari, following her concert at Pierce Hall.

Among those attending were the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, the Minister of El Salvador and Senora de Castro, the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle, Senator and Mrs. Dennis Chavez and many others.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

DESPITE predictions that this would prove a gloomy season, Washington is just as gay as always in April and May. The world may be falling to pieces, but the usual schedule of dinners and receptions here goes right on unabated. The only feature missing this spring are the large debutante parties which made Washington so hectic this time last year.

Visiting firemen and causes are responsible for many, though not all, of the larger parties. Practically every official wife is involved in a round of functions for dignitaries from all over the world. South Americans especially are being feted within an inch of their lives. When the Argentine Foreign Minister and Senora Ruiz Guinazi arrive, they will find that Ambassador Espil and the Protocol Division of the State Department have mapped out a series of luncheons, dinners and receptions which will probably leave the visitors gasping.

SENOR GUINAZI, incidentally, is an aviation fan. He wanted to come to this country from Rome by Clipper, but children trouble has obliged him to take a boat. Of their nine children, five will come to Washington with the distinguished couple. Their eldest son shocked his conservative family several years ago by writing a book titled "Why Revolution is a Necessity in Argentina."

DR. LEO S. LOWE, Director General of the Pan American Union, is keeping his fingers crossed for good weather on Wednesday evening, May 14. He plans to open up the beautiful Aztec garden of the Union for the reception which the envoys of all the other America Republics will give for the President and Mrs. Roosevelt. The garden will be specially illuminated for the occasion. There'll be dancing, with probably a marimba orchestra to add a South American touch. Some 700 guests have been invited, another reason why Dr. Rowe is praying for clear skies.

A Latin American reception in honor of the Chief Executive is not new in Washington annals, though this is the first since the Coolidge days. The first was given as long ago as the Wilson Administration. The envoys made plans to honor President Herbert Hoover, but the depression came along and Mr. Hoover felt such a big reception would strike a definitely sour note. So it was canceled.

STRANGE AS IT may seem, private parties are almost as numerous as official functions. Senator and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg and Arthur jr. have cards out for a tea on Sunday for the newly married George Renchards. The former Stellita Stapleton and her husband spent their honeymoon at White Sulphur Springs, but after a week Mr. Renchard had to return to his desk in the State Department . . . Mrs. Richard McCreery and Miss Carolyn Nash are among those planning dinners for Sunday. Miss Nash also will give a small cocktail party today . . . Douglas Parmentier, of the Theater Guild, was here for the opening of "Somewhere in France." He was a dinner guest of Mrs. Arthur Fowler that evening. Mr. Parmentier is a former editor of Harpers.

"NOW THAT we have five children, we decided it was time to move to the country," said Mrs. George Howe the other afternoon. The Howes have two English refugees staying with them, as well as their own three children. Early in July they will lease their home in Georgetown to Mrs. Grace Eustis and will go some miles beyond Olney, Md., to occupy the old Bowie farm for a year and a half. The owner is doing it over, with Mr. Howe as the architect. He will commute to his Washington office. The two little Britishers will spend the summer with American friends in Bar Harbor.

IN WASHINGTON, from or en route to exotic posts, are William Boswell and Albert Cousins, of the Foreign Service. Mr. Boswell will leave shortly for Lisbon after serving in British Guiana. Mr. Cousins is on leave from his duties in Honduras.

Luncheon Given For Mrs. Sibley And Mrs. Compton

Mrs. Harper Sibley, of Rochester, N. Y., wife of the former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Mrs. Arthur Compton, wife of the famous University of Chicago physicist, shared honors yesterday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Ralph Church at the 1925 F Street Club.

Mrs. Ralph Brewster, wife of the Senator from Maine, and Mrs. Harold Burton, wife of the Senator from Ohio, were ranking guests in the company of 16.

Others there were Mrs. John J. O'Connor, Mrs. James Kemper, wife of the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Miss Marion Martin, Mrs. Charles M. Lea, Mrs. Perry Heath, Mrs. Harry P. Huse, Mrs. Wilson Compton, Dr. Dorothy Sells, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Mrs. Phillip Fay, of San Francisco, and Mrs. M. R. Rathkins, of Nova Scotia.

Mrs. Moran Drury Gives Luncheon For Florida Guest

Entertaining at luncheon yesterday, Mrs. Moran Drury feted Mrs. Joseph Lawrence, of Sarasota, Fla., who is visiting here as a guest of Mrs. John J. Pelly. Mrs. Pelly was also among those present at the party given at the Mayflower.

Senora de DeBayle, wife of the Minister of Nicaragua, was there, as were Mrs. Robert Patterson, Mrs. McKenzie Davison, Mrs. Benjamin Castle, Mrs. Theodore Koenig, Mrs. J. Raymond Hoover, Mrs. George Allen, Countess Cassini, Mrs. Thomas Dawson, Mrs. George Boncesco, Mrs. John Hicks 3d., Mrs. Robert Moran, Mrs. Peter Drury, Mrs. George Trible, Mrs. James Cunningham, Mrs. Walter Moyle, Mrs. Clifford McClain, Mrs. J. J. Yugoslavia's Envoy Is Press Club Speaker

By Jessie Ash Arndt

The Post Club Editor

The gallant fight of the people of Yugoslavia against avowed enemies and "friends" who betrayed their pledges, was described yesterday by the Yugoslav Minister, Constantin Fotitch, who, with Mme. Fotitch, was guest of honor at the luncheon of the Women's National Press Club at the Willard Hotel.

"Although we could not defend our independence from a military standpoint, we have saved our souls and our honor at terrific price," declared the minister, "and we have showed the world that the people in Europe still prefer to die on their feet rather than to live in shameful compromise as Axis slaves."

Declaring that the Yugoslav stand was "the most unequal combat of the war—ox cart against tanks and men against machines—Mr. Fotitch said that it was nevertheless staunch and united, with the Serbs, Croats and Slavs all determined to resist to the end. He branded as Axis propaganda the reports that the Croats were on the German side.

A "conspiracy of silence" was agreed upon by the Axis leaders in regard to the battle of Yugoslavia, he said, in an effort to make it appear that there had been no armed resistance. When this failed, the Germans went to great lengths in propagandizing their own nation in an effort to justify the Nazi attack, and to convince them that Yugoslavia had menaced German safety, he said. The "formidable fortress" described near Belgrade is one of the walls of which were built by the Romans 2,000 years ago, he said, and which has been used for the past 20 years as a park. Miss Peggy Lane, daughter of the United States Minister to Yugoslavia, showed pictures of it among the beautiful colored slides of the country she presented after Mr. Fotitch had talked.

The Minister told of the helpless position of his country, with Germans and Italians on two sides and the Hungarians and Bulgarians, who had signed treaties of perpetual friendship and cooperation only a month before repudiating these, on the other.

Nothing could have been a greater insult to Hitler, he said, than the popular uprising, showing the attitude of the people despite the fact that the former government was ready to betray the country.

The luncheon was held in the small ballroom and prolonged applause after the Minister's talk indicated appreciation of the stand his country had taken. Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, who is here organizing "Young America Wants to Help," also was a luncheon guest. Mrs. J. Fred Essary, the president, presided.

Waycroft Unit to Meet With Mrs. Reinarts

The Women's Club of Waycroft will hold its monthly meeting Friday at 1:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. John Reinarts, 1400 Ivanhoe Street. Clement Conger will show a color film of historical homes and gardens of Alexandria.

Mr. Conger, a native of Virginia, is a world traveler, and his films of France, Finland and the Low Countries before and after the war are in great demand.

The International Relations Department has combined its meetings with the general meetings for the current year. Mrs. F. S. Wheeler will give a short talk on current affairs to the group Friday.

Plan Pan-American Fiesta

Two Federal Aides Address Shoppers' Unit

The Washington League of Women Shoppers held its first meeting on household employment yesterday at the home of Mrs. Gardner Jackson in Chevy Chase, with about 50 present.

Miss Mary Robinson, of the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor, and Mrs. Melvin Hall, who has done extensive work in the WPA household employment service, were the speakers.

Miss Robinson, who spoke on household employment, outlined the progress made in employer-employe relations during the past 20 years and stressed the need for education both for employer and employe in solving the household employment problem. Those of foremost importance are: The social stigma attached to household employment; the lack of standardization in household jobs; the general lack of understanding of the problems of household employment and the need for better training of the household employe, she said.

She emphasized the need for a carefully coordinated program of training of household employes, to be followed by scientific placement and follow-up by agencies. Among agencies now engaged in such activities, Miss Robinson mentioned the Y. W. C. A., the National Women's Trade Union League and the WPA, which has the largest such program, with training courses in 21 States.

Miss Robinson also stressed the need for legislation because household employes now are excluded from the Social Security Act, receiving no old-age or unemployment insurance. They also are excluded from the Federal wage and hour law because household employment does not come under the ICC.

Mrs. Hall spoke on vocational schools and training facilities in the District. She, too, emphasized the need for better training facilities which, in turn, would help household employes both to obtain better jobs and to dignify the position of the household worker.

Diplomatic Wives Help With Fiesta

Enthusiastic cooperation is being given by Latin-American diplomatic wives and daughters in plans for the Pan-American fiesta of the Woman's National Democratic Club, set for May 16.

Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, fiesta chairman, reported at a meeting of committee heads yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel, where the event will be held.

She reported that acceptances have already been received from virtually every one of the ranking wives of the Latin-American Diplomatic Corps who have been invited to attend the fiesta as honor guests. They will receive with Mrs. Roosevelt, as honorary hostess; Mrs. Henry Wallace and Mrs. Cordell Hull.

Final plans approved at the meeting indicate that the theme of Pan-American cooperation will be stressed in every feature of the program, which follows the opening reception ceremony. Each Latin-American embassy and legation has been asked to designate a younger member of its circle to represent her republic in national fiesta costume as the flag and national anthem of each country is honored.

Mrs. Philip Dodson, chairman of the program committee, has planned a series of Mexican, Peruvian and other Latin-American dances which will be presented by talented younger members of the Latin-American diplomatic group. he Marian Chace Dancers will appear in dances of Latin-American origin especially arranged for the event and the program also will include songs by the Pan-American Choral Society and a Pan-American fashion show.

The following committee chairmen are in charge of plans for the fiesta: Mrs. Robert Jackson, tea hostess; Mrs. Paul V. McNutt, patronesses; Mrs. Frederick Halstead, arrangements; Mrs. Edward Shields, decorations; Mrs. Emmet Gudger, music; Mrs. Frank H. Buck, exhibits; Mrs. Daniel D. Terry, printed programs; Mrs. Stanley O'Connor, fashion show; Mrs. Thomas Ford, tickets; Mrs. Harllee Branch, refreshments; Mrs. E. Barrett Prettyman, ushers; Mrs. Philip Dodson, program.

Beta Sigma Phi Founders Banquet Will Be Tonight

The District of Columbia Council and local chapters of Beta Sigma Phi will hold the Founders' Day banquet at Hotel 2400 at 6:45 tonight, celebrating the tenth anniversary of the founding of the international educational sorority. There are now 1,200 chapters, with more than 22,000 members in the United States, Canada, British Columbia, Mexico, Hawaii, England and Scotland.

Preceding the banquet, formal pledging of new local members will take place, and a new chapter—Nu—will be installed. Mrs. Harold H. Burton, wife of Senator Burton, of Ohio, will be installed as District sponsor. Mrs. Burton is an international honorary member and former city sponsor of 13 chapters in Cleveland, with more than 300 members. Mrs. Helen Roberts also will be inducted as educational diretcor of Kappa chapter.

Mrs. Burton will be guest speaker, discussing "A Way of Life." Music will consist of songs by the Beta Sigma Phi chorus, under the direction of Mrs. Eloise Dettman. A skit of the "History of Beta Sigma Phi," prepared by Miss Wilhelmina Sharpe and Mrs. Elsie Knott will be presented by members of each chapter.

Madame Chairman

by Suzanne

LAST SATURDAY NIGHT, at the banquet given at Hotel 2400 by the Puerto Rican-American League, Mme. Fani d'Aulby presented her Pan American Choral Society as a feature of the program.

It was one of several appearances of the society which was formed only the first of this year and its progress already recommends it. Mme. d'Aulby, herself a former Italian opera singer, is not only coaching the young singers in their songs but in the Spanish and Portuguese languages in which they sing them. This week's rehearsal includes a Brazilian song in Portuguese, which the choral group is attempting for the first time.

The first number presented at the banquet was a Puerto Rican love song. The solo parts were taken by two members portraying a bride and bridegroom, and the other members were in picturesque native costumes, representing those in the bridal procession. The members of the chorus were artistically grouped, giving an interesting stage effect, and they sang with clear, sweet voices, a feeling for the rhythm and spirit of the music and the promise of a real contribution in this field of inter-American cultural understanding in Washington.

Their second song was a Mexican number and the third, a selection the words and music of which were written by Dr. Tomas Cajigas, whose wife was chairman of the program. It was presented as a surprise to them and delighted their many friends in the audience. The song was written by Dr. Cajigas to his wife some years ago while she was away on a visit to Puerto Rico.

The chorus will be heard again soon at the Pan American Fete, to be sponsored by the Woman's National Democratic Club with Mrs. Roosevelt as guest of honor. The wedding scene will be repeated on this occasion and other numbers will be a Brazilian country song and a rhumba.

TEA HOSTESS—The first of a series of teas to be sponsored this spring at the League of Republican Women's new headquarters was given Monday afternoon by Mrs. A. W. Henry Albers. Mrs. Howell French and Mrs. Martha Sater Miller, of Columbus, Ohio, assisted in receiving the guests, and Mrs. John Vorys and Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher presided at the tea table.

Heads Animal Rescue League

Mrs. LeVerne Beales yesterday was elected president of the Animal Rescue League of which she has been an active member for a number of years. She succeeds Mrs. Merton E. Twogood.

The election took place in connection with the annual meeting and tea held at the Carlton Hotel. Other officers for the coming year include Mrs. C. Augustus Simpson, first vice president; Mrs. E. K. Morris, secretary; Mrs. Richard M. Cutts, assistant secretary; Mrs. T. D. Goeghegan, financial secretary; Mrs. J. Dann Faber, treasurer, and Mrs. L. B. Brubaker, chairman of the house committee.

Reports were given of the league's work in calling for sick, injured, stray or unwanted animals when notified, in returning lost pets to their owners and finding as many favorable homes as possible for animals in good condition and that would make satisfactory pets. A new ambulance for answering emergency calls was given the league by a friend and has greatly increased the efficiency of its work.

Humane education is going forward with the cooperation of the public school teachers, yesterday's reports showed.

Mrs. William M. Mann, wife of the director of the National Zoological Gardens, was guest speaker at the meeting and described some of her experiences on expeditions with her husband, collecting wild animals. She also told of the care with which they are handled in being brought back to the Zoo.

Bishop Leonard And Dr. Douglass Will Be Honored

A faculty reception for Bishop and Mrs. Adna Wright Leonard and Dr. Paul F. Douglass, president-elect of the American University, will be held at 10 o'clock tonight, following the annual spring concert at the university.

It will be sponsored by the Faculty Women's Club. Hostesses for the evening are: Mrs. John E. Bentley, Mrs. A. B. Potorf, Mrs. Merritt C. Batchelder, Mrs. John L. Nuelson and Miss Georgianna Ferguson.

The refreshment committee includes Miss Jesie Ferguson, Miss Marie Van Cleve, Mrs. William B. Holton, Mrs. Earl A. Dennis and Miss Doris Snodgrass. Mrs. Edward W. Engel, Mrs. George B. Woods, Miss Mary Louise Brown and others will serve.

Washington Club Holds Style Show

Members of the Washington Club and their daughters served as models yesterday at a fashion show presented in connection with the regular Tuesday meeting of the club, arranged by Mrs. Ralph Hallett.

Those who participated were Mrs. Charles Fairfax, Mrs. John Marble, Mrs. Cabot Coville, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Mrs. George Cox, Mrs. Harry McBride, Mrs. Harold Sasscer, Mrs. Jerome Howell and Mrs. Arthur McArthur.

U. S. Scientist Retires Today After 40 Years

Today, just another day to most of us, is red lettered for Dr. Frank A. Wolff, although he'll probably spend it doing nothing more exciting than hanging pictures and shifting furniture.

WOLFF

At midnight four decades of service in the National Bureau of Standards will officially come to a close for a man who was instrumental in the establishment of that agency, probably the greatest of its kind in the world today.

Seventy years old on April 8, the Baltimore-born physicist is retiring for age. Yesterday he was occupied not in sentimental reminiscence but with the practical job of moving his home from 3701 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest to 2957 Tilden Street Northwest.

Educated at Johns Hopkins University, Dr. Wolff came to Washington in 1894 with a fresh Ph. D. degree to take a job in the Department of Agriculture and teach physics and electrical engineering at Columbian College, now George Washington University.

Lobbied for Bureau Bill

Three years later he switched to the Office of Standards, Weights and Measures. It was while he held the imposing title of "verifier of weights and measures" that, dissatisfied with the inadequacy of that nondescript establishment, he became impressed with the need of a thoroughgoing Bureau of Standards.

Joining forces with other scientists who shared his views, Dr. Wolff lobbied diligently on Capitol Hill in behalf of the measure which had been introduced to found a National Bureau of Standards. The campaign succeeded. The bill was enacted on March 3, 1901.

Was on Original Staff

Four months later, when the bureau's operation got under way, Dr. Wolff was an associate physicist on the original staff. The only survivor of that small group of scientists which toiled for establishment of the bureau, his main regret is that his retirement must, by law, become effective April 30.

He would have liked to work right up to July 1, thus rounding out exactly 40 years in the Bureau of Standards.

An expert on telephone engineering and electric meters, Dr. Wolff's retirement naturally will wean him away from the laboratory, but it won't shunt him into idleness. By avocation he is an economist and from now on he expects to have more time to study the dollar's purchasing power, inflation and public utilities.

Dr. Wolff makes his home with his wife and their daughter, Frances Wolff. A son, Lyman, lives in Salt Lake City.

Communists, Not Nazis, Most Dangerous Foe To Cuba-U. S. Aid to Britain, Editor Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The Communists, not the Nazis, are the most dangerous foe of Cuban-United States cooperation in helping Great Britain, Dr. Raul Maestri, a Cuban editor, said yesterday at the White House.

DR. MAESTRI

Dr. Maestri, assistant director of Diario de la Marina of Havana, second oldest newspaper in the Western Hemisphere, talked about conditions in the "Pearl of the Antilles" after he had been introduced to President Roosevelt, following the regular Tuesday afternoon press conference.

About four months ago, he said, the Cuban government issued a decree banning totalitarian propaganda. The Nazis, he said, are neither numerous nor well supplied with money in Cuba, and because of this and the antipropaganda decree, their influence is very limited. But the Communists, Dr. Maestri said, are both numerous and active, and, in his opinion, far too little has been done by the Cuban authorities to suppress their propaganda.

As in the United States, he said, the Communists are a recognized political party. He emphasized, however, that, unlike the United States, Cuba is not so strong that she can regard communism as merely an annoyance.

"Here is an interesting fact," Dr. Maestri said. "In Cuba the Communist Party has a larger parliamentary representation than it has anywhere in the New World. Here in the United States I don't think you have any Communists in your Congress. In Chile I believe they have two or three. But in Cuba there are eight or ten Communists in the Chamber of Deputies.

"Besides this the Communists control a number of cities, with mayors here and there. They also have a strong grip on the teachers in our schools."

On orders from Moscow, the Communist Party in Cuba, the Havana editor said, seeks to create confusion and to paralize Cuban-United States cooperation.

"We recognize in Cuba," he said, "that if Hitler takes over and mobilizes Europe, he will be a menace to the economic future of the whole Western Hemisphere.

"We have a conscription bill pending now. The Communists are fighting it with great bitterness. They are using it as a pretext to denounce the war as an imperialist war; to criticize cooperation with the United States and aid to Britain; to array labor against employers, youth against age, and the Negroes against the whites. This apparently is the Moscow program, throughout Latin America."

Dr. Maestri said he did not want to give the impression that Cuba had become a Communist country because it was far from that. But a great many Cubans, he said, felt as he did that, in the interest of Cuban unity, the decree against totalitarian propaganda ought to be used against the Communists.

Dr. Maestri is one of the Latin-American journalists invited to the United States by the State Department to make a six-weeks goodwill tour of the country. He is going from here to New York, thence to Harvard University, University of Missouri, Kansas and California.

International Law Needs Teeth, Says Dr. Williston

Nations can't make contracts because there is no international authority to enforce such agreements, Dr. Samuel Williston, emeritus professor of law at Harvard University Law School and authority on contracts, declared yesterday.

WILLISTON

Even the undertakings of governments, based on mutual consent, are disappearing under the impact of wartime acts of belligerents, he added.

"This condtion is a wartime, probably temporary, development," Dr. Williston pointed out.

"Until the war," he continued, "there had been a constant development of international law and the principles still exist as bases for possible reparations for damages to be obtained from belligerents after this conflict is over."

The need for enforcement of international agreements has been made more apparent by the failure of League of Nations sanctions before the outbreak of hostilities in Europe.

"We learned from that experience," he remarked, "that it does no good just to say 'naughty, naughty,' especially if the other fellow knows that's all you are going to do."

Nevertheless, Dr. Williston added, there is still need for some organization like the league, "with teeth in it."

The main cause of the league's failure, he asserted, was its lack of power, "of teeth with which to enforce its decisions."

Dr. Williston, who taught at Harvard University Law School for more than 50 years, will deliver the Dean Robinson Memorial Lecture at 8:15 o'clock Friday evening at Catholic University. He will speak on "Some Effects of the War Emergency on Contracts." The lecture will be given under auspices of Catholic University Law School and upon invitation of its present dean, the Rev. Dr. Robert L. White.

U. S. Navy Units At Singapore

London, April 30 (Wednesday), (INS).—The Daily Mirror early today quoted the Moscow radio as saying that two American battleships, four cruisers and other units of the United States Navy have arrived at Singapore to "relieve the British navy."

(The Navy Department in Washington, in line with its policy, would make no comment on the dispatch from London.)

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Agriculture Gets Defense Division

The agriculture division of the old National Defense Commission is being moved to the Agriculture Department, where it will be placed under the direct supervision of Agriculture Secretary Claude Wickard. Agriculture Commissioner Chester Davis is expected to resign now that it has been decided to turn his functions over to Wickard. The transfer to Agriculture was hastened, it's reported, when Davis and Wickard got into a lively scrap that grew into a name-calling contest over the functions of each in the defense program. Wickard must have received the nod from the White House as the division's transfer was ordered immediately afterwards.

Several years ago the Public Health Service made a study for the Interstate Commerce Commission on fatigue in truck drivers. Much of the information unearthed is now being used by the Army in selecting air pilots.

Decentralization of Federal bureaus was discussed yesterday on the House floor. Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee said it would be a "mighty good plan" to send some of the Federal agencies back to the States. Representative Dirksen of Illinois, who has introduced a resolution to set up a committee to study decentralization, gave the House a long list of agencies which he said could operate in the field about as well as they do here. He cited the Railroad Retirement Board, HQLC, Social Security Board, NLRB, CAA, ICC, and SEC which he said should have only a skeleton force here.

Rumors Every Week

At Interior, Dirksen suggested, Reclamation Service, Bituminous Coal Division, Indian Service and Geological Survey should be shifted to the field. He said that many agencies in Agriculture such as Forest Service, Commodity Exchange Administration and Farm Security Agency should direct their activities from the field. Dirksen argued that the mileage bill for traveling Federal employes will be around $160,000,000 this year and decentralization would save some of the travel money.

It's true, of course, that the Budget Bureau is studying a decentralization plan, but no decisions have been made and none will be for weeks. At least once a week rumors sweep through some agency that it's being ordered to Chicago or some other city. Last week it was ICC. Commissioner Monroe Johnson even called Budget Director Harold Smith to check on the report. He was told that ICC wasn't even under study at the bureau.

W. Arthur Minor, jr., Agricultural Adjustment Administration official, soon will be appointed to a key job with Farm Credit at Columbia, S. C. Edward Bell, another AAA official, has been sent to Spokane for FCA. These appointments are in line with Gov. Black's policy of giving FCA jobs to persons who have detailed knowledge of Agriculture policies. The policy brings FCA closer to the Agriculture orbit.

The building occupied by the W. & J. Sloane Furniture Co. at 711 Twelfth Street Northwest has been purchased by Uncle Sam. It will be used to house Treasury's Defense Savings staff which is expected to reach 500 employes. RFC financed the purchase. It's also planned to move Quartermaster General employes out of the new Social Security Board Building into the new District Building to give OPM employes elbow room. The moves are expected around June 1.

Wood is being fed to cows and other livestock in Finland, Denmark, Norway, Germany and other European countries. The wood is treated in some way and Agriculture scientists are trying to discover the mysteries of the process. . . . Fred A. Ironside, jr., New York attorney, has been appointed confidential legal aid to Postmaster General Walker. He formerly worked at Justice and NEC.

Treasury Department Recreation Association has elected the following subchairmen: J. C. Thornton, baseball; John D. Abrahamson, softball; Hezzie Bannister, golf; Jane Cullen, women's tennis, and H. E. Eilers, men's tennis. Bill Stratton is handling athletic activities for the association. . . . AFGE's D. C. Department will hold its first moonlight cruise Friday on the S. S. Francis Scott Key.

Nothing Lasts Long These Days

Havana, April 20 (U.P.).—A regional health officer asked the health ministry today for a new draft animal to replace a 52-year-old mule. Records showed the mule was purchased in 1907 from the United States Army after it had been condemned for Army service at the age of 16.

"The mule's strength is failing," the request said.

Now It's Up to the Army

Newark, April 29 (A.P.).—Clark Shotwell, who ate 77 bananas in a week to obtain sufficient poundage for the Army, prepared today to go to Lawson Field, Ga.

Shotwell, 20, was 5 pounds underweight when he applied for duty. He started consuming bananas, and at the end of a week weighed 111 pounds, one over the minimum.

D.C. Unit Backs Bill to Set Up Accident Board

Bills to set up an industrial accident-prevention board and give the Welfare Board authority to assume responsibility for dependent children without requiring commitment from Juvenile Court were approved yesterday by the House District public health subcommittee after hearings.

At the same time the subcommittee, headed by Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, deferred action, for lack of supporting witnesses, on a bill to ban experimentation on living dogs. Action also was deferred on a fourth bill which would order a referendum on opening and closing hours of barber shops.

Testifying on the accident-board measure, Willy Arnheim, financial secretary and business representative of the Road, Highway and Heavy Construction Laborers Union, Local 456, told the subcommittee that 57,912 industrial accidents have caused 136 deaths here in the last two years.

"I represent a union whose members are involved in more accidents than any other type of work," Arnheim declared. He was supported by John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union, and C. F. Preller, president of the Building Trades Council of the C. L. U.

3-Man Board Proposed

The bill proposes to set up a board of three members appointed by the District Commissioners. The board would be empowered to "foster, promote and develop the welfare of the wage earner" and to enforce existing safety laws.

Arnheim suggested that the bill be amended to give the board authority to make safety regulations. He said the only safety laws now covering construction workers are contained in union rules.

There was no lack of opposition to the antivivisection bill. A score of Washington physicians and Federal medical authorities protested it.

Progress of medical science and the national defense program could be impeded by the bill's passage, the subcommittee was told. Dogs, it was pointed out, are used to determine the toxic effect of gases used in warfare and the effect of sudden altitude changes on airplane pilots.

Dr. Frederick F. Fishbak, of the District Medical Society, said that organization is opposed to the bill. Lieut. Col. M. E. Barker, of the chemical warfare service, said the proposed legislation would halt gas mask development.

Many Oppose Bill

Other foes of the bill included Dr. Joseph S. Wall, of the medical society; Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant District health officer; Dr. K. R. Lundvig, of the office of the surgeon general; Dr. Benjamin F. Jones, of the Public Health Service; Dr. H. W. Schoeing, of the Federal Bureau of Animal Industry; Dr. A. E. Wight, of the National Institute of Health; Dr. George B. Roth, of the Georgetown University medical school; Dr. M. R. Smith, of the National Institute of Health, and Dr. Sanford D. Larkin, of the National Research Council.

The Rev. C. S. Longacre, general secretary of the Religious Liberty Association of America, opposed the barber bill on the ground that while most barbers would vote for Sunday closing, some, for religious reasons, would want to have the shops closed on another day.

Charles Bovello, former president of the Barbers Union, Local 239, and Harry Wheeler, the union's secretary-treasurer, indorsed the bill. Many barbers, Bovello said, work from 8 a. m. to as late as midnight and have suffered health impairment.

Navy Awards Contract

Safety Awards Given to 285 District Government Drivers

For safely driving a total of nearly 2,000,000 miles without an accident in 1940—a distance equal to 80 circlings of the earth—285 District Government drivers last night were awarded National Safety Council certificates by the District Safety Committee.

In a brief ceremony held in the North Interior Building the 285 men, both white and colored, were given the "diplomas" by William T. Cameron, chief safety adviser of the Labor Department division of labor standards.

"You men tonight," Cameron said, "have won these awards under the most adverse driving conditions." In a description of driving hazards, he declared, "careful driving is no longer enough. You have to be prepared to avoid the drunken driver . . . reckless driver . . . and the one who comes suddenly through a stop sign."

Assistant Engineer Commissioner Beverly Snow, general chairman of the committee, told the men "we are very proud of you men, especially because more than 90 of you are receiving four-year awards."

Crime Wave Charge Hits Parole Body

Trinidad Group Calls For Less Leniency By District Board To Combat Thefts

To combat "the existing crime wave," the Trinidad Citizens Association called last night for less leniency on the part of the District Parole Board in granting probation and parole.

The organization, meeting at Wheatley School, Montello Avenue and Neal Street Northeast, blamed parolees and criminals on probation for "many holdups."

In another resolution, opposition to the Randolph rent control bill was expressed, on the grounds that no rent price emergency exists except possibly in the center of Washington.

The association also called on Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst to include the paving of Benning Road cartracks in his proposed long-range highway improvement program, made public last week. The organization did not indorse the program officially, holding that the Trinidad community would benefit only slightly under it.

Poor illumination in the K Street Viaduct was blamed by the Trinidad citizens for a fatal accident there April 10, in which a colored man was struck by an automobile as he pushed a truck.

In other resolutions, the association called for more frequent cleaning of alleys in the community, a full-time supervisor at the Wheatley School Playground and paving of alleys in the rear of the 1300 block of Queen Street Northeast.

Southwest Civic

The Southwest Civic Association expressed opposition last night to legislation which would broaden the Alley Dwelling Authority's power to condemn property.

"The authority has done nothing but tear down colored people's houses and has done nothing to provide other dwellings for our people," said John T. Rhines, president of the association.

He said more than 600 colored families had been dispossessed in Southwest Washington.

The association, meeting at the Southwest Community House, Second and E Streets Southwest, unanimously concurred in a resolution adopted last week by the Southwest Citizens Association to establish a liaison between the two organizations composed of the presidents of each. They will strive for closer cooperation between the associations in their work.

A resolution was adopted opposing the Municipal Assembly as unnecessary duplication of the Citizens and Civic Federations.

Connecticut Avenue

Seventy-five members of the Connecticut Avenue Association, organization of men and women with businesses on the thoroughfare, dined and danced last night at the Mayflower Hotel.

Highlight of the evening was the presentation of gifts to two past officers of the association, Forrest Oakley made the presentation to L. R. Colburn, past president, and L. E. Schrenier.

The dinner was followed by a program by petrformers from a local dance studio.

Thieves Take Autos Of 2 U. S. Officials

Washington thieves left two Government officials without their autos last night, police said.

James L. Fly, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, reported his car stolen when he failed to find it on Twelfth Street between Constitution and Pennsylvania Avenue, where he parked it. Representative Robert F. Rich, of Pennsylvania, said his auto was stolen from the 100 block of E Street Northwest.

Aged Woman Injured By Child, Dies

Knocked to the sidewalk by a child who accidentally ran into her on April 20, Mrs. Mamie Guelick, 85, of 515 H Street Northwest, died at Gallinger Hospital yesterday of complications resulting from a hip fracture.

Police did not determine the name of the child involved. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald certified her death as accidental.

Leo Sowerby Leads Festival At Cathedral

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Leo Sowerby conducts a choir festival at the Tuesday evensong service in Washington Cathedral.

Coming from Chicago to discuss ideals in church music at a conference held yesterday afternoon in St. Alban's guild hall, Leo Sowerby exemplified some of his principles by conducting a choir festival at the evensong service in Washington Cathedral. The program he had arranged for the occasion had been rehearsed by the participating choirs of Washington Cathedral, Church of the Epiphany, St. Margaret's Church and Covenant-First Presbyterian Church under the direction of their respective choirmasters: Paul Callaway, Adolf Torovsky, Charlotte Klein and Theodore C. Schaefer.

BROWN

Himself a composer of music for the church, as well as of secular works in various forms, and an organist of distinction, Dr. Sowerby presented a program which ranged chronologically from William Byrd to the present day.

After the processional hymn, "Marion," the program opened with "Behold, the Tabernacle of God Is With Men" by the English-born Canadian composer, Healey Willan, who has an unusual harmonic idiom in part-writing for voices. The evensong service included George John Bennett's setting of Psalm 141 and Thomas Attwood Walmisley's D minor setting of the Magnificat and the Nunc Dimittis.

The festival proper consisted of William Byrd's "Justorum Animae," Dr. Sowerby's "Now There Lightens Upon Us a Holy Daybreak," Charles Wood's "Glory and Laud and Honor" and David McK. Williams' "In the Year that King Uzziah Died, I Saw Also the Lord." The service then continued with the offertory hymn, "Tallis' Canon;" the Te Deum in Dr. Sowerby's D minor setting, and the recessional hymn, "Vigili et Sancti."

Recreational Setup Inquiry Set for Tuesday

A public airing of Washington's decade-old recreation controversy was imminent last night as Representative John F. Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, set Tuesday at 10 a. m. as date for a hearing of proponents of opposing theories of public play supervision in the District.

The views of one party are embodied in a bill Hunter introduced by request yesterday to merge administrative authority over play facilities of the public schools, the District Commissioners and the National Capital Parks under a recreation board of nine members.

Two weeks ago, Hunter, also by request, introduced a measure to create a department of recreation headed by an executive board composed of a recreation superintendent and directors of playgrounds and community centers.

The later bill was transmitted to Congress by President Roosevelt.

The bill was accompanied by a report signed by Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the Park and Planning Commission; Irving Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks; Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, and District Commissioner John Russell Young.

"The District," the report said, "had been conducting public recreation through several independent agencies. For the last ten years efforts have been made in the interest of efficiency, economy and growth to unify this work under one control and with one trained executive."

Inquest Set In Death Of Messenger

Policeman Blames Barking Dog For Fatal Crash Of Auto, Bicyclist

D. C. traffic deaths this year . 28
Total this date last year 17
District total last year 79

A coroner's jury this morning will investigate the traffic death of a 17-year-old Western Union messenger whose death yesterday raised the District toll this year to 28.

BRODERICK

The victim, William E. Broderick, of 64 I Street Northwest, died at Casualty Hospital shortly after noon of a fractured skull received in a collision with an automobile at Orren and Oates Streets Northeast, a short time before.

Lieut. William J. Liverman, of the Accident Prevention Unit, blamed the youth's death on a barking dog which was pursuing the messenger's bicycle.

William was riding south on Orren Street, Liverman said, and was apparently trying to outdistance the dog. The youth was looking back over his right shoulder, it was said, when he rode into the side of an automobile operated by Phillip Lawrence, colored, of 2017 Allen Place Northwest.

Lawrence was driving west on Oates Street and told police he did not see the bicyclist until the youth was only about 6 feet away. Lawrence said he swerved his machine but was unable to avoid the collision. He will appear at the inquest.

Capital Proclaimed Second Safest Cty

Despite the death of 21 persons as compared with 16 for the same period of 1940, Washington yesterday was named the Nation's second safest large city in the number of traffic fatalities during the first three months of 1941.

The National Safety Council announced that New York led the cities of more than 500,000 population, with 9.2 deaths for 100,000 population and Washington came second with 9.9 per 100,000.

However, an increase in traffic fatalities was Nation-wide. They numbered 8,110, 16 per cent over the corresponding period of 1940.

Washington's traffic death rate in 1940 was the lowest in the Nation.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Vera Zorina Is Latest Star of Actors' Benefit

List Mounting for May 11, at National; 'Caught in the Draft' Previewed at Uptown; This, That and the Other About the Theater

PICKING UP where we left off a few days ago, it is Sue Seymour Cooke who calls up from the next-door Munsey Building virtually at the boiling point of enthusiasm over the prospect of an all-star ensemble of players for the Actors' Fund Benefit to be celebrated in the National Theater on Sunday night, May 11.

BELL

Sue Seymour Cooke has been associated with these admirable charities for a wide span of years and knows her way around in the tax exempt theater. By a strange twist of luck and no prescience, up to yesterday we were even with Mrs. Cooke's roster of stars already articled. Their names already have appeared in this space—Gracie Fields, Georgie Jessel and the others. But on the last mail comes another addition to the list. Vera Zorina, the dancing star of "Louisiana Purchase," will be down for the Benefit. And that is something. From now on, the big names will be spilling in faster than you can count them.

Having ourself been closely identified with the local Actors' Fund Benefits over a considerable spread of years, it falls within our definite knowledge that this is one of the most economically and efficiently operated charities in the United States. The Actors' Fund of America is administered by veterans of the theater who serve gratuitously and see to it that the greatest good to the greatest number accrues from the sums the Fund is able to collect. A far larger percentage of every dollar that goes into the Actors' Fund finds its way to its ultimate beneficiary than ever remains from your dollar after the Government tax collectors get through with it.

Furthermore, even if the bill to be presented in the National on the night of May 11 were not worth a nickel, the evening should be worth a million to the tried and true of the theater because it will be in the nature of a memorial to Daniel Frohman, who devoted his life to the succor of the incapacitated and indigent of the playhouse. Such a beloved character as "Uncle Dan" deserves a testimonial worthy of the memory of his kindly deeds during a long and useful life.

Aping Hollywood Again

That "sneak preview," out at the Warner Brothers' Uptown Theater last night at 9, was of Paramount's production of "Caught in the Draft," in which the costellar roles are played by Dorothy Lamour and Bob Hope, whose likenesses in their parts appear on this page—one hopes. This is a screen subject which it is felt by those who should know will have an appreciable influence upon the mental slants of those being inducted into the armed forces of the United States, even if it is a comedy. Many in high places were anxious to see it and many of the Paramount high command were equally anxious to know what the public would think about it. The Uptown's audience last night was sprinkled with high officers of the Federal establishment. The tabulations of the appraisal cards handed out to the cash customers are not yet available.

Due to a delightful dilation of box-office increment, Dwight Deere Wiman announces that instead of closing on Saturday night, May 3, as was originally planned, his production of John van Druten's comedy hit, "Old Acquaintance," in which Jane Cowl and Peggy Wood are costarred, will continue indefinitely at the Broadhurst Theater in New York. To those who saw it here as the "command performance," in conjunction with the President's Birthday Celebrations, in January, this will seem no more than is deserved by a breezy and brilliantly played bit of feminine ferocity.

If You Care for Cocktails

The management of the Cross Roads Theater, over there at Bailey's Cross Roads in Virginia, is heaving a cocktail party in the Congressional Room of the Willard Hotel on Saturday afternoon, "in order that you may meet the old and new members of our group." It will be a pleasure.

The Earle Theater seems to have booked Charlie Spivak and His Orchestra by what is generally known as the skin of its teeth. Canceled earlier in the season by reason of commitments that could not be lightly brushed off, Mr. Spivak, a Washington product, and his crew come next to the Earle as the last stop on their vaudeville tour. If delays and impediments constitute a "buildup" Charlie ought to be a smash on Thirteenth Street. And probably will be.

All-Shook-Up-and-Nervous Note

Without those expected April showers, what goes on with all those expected May flowers?

Everybody Seems Gay About It but the Horse

DOROTHY LAMOUR AND BOB HOPE

costarred in Paramount's production of "Caught in the Draft," which you will be seeing on a local screen before too long. Every hero, it seems, must ride a white horse. Mr. Hope becomes a hero, at least in Miss Lamour's eyes, hence the third member of the group. He looks strangely like Hobart Bosworth's famous Arabian thoroughbred, Cameo

Shy as Stand-in, Lad Now Acting

Three-and-a-half-year-old Johnny Smith finds himself an actor all because he was camera shy.

One of Greer Garson's foundlings in "Blossoms in the Dust" needed a stand-in. Little Johnny won the job, ut Johnny was so shy that Director Mervyn Le Roy had a hard time getting him to even stand before the camera. He took the youngster in hand himself, started coaching him personally. Within three day sJohnny liked his job. Within a week he began to talk to members of the cast, revealed so many endearing mannerisms that now Le Roy has promised Johnny a spot in the picture all to himself.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 29 (INS).—Temperamental as some people have found Preston Sturges, you can not take away from him his ability to give the actors with whom he works a new lease on their careers. He started Brian Donlevy on an entirely new life as an actor. He made a glamour girl out of Barbara Stanwyck and put Henry Fonda in dress clothes. And now Veronica Lake, whom Paramount is building, gets an opportunity to do something really important on the screen. She steps into the lead in "Sullivan's Travels," the next Sturges picture.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Veronica, of course, is controversial. There are those who think she has a great future and others who do not. Whatever is the opinion, you must admit the girl has an interesting personality and for a young actress who has made one picture she has attracted wide attention. I am putting my money on her.

Gene Tierney's eye trouble is much more serious than the outside world knows or realizes. Her eyes closed tight and she's unable to open them after she has been on the set for any length of time. Twentieth Century-Fox called all sorts of specialists who are endeavoring to find what is causing the trouble and if she is allergic to some specific thing. Gene is back in the hospital and "Belle Starr" has been postponed waiting for her to recover. Once before she suffered this same eye congestion when she was on the stage and then, as now, the physicians were baffled. The delay on "Belle Starr" has cost Twentieth $50,000.

Sonja Henie will change her mind about retiring from the screen if her new contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer materializes. I hear that "Sun Valley" is Sonja's last picture for Twentieth Century and she soon will be put on a long-term contract by the Louis B. Mayer Co. The contract, I hear, is ready for the signing and Metro is looking for stories to fit the little fancy figure skater. I saw Sonja at the Twentieth Century-Fox party with her bridegroom, Dan Topping. She weighs about 105 pounds and looks so attractive.

One of these days—and soon—reporters will be told that Alice Faye and Phil Harris are married. The only thing that stands in the way is Phil's decree which will not be final for several months. Alice's divorce from Tony Martin was final in March. Phil is telling anybody interested that he'll marry her the minute he can. She must feel the same way about him, for she intended to take three months' vacation and then up and returned to Hollywood after a jaunt through the canal and three days in New York.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Yvonne Valle, once wed to Maurice Chevalier, clippered into New York last week; Rita Kaufman Lowe, Eddie's ex, has adopted a little girl named Susan; a wedding cake, bridal decorations and favors for all 12 guests made the Zanuck dinner given for Constance Bennett and Gilbert Roland a gala affair. Connie wore the prettiest print I have seen this year. Joan and Walter Wanger, the Mervyn LeRoys, the William Goetzes and Andy Lawlor and Mrs. Sylvia Fairbanks were the other guests. The LeRoys are building a home in Bel Air and Doris is planning it herself; Lupe Velez and John Shelton a surprising new duet at Charlie Foys; it's three nights in a row for Bob Cobb and Frances Gifford at the House of Murphy.

The Twentieth Century-Fox party at the Biltmore was lots of fun. Sally Eilers and Harry Joe Brown entertained before the dinner with a cocktail party and among their guests was Jean Gabin, who speaks English with a real American accent. Brenda Joyce in her wedding dress was with her groom, Owen Ward, and our other bride, Illona Massey, radiantly lovely, danced every dance with Alan Curtis; Milton Berle's master of ceremonies stint was very funny—particularly when he and Laird Cregar did a Carmen Miranda act. Carmen was in great form and responded to many encores. Janis Carter, with Cesar Romero, is a very pretty girl. Carole Landis, with George Montgomery, attracted much attention in an off-the-shoulder gown. Several people commented on the resemblance of John Sutton's wife to Grace Moore.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 29.

After ten years on the Hollywood front, Producer Edgar Selwyn is striking out for New York and his old love, the stage. (Well, what did you think I was talking about?)

HOPPER

He'll do "We Fought at Argues," Frederick Hazlitt Brennan's swell play about a tugboat cockney who decides to pay no attention to the war because his government had paid no attention to his letter, two years before, predicting events. He takes his tugboat to the evacuation of Dunkerque only because his brother-in-law is there, and manages to return with troops and disabled destroyer. When he can't pay a gasoline bill, the government takes his boat. As he stands surveying the ruins of his bombed home, in which his wife was killed, a King's messenger presents him not with his ship's papers, but with a citation for bravery. He's still against the whole blasted business.

Metro thought so well of the story they advanced $30,000 on it. Edgar wanted Tommy Mitchell to do the lead, but Tommy's dreadful accident leaves that up in the air.

At last Cliff Edwards, who used to be nothing but "Ukelele Ike," is playing a uke and singing songs again.. Gets his chance in "Flight Patrol." He'd been away from music so long he had to get a union card before he could play again . . . And how about Fuzzy Knight, one of our best comedy-piano players—who never gets a whack at anything but comedy? It "don't make sense, but it's fun, "ain't" it, kids?

I believe Warner Brothers have some real drama in the idea behind "Dive Bomber." The conflict lies in the fact that the progress in aircraft has exceeded the advancement in fliers. In other words, airplanes can fly at altitudes much higher than man can survive without mechanical assistance. Ralph Bellamy and Errol Flynn are playing the roles of air corps doctors whose duty is to select young men physically capable of meeting the exhausting demands of dive bombing.

Those sailor boys at San Diego were constantly confusing actors on this picture with regular officers and saluting them. But the real payoff came when a gob asked a magnificently uniformed man, looking like Errol Flynn, for his autograph. He'd braced a real live lieutenant commander—(rest of story deleted!)

Jon Hall and his wife, Frances Langford, own a big estate down in Florida, which is practically high treason for a couple of Californians. And I hear they're even shopping around for a cruiser for Florida.

Emmett Lynn's latest gag is about the actress who built a home of Spanish design and then divorced her husband because he acted so Chili! Ouch!

Bud Abbott's definition of a hula girl: "A shake in the grass."

Leonard Lyons:

New York, April 29.

LORD HALIFAX: Howard Christie, of the R. A. F., who holds two decorations—he was shot down twice in one day, in the September fight above London—revealed this story at El Morocco: When he arrived in New York, he lunched with an old classmate of his—and discovered that the classmate now is atached to the German Consulate here. "We just had a couple of beers, anyway," said Christie . . . He also related that when he was in a London hospital, the patient in the next bed was the Nazi airman he had brought down. The Nazi refused to talk to him, until he learned that Christie held the same rank he did. Then they chatter amicably . . . Col. Frank Knox: Jim Forrestal, your aide, is returning next week, with Ben Cohen . . . John Garfield: Warner's has withdrawn your new movie, "Fiesta in Manhattan," lest it offend the Mexican government.

LYONS

WILLIAM H. STONEMAN—John Steinbeck, who was scheduled to go to London, has changed his mind. Steinbeck says that there already are too many writers in London now. . . . J. P. Morgan—Tin Pan Alley is invading your district. Richard Kollmar's new music-publishing firm, Musicana, Inc., will have its offices at 1 Wall Street. . . . Allyn Joslyn—You'd better be nice to Walter Wagner, your understudy in "Arsenic and Old Lace." He's one of your bosses—he owns a piece of the show. W. W.—At last the proper sphere has been found for the writers of New York columns—writing fairy tales. Ben Hecht, the New York columnist, will make the adaptation of "Hans Christian Andersen's Fairy Tales" for Walt Disney.

HENRY LUCE—Victor Mature, to whose night club appearances with pretty ladies Life magazine devoted seven pages of photos, got his first movie break as a result of a feature spread in the November, 1939, issue of Screen-Guide. In that issue, Mature deplored the glamour boy tactics, and said he had no taste for Wine, Women and Song . . . Tommy Corcoran—Are you trying to bring Ed Noble—the former Assistant Secretary of Commerce, who quit to support Willkie—back into the Government?

MAYOR LaGUARDIA—Howard Lindsay and Dorothy Stickney haven't benefited from your anti-noise campaign. They've had to move four times because each time a construction gang began erecting a new building next door. When they invited Russel Crouse to their home and Crouse asked directions, Dorothy said: "Just listen for the loudest noise—and go next door."

NOEL COWARD—Maxie Rosenbloom is billing himself as "the Noel Coward of the Illiterati" . . . Bernarr Macfadden—Ten years ago you fired one of your employes at Liberty magazine. The May 10 issue will have an article about him—Mort Lewis, author of "Behind the Mike" radio programs . . . Cordell Hull—A relative of the man who once represented America at the Embassy in Berlin was so anxious to get into the Army that he memorized the eye chart, and has been inducted—despite his poor eyesight. . . . Monty Woolley—Robert Benchley left for Hollywood Friday to be tested for the leading role in "The Man Who Came to Dinner."

TOMMY MANVILLE—Sophie Tucker's autobiography, "Last of the Red Hot Mamas," is ready for publication. It will be bound in asbestos . . . Gov. Charles Edison—Clinton P. Brewer, who has served 19 years at the State Prison in Trenton—after being convicted of slaying his wife during a quarrel—has a job waiting for him, if you parole him. Count Basie is ready to hire him as an arranger. Brewer wrote "Stampede in G Minor," which Basie recorded.

Laurel & Hardy—Your old comedy, "The Flying Deuces," may be sold for distribution in Russia. Boris Morros, who produced that movie, won't receive any money for the Moscow sale. But the rubles will be delievered to the members of Morros' faimly who still are in Russia.

Olsen & Johnson: The Winter Garden Theater, in Winter Garden, Fla., is the first to buy the as yet unmade movie version of your "Hellzapoppin," which has been running these many years at the Winter Garden, in New York. . . . Abner Surpless: Aren't you planning to run against Fiorello LaGuardia in the Republican Mayoralty primaries this year? . . . Fred Allen: Leo Lindy forwarded the check he received for broadcasting with you, to Winston Churchill—who wrote that he had premised the money to a fnud to aid Britain's homeless . . . Sidney Hillman: Whenever your colleague, Mr. Knudsen, sends his autographed picture to someone interested in music, he signs it "From a Poor Xylophone Player—W. S. Knudsen."

FASHION ACADEMY: At the Stork Club's Balloon Night Sunday—where Sherman Billingsley presents tailored suits to young ladies who compete for the prizes—the winning balloon was captured by Mrs. John Jacob Astor . . . James Stewart: Jeffrey Lynn will be the next leading man in Hollywood to be conscripted into the Army . . . Harold Ross: Wolcott Gibbs, drama critic for your New Yorker magazine, has been writing uncomplimentary reports about William Saroyan's plays. At the Critics Circle dinner Saroyan had his revenge. The playwright engaged Gibbs in a dice game—and won $70 from the drama critic.

Director Exacting, But Stars Like It!

Director George Cukor has never pulled his punches when directing glamorous women stars, yet they all adore him.

A writer, doig a natinoal magazine story about Cukor, wanted some anecddotes about the way he directs. Rosalind Russell had been told she could have the afternoon off from "The Uniform" set and was on her way home, but she turned around and came back when she heard the writer wanted her to talk about Cukor.

Joan Crawford was also asked to talk. She was ready to get a permanent wave, but she postponed the appointment to tell anecdotes concerning Cukor.

They were both much more interested and gave far more of their time than if the story had been about themselves.

'The Student Prince' Returns; Only Two New Films Arrive

Earle

"AFFECTIONATELY YOURS." Merle Oberon, Dennis Morgan and Rita Hayworth are the stars of this comedy which tells of a playboy foreign correspondent who hurries home from Europe to prevent his wife from marrying another man. Close behind him comes a young career girl, determined to keep him from it. Ralph Bellamy, George Tobias, James Gleason, Hattie McDaniel and Jerome Cowan are featured. Charlie Spivak and his Washington Orchestra headline the stage bill, featuring Ginger Maylen, Garry Stevens and Bunny Shawker. Emmett Oldfield and Company, Evelyn Farney and Joey Rardin are the other stage entertainers. Opens Friday morning.

"THE PEOPLE VS. DR. KILDARE." Seventh in the series, this Dr. Kildare release concerns the young medico's association with the star of an ice revue who has been injured in an auto accident. Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Bonita Granville and Red Skelton are the chief performers. Patricia Bowman headlines the stage revue with her celebrated dancing. Ahrren and Broderick contribute comedy, John Gallus the novelty and Cortello's Canine Mimics their versatility. Sam Jack Kaufman, Lynn Allison and Art Brown also will be on deck. Opens tomorrow morning.

RKO-Keith's

"THE DEVIL AND MISS JONES." Keiths current attraction, in which Jean Arthur costars with Charles Coburn, is expected to continue at the Fifteenth Street house for several more days until the opening of the theater's May Movie Jubilee. This current comedy finds Miss Arthur teaching Coburns Department Store owner something of the ways of union life.

Palace

"ZIEGFELD GIRL." Judy Garland, James Stewart, Hedy Lararr, Lana Turner, Tony Martin and Edward Everett Horton are the princile players in this large-scale musical which, detailing the rise to fame of three talented beauties, continues into its second week on F Street.

Metropolitan

"THE GREAT LIE." After two weeks at the Earle, Bette Davis' latest film returns to the downtown sector. George Brent and Mary Astor are the others involved in this triangle formed by a Maryland girl, a likeable aviator and a famous pianist. Opens Friday morning.

Columbia

"THE LADY EVE." Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda return in the Preston Sturgis comedy hit after an engagement at the Palace. The comedy pictures a beautiful card sharp who falls in love with the rich and simple brewer for whom she has set her dishonest cap. Charles Coburn, Eric Blore and William Frawley are featured. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"BLACKOUT." The latest of the British mystery yarns to fascinate the Washington screens continues into a second week. Conrad Veidt plays the strange Danish sea captain and Valerie Hobson is the lady involved—very much involved. Parts of the film were made with the cooperation of the British Royal Navy.

Trans-Lux

"AUSTRALIA AT WAR." This "March of Time" release focuces its cameras on the efforts of seven million people down under to do their part as members of the embattled Empire. "Information Please" features Ruth Gordon in her second visit with the mighty brains and "Abdul the Bulbul Ameer" is the cartoon short of the newsreel bill. Opens Friday morning.

Gayety

"TONS OF FUN." With beautiful Zorita, the dancer, in the top spot, this musical revue opens Sunday afternoon at the burlesque theater with Harry J. Conley and Billy Wallace handling the chief comedy assignments. Connie Ryan, Franklin Hopkins and Bond Bonnie are featured. This week's revue, starring Marion Miller and Charles Kemper, continues through Saturday night.

THE AMUSEMENT PARK announces that this week's most popular of its 50-odd attractions is the "Flying Scooter," attributing its interest to the widespread air-mindedness in America today. With seating capacity for two this timely amusement, resting on cables, is self-operated according to the principles of aeronautics. Paul Kain's Orchestra plays in the ballroom for dancing weeknights from 9 until midnight.

Open-Air

"THE BANK DICK," W. C. Fields' latest comedy, is revived as cofeature with "Submarine Patrol" for a three-night run commencing tomorrow evening at the drive-in auto theater, on the Richmond Highway. The Open Air now is offering midnight performances every Saturday. Current on the large screen are "Seven Sinners," with Marlene Dietrich, and "Blondie Has Servant Trouble."

Jones Exposition

CLYDE BEATTY, the day's most noted animal trainer, is the top attraction of the Johnny J. Jones Exposition opening a ten-day stay today at Twenty-first and C Streets northeast. E. Lawrence Phillips, of Washington, owns and operates the big show.

Civic Theater

"MEN IN WHITE." Sidney Kingsley's play is being presented at the Wardman Park Theater by the acting company of The Washington Civic Theater under the direction of Leon Askin. Elizabeth Winburn, Charles Baker, Murray Sheehan, Ted Tenley, William Zuckert and Ted Field are included in the large cast. Continues through Saturday night, with no performance Thursday.

University Theater

"COOK BOOK." Catholic University's annual musical concludes its record-breaking run tonight in the theater on the university campus. Like last year's musical based on the career of George M. Cohan, this is a biography of a comedian—Joe Cook. The Harlequins' large company is headed by Leo Brady, who wrote the play with Walter Kerr.

Star Sprains Neck In Kissing Scenes

Irene Rich played her first love scene in ten years—and sprained her neck.

Including rehearsals, Miss Rich kissed Moroni Olsen 20 times in one day for a scene in Warner Bros.' "Three Sons o' Guns." Irene delivered each osculation by turning her head over her shoulder and reaching for Olsen's head.

She called the studio the next morning. She couldn't come to work. The doctor told her not to move her head for several days.

FREE America's Complete Motor Trip Guide from Your Mileage Merchant - NOW

Don't burn up brakes, tires, gasoline, patience and priceless vacation time, asking your way. You'll know every turn from the clear, flat, accurate maps in your handy patent-hinged Conoco Touraide*—Free!

Don't grope for good bathing beaches, fishing places, golf courses. You'll know where to go, from complete details—supplied as you request—with your Free Conoco Touraide.

Don't twist your neck and perhaps your bumper, blindly hunting the good hotels, camps or lodgings. You'll know even the rates and facilities from your thorough, made-to-order Conoco Touraide. There' nothing like it for sale, but Your Mileage Merchant gets it for you promptly FREE.

Don't think you'll be obligated. You'll know, however, when you see your extra fine private Touraide—ENTIRELY FREE—that there must be an extra large number of motorists who are extra loyal to Conoco Bronz-z-z gasoline and Conoco Germ Processed oil. They want every trip they make to be "gallons shorter," so they choose smooth-firing, hill-powered Conoco Bronz-z-z-z. And from patented Conoco Germ Processed oil their engines get wondrous OIL-PLATING. That's the type of lubrication which "joins up" to the cylinder walls, piston rings, bearings and other parts, just as closely as any other form of plating on your car. Then OIL-PLATING cannot go draining down "between times"... and can save your engine from thousands of un-oiled starts this Spring and Summer. Nor can this "joined up" OIL-PLATING all quickly whirl off and fry up as you speed along. So you can understand how OIL-PLATING helps to keep down wear—the best way to keep up the engine's performance and the oil-level, too.

THE SOONER YOU ASK

for your Free Conoco Touraide, the more time you get to work out the best use of every vacation hour and dollar. You get real help—and thrilling anticipation—from Touraide color pictures, intelligent descriptions, and other guidance.

Your Mileage Merchant is the man who OIL-PLATES your engine, as he gives you the change to Germ Processed oil, in the ordinary way, at an ordinary price. And Your Mileage Merchant is the man who arranges for your complete Conoco Touraide, custom-built to your own full specifications... ALL FREE: Don't wait! Go today to your nearby Conoco station... Vinson Bill's Closed Shop Ban To Be Removed, Sabath Says

Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the House Rules Committee, predicted yesterday that the committee will refuse to send the Vinson compulsory mediation bill to the floor in its present form.

If the measure is referred back to the Naval Affairs Committee, its sponsors are expected to remove the bill's ban on new closed shop contracts and lighten the penalties for violation of the 25-day cooling off period in defense labor disputes, now set at a maximum of one year's imprisonment or a $5,000 fine or both.

The Rules Committee again deferred action on the bill at its meeting yesterday and prepared to give it further consideration at 10:30 a. m. today.

Several members expressed confidence that the Rules Committee would approve the bill today, but conceded that the more controversial provisions are not likely to be accepted by the House. Legislative leaders have stated that the bill will not come onto the House floor before next week, whatever the Rules Committee's action is today.

Representative Sabath indicated he would not necessarily oppose a rule on the Vinson bill, if revised by the Naval Committee, but that he would fight the measure on the House floor.

"I am simply following the advice of the chamber of commerce and other employer groups, organized labor, and defense officials like Stimson and Knudsen, who are all opposed to this type of legislation," Sabath said.

"I think Congress needs a little cooling off period," he added. "The labor situation is coming along all right."

Orson Welles Out To Defend Bridges

New York, April 28 (AP).—Formation of a "citizens committee for Harry Bridges" with Orson Welles, actor-producer, as a cofounder was announced today by the committee's headquarters.

Its stated purpose is to "inform public opinion as to the realities" behind the current deportation trial of Bridges, West Coast labor leader.

Welles' cocommitteemen include John Henry Hammond, jr., New York music patron, and Prof. F. O. Mathhiessen, Harvard University.

Tydings Offers Bill to Compel BudgetBalance

Legislation providing for "an automatically balanced budget" was introduced yesterday by Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, with a warning that with unchecked spending, "sooner or later we will have no Government at all."

Tydings, chairman of the special Senate committee "To Find Ways and Means for an Automatically Balanced Budget," said the committee soon will open public hearings on two proposed constitutional amendments and the bill reported yesterday.

The bill would require that total appropriations, except in years of severe depression, war or "extraordinary peacetime preparedness," must always be equaled by current taxation.

Congress would be called upon to draw up a series of 15 tax schedules, the first of which would provide sufficient revenue to balance the average annual budget from 1930 to 1940, designated in the bill "as the annual normal Federal expense."

When peacetime appropriations exceeded this figure, one of the higher tax schedules, sufficient to keep the budget balanced, would automatically come into force.

Any year that tax revenues did not reach the anticipated level, the resulting deficit would be the first charge against tax yields in the succeeding year.

Extraordinary expenses, resulting from serious business depression or war preparations, would be liquidated over a 20-year period, with the necessary new tax schedules included in the emergency appropriation bills.

The two amendments introduced by Tydings, he explained to the Senate, would accomplish the same purpose as the bill but would place the "balanced budget" principle in the Constitution, so that one Congress could not "undo the act of the preceding Congress."

Under the bill or the amendments, Tydings said, "every generation would pay for the peacetime expenditures of that generation.

"We would not have the situation where one Administration, whether Democratic or Republican, could buy popularity at the expense of future generations," he added.

Post Art Window Features Marines

A seascape, with ochre the predominant color impression instead of the usual blue and white associated with boats and water, is one of the features of this week's Washington Post art window. Called "Star Boats Racing," this water color is by Gerald Foster, of Westfield, N. J.

The other two paintings of the current week's exhibit are also of boats and the sea. One shows tropic skies, water and foliage blending into a background for "Bahamian Sloop," by Frederic K. Wykes, of Grand Rapids, Mich. The other conforms to the traditional concept—cobalt sky, turquoise sea, snowy canvas, fleecy clouds, the old square-rigger in the foreground with gulls flying astern. It's Warden Woods painting of the old Comet, built by Webb in New York in 1853.

All three paintings are from the water color competition of the Division of Fine Arts which supplies a rotating exhibit of American water colors for The Post's art window at 1337 E Street Northwest.

ROOTIN,' TOOTIN,' SHOOTIN' "MAYTIME"! Six-shooters brandished by prancing dancers give a belligerent start to the Lotus' new "Maytime" revue. It's true the six-guns turn out to be cappistols, but they explode most gratifyingly . . . An Indian war dance comes later with the lassies arrayed in feathered bonnets of all the colors of the Grand Canyon and Jimmy Bright beating the tom-toms in blood curdling rhythm . . . Other thrills are a-plenty, too. St. Clair and Durand toss each other around like rubber balls. The Regan Boys do muscle testing tricks in slow motion. Gertrude Erdy, luscious Californian, steps in staccato fashion, delights the eye with 1941's prettiest 1890 hair-do.

NEPTUNE NEWS. Joe Collins, leader of the Neptune Room's new Mad Hatters, looks like Kay Kyser, acts like Jimmy (Schnozzle) Durante and sings like a near relative of Nelson Eddy's He can also do coin tricks and is likely to scare the life ou of you with his funny stories. . . . The Mad Hatters were showered with hatfuls of requests at their opening, clicked immediately. Among their top numbers are "Tutti Frutti" and "Donkey's Serenade." . . . A delightful Neptune interlude was by Washington's own barytone, Jack Quigley, who's studied voice with noted Reinald Werrenrath.

The Nightingale reports that since Rodd Raffell's orchestra took over on last June 21, every single week's business has shown an increase over the corresponding week of the previous year.

FUN AN UNDILUTED. "Hi, Si," by the Three Smart Girls in Jack Coffey's show in the Metronome Room. A bit of corn on the cob, but well roasted. . . . "Big Kanakas," Don Carper's new version of strange happenings on the beach at Waikiki. It puts Cafe Caprice patrons into spasms. . . . You'd think he was a customer.

GLEN ECHO'S PAUL KAIN holds a master's degree in music from Notre Dame. His first orchestra played at famed St. Catherine's Hotel on Catalina Island off the California coast. He's worked steadily East, playing at dance spots in Hollywood, Reno, Chicago, St. Louis and New York City where he played a long engagement in the Rainbow Grill.

MELODY TO REMEMBER. "My Sister and I," when Eileen George, of the Anchor Room, gives full value to all of its chilling implications . . . "River St. Marie," when played by the King Cole Trio in Paul Young's. Listen to that magical guitar . . . "Czardasfursten," a long name for a beautiful bit of Hungarian music when played by the gypsy music makers of the Plymouth. It's the theme song of Kalman's operetta of the same name . . . Anything sung by that angelic blonde, Eve Knight, of the King Cole Room.

We've just found out about the skeleton in the closet of Joe Brown, good-looking guitarist of Mayfair's Gentlemen of Rhythm. He led a trio in "The Streets of Paris" at the Chicago Worlds Fair. So now he wouldn't give you a nickel to see Cleopatra do an Ann Corio.

STRANGE DISCOVERIES. The Rainbow Room has the prettiest paper napkins in town. But they're so covered with design that you cant make notes on 'em . . . Those gorgeous tulips in Hi Hat aren't real. Said Oscar, "Now dont act disillusioned. You ought to know that real tulips don't grow that big.' In Hi Hat we also saw a lady wearing the first smoked glasses of the 1941 summer, though she was wrapped in silver foxes to ward off chills. Olmsted's feature seven luncheons on their menu because seven is a lucky number . . . Dick Ashby, owner of Dick's Grill, says that if you place a glass of good ale in the ice box, it will be just as good next day or next year as when it was drawn.

DIVER BEND DECORATIONS are full of imagination. The cocoanut heads over the bar are made more uncanny by Gay 90's moustaches. Here you'll also find a quantity of miniature log cabins. In the category of still life, too, is the River Bend cat, a huge gray pussy who always sleeps by the fire with one eye open.

IMPORTANT LAST FLASH. Ray or Roy Shields, we don't know which (they're twins and look exactly alike), just come to bring the glad news that they're opening the stunning Annapolis Roads Club. The Shields twins are noted professional swimmers and plan to give Annapolis Roads the finest in golf and swimming. Levi Yoder, winner of the Middle Atlantic championship, will be the golf pro. There will be weekly dances for club members and their guests.

Police Protect Mrs. Roosevelt In Los Angeles

Los Angeles, April 29 (AP).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was given a protective escort of Secret Service men and police for her lecture appearance at Philharmonic Auditorium last night.

Capt. R. E. Giese, of the homicide squad, said plainclothesmen were assigned to the hall after an anonymous letter had reported it would be "picketed for peace." There was no disturbance.

In her informal question and answer period, the First Lady was asked "Do you think the President will keep his promise and keep us out of war?"

"He hasn't made any such promise," Mrs. Roosevelt replied. "He has said he wants peace. If it is possible to stay at peace, he will do so . . . But the ultimate decision rests with the people."

To another who said "Tell the President we will not give our lives any place except in America," she declared:

"Any American who will not fight any place his country asks him to fight is not an American."

Dykes Has His Say

Chicago, April 29.—The old spade caller, Jimmy Dykes, was sitting in the White Sox dressing room, as is his habit, during his club's 20 minutes of batting practice. The only big league manager who does not feel compelled to occupy a dugout seat in the pre-game exercises, explained his presence in the clubhouse very simply.

POVICH

"I've been managing the White Sox for seven years and I'm not going to learn anything about this club in the next 20 minutes that I didn't know already," said Dykes refreshingly. "This is a swell time to answer some of my mail."

Dykes was willing to answer a few pointed questions, too. He said he thought Bob Feller was stupid for bringing up the fact that certain third base coaches were stealing his pitches.

"Feller should have kept his mouth shut and gone along and pitched like he can. When he's got his stuff, nobody's going to lick him anyway. When he tipped his mitt and said somebody was liable to get conked on the head if they stole his signs he got himself in trouble. The first time he hits a man it'll make him look bad, and if it happens to one of my guys, my players are apt to climb him. Roger Peckinpaugh didn't help Feller much when he chimed in, too, with the inference that Feller might hit somebody. Even if it's innocent, it will make Feller look bad if it happens."

Taft Wright Missed

His White Sox were doing well enough, Dykes admitted, and he said they'd do better when Taft Wright get back into the lineup after he rids himself of the pneumonia germ. "That's the fellow we miss—Wright," said Dykes. "But today, he's feeling happy for the first time since he was sick. I saw him out there with a bat in his hand today and that means he's happy. That's his idea of heaven, a bat to swing. Here's long life to Clark Griffith. He certainly did me a couple of nice favors."

Those were, we presumed, the trades that sent Wright and Joe Kuhel from the Nats to the White Sox. "That's right. How any club could let a couple of players like that go for the stuff I gave them is beyond me. Kuhel has been the best first baseman in the league since he joined us, and that Wright is a wonder. He's always getting a piece of that ball and getting on base. He can hit in the dark. I don't know what kind of an outfielder he was with Washington, but he hasn't given me any headaches with his fielding. I'd like about three of him in my outfield."

Dykes wasn't exactly unhappy, either, about another fellow he wangled from the Washington club a few years ago—Bill Dietrich. Dykes grabbed him for the $7,500 waiver price a few weeks after the Nats had claimed him from the Athletics for the same figure, only to turn him loose in some disgust. Dietrich has now won three games for the White Sox, perhaps because he has started only three times.

Dykes Waives Credit for Dietrich

"I didn't make him a good pitcher," said Dykes. "He always had plenty of stuff to win with, but he didn't know how to use it. He was licked as soon as somebody made an error behind him. His disposition was rotten. He was a bad influence on the ball team, in fact. And then all of a sudden, he learned how to take it. We've even got him smiling when somebody kicks one behind him. When he's in that frame of mind, he's a swell pitcher."

Dykes is well pleased with all items in general. "Why not?" He said. "This is beginning to look like a swell league. Even my White Sox have got a chance to win that pennant in this league. I haven't seen any club in the West that looks too tough, and from what I hear the Yankees aren't scaring anybody. We're winning ball games without hitting. It ought to be pretty nice when Wright gets back in our lineup and our guys start to hit. It looks like a great summer for James."

Place Horse Runs Wide, Loses Yards

Blue Pair Shows No Signs of Injury, Wins in 1:36 3-5 By Nearly a Length

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Staff Writer

Louisville, Ky., April 29.—The high speed Blue Pair nipped Whirlaway in the Derby trial mile today, but the big "preview" to Saturday's Kentucky Derby didn't prove a thing except that Whirlaway still can come like the wind if he's able to steer a straight road home.

In the final test before the sixty-seventh running of the Blue Grass classic—which Col. Matt Winn, Churchill Downs head, predicted today would be the biggest ever with 100,000 spectators on hand—Tom Bragg's colt finished three-quarters of a length in front of Whirlaway, but only because Warren Wright's little chestnut ran wide just as the field came out of the stretch turn.

Up to that point, Whirlaway had come from fifth place in the field of six—some nine lengths back of the leaders—to look the pace-setters in the eye. Then, after running on the outside of horses all the way round the stretch bend, he couldn't straighten out and was more than halfway across the track when the field headed for home. This lost him enough ground to cost him the race.

Blue Pair Looks Okay

As for Blue Pair, which was rumored to be suffering from a popped splint, he didn't run like a colt bothered by an injury. He covered the 8 furlongs in blistering time of 1:36 3-5, and, if something did hurt him, as reports persisted, it apparently wasn't serious enough either to annoy him today or to keep him from Saturday's Derby. For, at the finish, both Willie Crump and Ben Jones, respective trainers, announced that Blue Pair and Whirlaway definitely would answer when the bugles sound 'My Old Kentucky Home."

There were four other starters in today's race. But after this quartet—Cadmium, Shaun G. Quintilian and Sporting—finished far down the track, there was little chance any of them would get to the post Saturday.

By running wide, Whirlaway lost between six and eight lengths.

But he was coming again at the finish, and, if the race had been over the Derby mile-and-a-quarter instead of just the mile he would almost certainly have left Blue Pair behind.

Some press box "experts" were free to admit that Whirlaway received anything but the best ride in the world from Wendell Eads. It was pointed out that Eads sent the son of Blenheim II on the outside, on the turn, and this would hardly help him to point his nose for home in a hurry when the gallopers straightened out, if he has a habit of bearing to the outside fence. Eads was replaced by Eddie Arcaro as Whirlaway's Derby jockey after the horse finished second to Our Boots in the Blue Grass Stakes at Keeneland last week.

Our Boots had his last stiff prep for the Derby today, going the full 1¼ miles in 2:07 in a workout that left him looking none too fresh when he finished.

"Fresh money" and a wide-open field were the reasons given for expecting the biggest Derby in history Saturday.

Ferrell's Error Ends in Freak Double Play

Here's Rick Ferrell tagging out Joe Kuhel at the plate in third inning of game at Chicago yesterday, culmination of an accidental double play. Bases full, one out. Lodigiani tapped to Pitcher Masterson who threw to Ferrell to force man at home. Ferrell's throw to first hit Lodigiani on the back, bounced off Archie's face into Masterson's glove who threw home nailing Kuhel trying to score from second

Former Washington First Sacker Breaks Tie With One-Timer; Bloodworth Nat Star

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Chicago, April 29.—The Nats had a sorry encounter with Joe Kuhel today. The first baseman they had traded to White Sox forcibly reminded Clark Griffith of that 4-year-old error. From a box seat in the stands, the Nats' owner was compelled to watch his former employe slug the White Sox to a 3-2 victory.

Kuhel crashed a home run into the right-field stands in the fourth inning to wipe out Washington's 1-0 lead at that point, and in the fifth with the score tied at 2-2, he slammed home the winning run with a single to right. He was having a large afternoon. In the seventh, he bashed out a third straight hit. It proved to be superfluous, but it was fun.

While Kuhel was blasting the Nats into defeat, left-handed Thornton Lee was restricting the Washington athletes to seven hits and outpitching Walter Masterson. The Nats gave Masterson two one-run leads, but by the end of the fifth inning he was trailing, 3-2, and the scoring was ended for the day.

Bloodworth Slugs

It wasn't Jimmy Bloodworth's fault that the Nats were licked. He collected three of Washington's seven hits and scored both of the Nats' runs. The defeat is directly traceable to the Nats' puerility with men on bases in the late innings, and Right Fielder Larry Rosenthal's sensational catch of a line drive off Rick Ferrell's bat in the seventh. The Nats had the tying run on base in each of the last four innings, but never passed second base. Three double plays they hit into were of no help to the Nats, either.

Masterson's one bad inning—the fifth—cost him the ball game. He dug his own pitfall when he walked Pitcher Lee with one out to jeopardize his 2-1 lead. Then ensued three straight Chicago hits—Knickerbocker's single off Travis' glove, Appling's singe to center that scored Lee, and Kuhel's single to left that produced the winning run. Masterson was in deeper trouble a bit later when he walked Short to fill the bases with one out, but he escaped on a freak double play that deserves a separate paragraph.

Two Nabbed at Plate

Masterson grabbed up a hot drive off Lodigani's bat into the box, and forces Appling at home with a throw to Ferrell. The Nats' catcher threw to first in an attempt for a double play, but the ball bounced off the back of Lodigiani, and then off the shoulder of First Baseman Archie. Joe Kuhel, who had raced from second to third during this panic, dashed for home when he saw the loose ball in the middle of the diamond, but Masterson grabbed it up and nipped him at the plate with a throw to Ferrell.

Bloodworth doubled into right field with two out in the second for the first hit off Lee and then George Archie celebrated his debut in the West with a line-drive triple to center that scored Bloodwith and put the Nats in a 1-0 lead. It lasted no longer than the fourth, when Kuhel lined a pitch into the right-field seats with none on base.

Bloodworth again put in motion a Washington run when he opened the fifth with a single and romped to second when Kreevich boobled

Indians Beat A's, 8-3; Take Fifth Straight

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 29.—The league-leading Cleveland Indians finally broke out with the hits they've been hunting for two weeks and downed the Philadelphia Athletics in the series opener today, 8 to 3, for their fifth straight triumph.

Lou Boudreau's homer and a brace of doubles from the bat of Ken Keltner led the Indians' 15-hit attack. That was five more blows than collected in any previous American League game this campaign by the Indians, who have been winning on their airtight pitching. It also represented their largest run total.

A pungent seventh-inning rally did it, breaking a 3-to-3 tie between Chubby Dean, the Mack's starter, who permitted all but one of the Tribe blows, and Cleveland's Al Smith, another southpaw.

Tigers Defeat Red Sox, 5 to 3; Grove Beaten

By the Associated Press

Detroit, April 29.—Old Lefty Grove's charm over the Detroit Tigers, whom he has beaten 60-odd times over 15 years, failed to operate today and the Boston Red Sox went down, 5 to 3, in the series opener.

Young Johnny Gorsica held the Sox well in hand for his first victory of the season while his teammates plastered Grove for all their runs in the first three innings. Mickey Harris' fancy job of relief pitching for Boston was wasted.

The Tigers put together four hits for two runs in the first and three blows for three runs in the third to finish off Grove. Home runs by Ted Williams and Jim Tabor along with a combination of Williams' double and Joe Cronin's single gave the Sox their runs in the late innings.

Furr and Zivic Fight on May 13

Philadelphia, April 29 (AP).—Fritzie Zivic, welterweight champion, has agreed to fight Phil Furr, of Washington, D. C., at Convention Hall May 13, Promoter Phil Glassman announced today.

The New York and Pennsylvania Boxing Commissions had given Zivic the alternative of going through with the bout, originally scheduled for May 5, or be banned from rings in both States.

Yale to Give Grid Game (1) 'Back to Boys'

By the Associated Press

New Haven, Conn., April 29.—If an opponent can be found to agree to it, Yale is going to give football back to the boys who play it for at least one game next fall.

Ogden Miller, the university's athletic director, made that announcement today in response to growing alumni demand for abolition of sideline strategy by paid coaches.

"I'm willing to give it a try," said Miller. But he emphasized that the move will be an experiment pure and simple and will depend upon cooperation by one of the Elis' gridiron rivals—who include Virginia, Pennsylvania, Army, Dartmouth, Brown, Cornell, Princeton and Harvard.

Might Extend Plan

Miller admitted, however, that if the plan proved successful and made for better and livelier games (Yale won only one out of eight last season) the experiment might be extended to other sports.

The "give the game back to the boys" school of thought, as represented by letters in recent issues of the Yale alumni magazine, has been growing. Its spokesmen want all coaches to withdraw to the stands as soon as games start—and stay there. One old grad even suggested that each side appoint watchers for its opponent's coaching staff to be sure the spirit as well as the letter of the agreement was observed.

In general, what these alumni want is to put all responsibility for play in the hands of the team captains. Such an arrangement, wrote Vance McCormack, one of Yale's football immortals who now publishes the Harrisburg (Pa.) Patriot, would "relieve the coach of much of the criticism directed at him and reduce the number of 'headhunters' who always appear after a series of defeats."

Virginia Coach Is Noncommittal

Frank Murray, head football coach of Virginia—one of Yale's rivals—declined to comment last night on Miller's plan.

"Until Yale approaches us," Murray said, "I see no reason to say anything about it."

Dodgers Blast Red Hurlers to Win, 13-2

Brooklyn Hangs Up Eighth Straight Victory as Veteran Hamlin Hurls a Four-Hit Game

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, April 29.—Old Luke Hamlin was a hot potato today and his teammates were even hotter as the Brooklyn Dodgers dashed off their eighth straight victory, 13 to 2, with a 12-hit assault on the World Champion Cincinnati Reds.

Hamlin, 35-year-old right-hander, allowed only four hits, including home runs by Lonnie Frey in the first inning and Frank McCormick in the last. The other safeties were ineffectual singles in the seventh inning by McCormick and Harry Craft.

In between he held the Reds helpless with the aid of errorless and often specitacular fielding from the other Dodgers.

His methodical pitching, while good for a third win against no defeats for the "Hot Potato," was drowned out for the crowd of 17,046 by the deafening bombardment set off by the Dodgers against five Cincinnati pitchers, reading in the order of their fall, Jim Turner, Gene Thompson, Bob Logan, Johnny Hutchings and Whitey Moore.

Turner, the Tennessee milkman, kept the Dodgers scoreless on one hit through the first three innings. But after that the fireworks were terrific and did no credit to the vaunted pitching of the champions.

Terp Varsity, Frosh Track Squads Win

The combined forces of the Maryland and Catholic University freshman and varsity track crews met at College Park yesterday, and the Terrapins ran off with the honors in both duels, the varsity winning 93-33 and the yearlings 78½-38½. C. U. had only a ten-man squad.

Neither meet offered a chance to smash any of the Old Liner records, but the varsity 440-yard dash proved to be one of the most exciting races of the afternoon. Tom Devlin, Terp middle-distance man, after trailing almost the entire race, overtook O'Keefe in the home stretch to win by a yard in 51 flat.

Maryland's Tommy Fields won an easy race in the mile, leading the entire field all the way to break the tape in 4:29.2. In the frosh duel, Tiny Horn, yearling field sensation, had easy going in the discus and the shot, but did not break his record set in the opening frosh meet in the discus of 143 feet.

Sterling Kehoe, brother of Jimmy Kehoe, who paced the Old Liners for three years, headed the field in the half mile to finish way ahead of Odette, another Marylander, in 2:06.

Maryland ran away with the varsity affair, winning 12 of the 13 events, while the frosh fell in both

Berg and Doerer Meet Dettweiler, Spencer Today

Patty Berg will make her second local appearance in four days today when the 22-year-old Minneapolis professional and Tommy Doerer, jr., meet the formidable combination of Helen Dettweiler and Cliff Spencer at East Potomac.

Patty's long game will be tested by the long B and D nines of the downtown public links course as play will be from the back tees. The pudgy redhead played Kenwood in 76 strokes in a high wind on Sunday and she will have to be on her game to equal that count today.

The match will start at 2:30 and at 6:30 on the East Potomac driving range the girl professionals will conclude their local appearances with a shotmaking exhibition. An amplifying system will be available for the demonstrations.

Vigh 7-5 Favorite to Beat Mamakos at Uline Arena Tonight

New Yorker Risks Fine Ring Record

Bout Headlines Card Of 42 Rounds; Vigh Boasts 37 Kayos; DeChard in Action

Hard hitting Ernie Vigh, 21-year-old American born Hungarian from Newburg, N. Y., whose 37 knockouts in 55 professional boxng bouts have earned him a record second only to that of Joe Louis, last night was being quoted a 7 to 5 favorite over Steve Mamakos as the awaited tonight's schedule ten round middleweight feature at Uline's Arena.

Mamakos and Vigh headline a schedule 42-round show that offers exceptional supporting bouts dominated by main event fighters.

Vigh, who carries a terific punch in both hands and has been only a stone's throw removed from the world's middleweight crown on several occasions, intends using tonight's bout as a means of qualifying for a title shot with either the winner of Ken Overlin and Billy Soose or Tony Zale at Griffith Stadium in June.

Overlin Defends Title

Overlin is to defend his New York State middleweight crown against Soose at Madison Square Garden on May 9, while Zale is the acknowledged National Boxing Association champion. All parties definitely are interested in boxing the winner of Vigh and Mamakos here.

Vigh, a thick-set, broad shouldered youngster who packs 160 pounds behind a 5 feet 7½ inches frame, was considered Overlin's ranking No. 1 contender several motnhs ago following consecutive knockouts of Henry Chmielewski and Ben Brown.

Mike Jacobs, sensing a natural, matched Vigh and Billy Soose for the right to meet Overlin for the championship in Madison Square Garden, and Soose was credited with both decisions. In the first bout, however, Vigh had Soose on the floor for a count of five in the eighth round when the bell saved the Pittsburgh warrior.

An exceptional preliminary card that includes three mixed matches will be offered tonight.

Temple Routs Wixted To Upset Hoyas, 11-8

Owls Get Away to 6-Run Lead in First Two Innings; Are Never Headed; Hoyas Checked

Temple University upset Georgetown's in-and-out nine, 11-8, yesterday on the Hilltop field, causing observers once again to wonder if Georgetown really has a great club.

"We had another nightmarish afternoon," Coach Joe Judge lamented last night. "One thing about this team of mine, they don't do things half way. When they blow up they do a good job of it."

The Hoyas, suffering their second defeat in eight games, fell behind at the start when the Okls slammed Bill Wixted for three runs in both the first and second innings, and never caught up. Temple used a pair of pitchers, George Monroe and Andy Tomasic, the football star who was credited with the victory. Jim Kiernan and Vinnie Powers followed Wixted to the mound for the Hoyas.

The hard-hitting Georgetown team found Temple pitching a bit baffling and the Hoyas were restricted to eight hits, while the Owls slugged out 14.

Oddly, Temple's only loss in seven games was at the hands of Rutgers, the same highly touted team that Georgetown walloped, 19-3, here last week.

Bees Are Braves Again—Officially

Boston, April 29 (AP).—Stockholders in the recently-reorganized Boston National League baseball club demanded tonight that it again be known as the Braves, instead of the Bees. They elected Bob Quinn president.

"The boys don't like the nickname Bees, and they insist that we again call ourselves the Braves," Quinn said. "We are also going to rename our ball park Braves Field."

The change undoubtedly pleased Quinn, who has been wincing ever since Boston baseball writers rechristened the club "Bees" back in 1935.

Friends to Stage Net Meet Saturday

Friends School's annual Interscholastic Tennis Championship will start Saturday at 10 a. m. with three players from every school in the District and vicinity in action. The list was made complete with the signing of Woodrow Wilson, Tech and Coolidge for competition.

The Friends trophy will go to the winning team and a replica of the award to the individual with the most victories. Roosevelt is the defending champion and Bobby Bensinger, of the host school, defending individual champ.

Cubs Beaten In 11 Innings By Bees, 6 to 3

By the Associated Press

Boston, April 29.—Sebby Sisti's first home run of the season, a drive over the left-field fence with two on base, today enabled the Boston Bees to gain an 11-inning victory over the Chicago Cubs, 6—3.

Sisti's game-winner came after Eddie Miller doubled against Relief Pitcher Tot Pressnell with one out, and Babe Dahlgren was purposely passed. Previously the Bees lost the lead twice.

After working starter Claude Passeau for single runs in the first and second innings, the Bees found themselves in a 2-2 tie in the first of the fourth, when Bill Nicholson blasted his fifth homer of the campaign with Dom Dallessandro on base.

The Bees scored again in the last of the fourth, on two singles, only to have the Cubs deadlock the count once more in the ninth when Stan Hack singled, went to second on Phil Cavarretta's secrifice and scored on Dallessandro's third hit of the game.

Browns Get 3 Hits, Beat Gomez, 3-2

By International News Service

St. Louis, April 29.—Although they obtained only three hits off him, the St. Louis Browns handed Vernon (Lefty) Gomez his first defeat of the season today, trimming New York, 3 to 2.

Failure to find the plate brought on the downfall of Gomez and otherwise permitted the Brownites to snap a six-game losing streak.

Lefty issued four passes in a row in the opening inning, forcing in Clift with the first St. Louis run. A walk to Chet Laabs, followed by Judnich's double, accounted for the second Brownie tally in the sixth. Laabs winning the game in the eighth with a homer.

The Yanks had tied the score in the seventh on a walk, an error, an infield out and Dickey's double that accounted for two runs. The Yanks touched Bob Harris for five hits as he chalked up his first win of the year.

Horses Hitting Head-On Have Horrible Headache

By International News Service

Chicago, April 29.—Race horses, usually a headache to the better, were a headache to each other at Sportsman's Park today. As the horses reached the post for the third race, Philcade threw Jockey W. Corney, and set out on a solo tour of the oval. A moment later, Connie Sue tossed Jockey R. J. Jones, and lit out on a counter-clockwise tangent.

The horses met on the backstretch—in a head-on collision.

Neither horses nor jockeys were injured—barring a possible headache for the thoroughbreds, and went to the post and dominated the race for the first half of the 4½ furlongs, when they tired. However, Connie Sue finished third and paid $4 and Philcade finished fourth.

Phils Vacate Cellar, Beating Pirates, 6 to 2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, April 29.—The Phillies climbed out of the National League cellar today by defeating the Pittsburgh Pirates, 6 to 2, as Bill Crouch turned in a four hitter in his first start of the season.

Crouch got off to a bad start in the first inning, giving up two runs on a base on balls, Arkie Vaughan's double, an infield out and Vince DiMaggio's single, but thereafter was never in danger.

Meanwhile, the Phils drove Max Butcher to cover in the third, scoring three runs on singles by Dan Litwhiler, Heinie Mueller, a base on balls and an error, to assure victory.

Devitt Defeats Briarley, 16 to 11

Special Dispatch to The Post

Ammendale, Md., April 29.—Starting off with six runs in the first inning, Devitt Prep nine tallied in all except three periods yesterday as it outslugged Briarley Military Academy to win, 16-11, here today.

With Briarley errors helping out considerably, Devitt's Madden managed to hold a narrow margin throughout, giving up 10 hits while his mates pounded Lodge, Ingberg and Corduo for 13.

Penn Staters Beaten, 12-9 By Colonials

Special Dispatch to The Post

State College, Pa., April 29.—A heavy hitting George Washington baseball team defeated Penn State here this afternoon, 12 to 9, banging out 14 hits, including three home runs, off a trio of Lion pitchers.

The visitors scored in every inning but two, and Pitcher Ed Amendola kept eight Lion bingles well scattered.

Bill Debler, Germantown boy, was State's big gun. He batted in six runs with three hits and a sacrifice fly, including a home run in the ninth with Ruff on base.

The visitors got one homer off each Penn State hurler. Gudmundson sent one into deep left field in the second with Amendola on base. In the fifth, Picco hit to left-center with Dowd ahead, and in the eighth, Lusby made the third homer to left field with the bases empty.

Mrs. Walper Overcomes Trap Trouble to Win Keefer Cup

Posts 163; Triumphs by One Stroke

Mrs. K. Hanson 2d; Mrs. Stokes Takes Gross Prize After Mixup Over Score

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Mrs. Leo Walper recovered nicely after some midround trap trouble to win the tenth renewal of the Keefer Cup Championship yesterday at Chevy Chase by a single stroke.

Leader at the end of Monday's first 18 holes, Mrs. Walper was comfortably protecting her margin for the first eight holes of the second round but in quick succession on the par three ninth and tenth holes she ran into a five and seven after finding sand traps.

From that point to the eighteenth Mrs. Walper struggled to hold the lead and at the finish was just one shot ahead of Mrs. Kurtz Hanson, of the host club, who was making her debut in local medal play competition. Mrs. Walper's first round 82 and yesterday's 90 left her with a gross 172 and with 10 handicap shots off a net 162. Mrs. Hanson lowered her opening 99 by three shots with a 96 and deducted 16 handicap strokes from each round for a net 163.

Mrs. Walter R. Stokes, the Maryland State titlist from Manor Club, won gross honors, but only after a half-hour's discussion over whether she should be forced to accept a score one stroke higher than she actually shot. Mrs. Stokes finished with a legitimate 86, but her playing partner, Baroness de Gruben, gave her a four on the thirteenth hole instead of a three and turned the card in as 86, although it totaled 87.

When the mistake was discovered it left Mrs. Stokes, with 86, 87—163, tied with Mrs. Betty Meckley, with 84, 89—163. Host Pro Bob Barnett ruled that since Mrs. Stokes had protested in time and had not signed her card, the score should stand as 86. In the meantime Mrs. Meckley had forfeited her rights to the gross prize and so Mrs. Stokes was the winner in either case.

Mrs. J. V. Brownell, mother of Bobby, the Southern Intercollegiate champion, and Jimmy, an Army inductee in July, survived eight three putt greens to post the third low net total of 95-97, 28, 164, only two shots back of the winner.

Four tied at net 165's for the next three prizes and Mrs. Meckley was left out of the prize list by the new process of matching cards. Mrs. J. F. Gross, who lowered her opening 99 by 11 shots with an 88, the finest comeback of the tournament, won fourth net when her card matched against par left her one up.

Central and Wilson Win Interhigh Games

Vikings Work 12 Innings to Take Tech, 6-4; Tigers Upset Eastern, 5-4; Race Jumbled

By Bill Burnett

Unpredicatable schoolboy baseball outdid itself yesterday as Central and Woodrow Wilson emerged victorious from a pair of interhigh clashes.

The Vikings, who lost seven veterans by graduation and have had only five practice sessions so far this year, took 12 innings but finally whipped an experienced Tech nine, 6-4. A Wilson club that had been beaten by both Tech and Anacostia, rose in righteous wrath to nose out highly-regarded Eastern, 5-4.

As a result of the games, the three Eastern division teams in the annual series were deadlocked with one victory each and Central, the defending champion, was a half-game ahead of Western in the Western division with two straight triumphs.

Central Tops Tech

It was almost dark at Tech's diamond when Central put on its winning 2-run rally in the top half of the twelfth.

Aaron Weisenberg and Paul Sapourn had been victims of Buddy Webb's twelfth and thirteenth strikeouts when Lenny Citrembaum, who hadn't hit before, got the first safe hit of the frame. Zello Lagos, also hitless to that point, followed with another single. Finally a third hitless Viking, Sam Di Blasi, connected with a clean blow to center field. That sent Citrenbaum home with the big run, and it didn't matter that Outfielder Kelly Lewis fumbled the ball to allow Lagos to score, too.

At the start of hostilities it appeared Central was in for an easy time of it. It chalked up four runs in the second inning off as many hits, one base on balls and Martin Green's error.

Back came the Trainers, however. Buddy Webb, who hurled eight-hit ball for the losers, shattered Tech's scoreless state with a single that scored Brewer in the fourth. He later tallied himself when Second Baseman Sapourn committeed two straight misplays to send him to third and Vern Hollidge singled him in.

In the fifth Tech tied things up, 4-4, on three singles, a sacrifice and Ned Brogan's wild throw from the outfield. But despite the fact the Trainers outhit the champs, 11-8, they were unable to score again.

Weisenberg, a fragile righthander, went the distance as did Webb, fanning five opponents and walking two. Three double plays behind him helped considerably.

Briscuso Wilson Star

Wilson's Tigers surprised Eastern first in the opening stanza when they shoved in one run. With Nino Briscuso hurling shutout ball until the seventh, they sat on their lead with the tenacity of a leach.

The seventh and eighth frames, however, nearly finished the hosts. Eastern scored twice in each to grab a 4-1 lead.

Then came the payoff spree of the Wilsonites in the bottom half of the eighth. After 3 counters had been hung on their total to tie matters at 4-4, Briscuso delivered the most important blow of the day. He singled sharply to left, sending Outfielder Dick Schwab in with what proved to be the winning point.

It was the first time in two years of participation in the interhigh series that Wilson had defeated Eastern, last year's interhigh runner-up. Briscuso and Kenny Curles, the Tide's ace, hooked up in a pitching duel in which each allowed eight safeties, and it was Briscuso's talent with the bat that eventually decided. Each struck out 10.

Batting star of the battle was Jack Hoffman, Eastern outfielder, who hit safely in three of his four trips to the plate. Schwab's pair of singles proved outstanding for the winners.

Giants' Rally Fails, Cardinals Win Out, 5 to 4

By the Associated Press

New York, April 29.—St. Louis' challenging Cardinals opened their first swing through the East today with a 5-to-4 victory over the New York Giants.

They had to come from behind to do it, though, because Babe Young singled with the bases loaded in the first and the Terrymen put together three consecutive singles in the second to take a 3-0 lead and force the early removal of Fiddler Bill McGee, the Redbirds' starting pitcher.

However, the Cardinals retaliated in the fourth, hopping on their former teammate, Bob Bowman, for three singles and a triple by Martin Marion in succession and later another single by Johnny Hopp for four runs.

Terry Moore opened the fifth with a homer to give St. Louis enough margin to withstand a ninth-inning rally by the Giants. John Grodzicki received credit for the triumph.

the ball. Archie sacrificed him to third, and he scored when Left Fielder Short muffed Ferrell's line drive in his eagerness to be in throwing position.

Then eventuated that little unpleasantness in the White Sox fifth when they came up with two runs and the ball game. Danny MacFayden pitched the "last two innings for the Nats and held the Sox scoreless in a vain attempt to keep Washington in the ball game.

Cecil Travis put the tying run on base in the sixth when he doubled to center with two out, but Bloodworth abandoned him with a fly to center. In the seventh, Archie opened with a single to right, but Rightfielder Larry Rosenthal averted trouble for Lee at that point. He raced far toward left to haul in Rick Ferrell's vicious line drive for a one-handed catch. The Nats bowed out of the inning ingloriously when Ben Chapman, hitting for Masterson, grounded into a double play.

In the eighth, there was another suspicion that the Nats might tie the score when Case walked to start the inning, but in succession Cramer poped out, Welaj grounded out, and Lewis flied out. In the ninth, Bloodworth singled to left with one out and the Nats had the tying run on base again, but no longer than it took Appling, Knickerbocker and Kuhel to turn Archie's grounder into Chicago's third double play.

Raiders Beat Coolidge, 11-1; Hines Is Star

One of the best one-man performances of the schoolboy season to date was turned in yesterday by Charley Hines, Western High hurler, as the Red Raiders smashed Coolidge, 11-1, for their fourth straight triumph on the home diamond.

In addition to pitching six-hit ball for nine innings and fanning 10 Colt batters, Hines registered three hits in four times at bat. Two were singles and the third a ringing four-bagger with a mate on base in the seventh.

Don Cockrill, Raider second baseman, also had a home run. His came in the sixth with two on.

Melnicove started for the Colts but was relieved with one out after giving up four straight walks. Vaughn pitched until Hines' homer in the seventh, and then Allen took over. Between the three Western managed for seven safeties.

Blair Pitcher Gives 2 Hits But Loses, 6-1

Despite two-hit pitching by Herby Southgate, Montgomery Blair High lost its second decision in four games yesterday to Anacostia, 6-1, at the Silver Spring field.

It was a home run by Ernie Shaffer, Anacostia outfielder, which did the most damage to Southgate's cause. One run had been pushed over by the Indians and the bases were packed when Shaffer slammed his four-bagger.

O'Donnell's Nine Routs Little Tavern

O'Donnell's Sea Grill nine put in a bid for respect in the Washington Post-Industrial Baseball League yesterday when it opened its season with a 16-2 swamping of Little Tavern, a neweomer to the circuit.

Liggett and Kafka shared the mound assignment for the winners, allowing four hits before darkness forced the calling of the game with one out in the sixth. Wheatley and Bradley were pounded for 12.

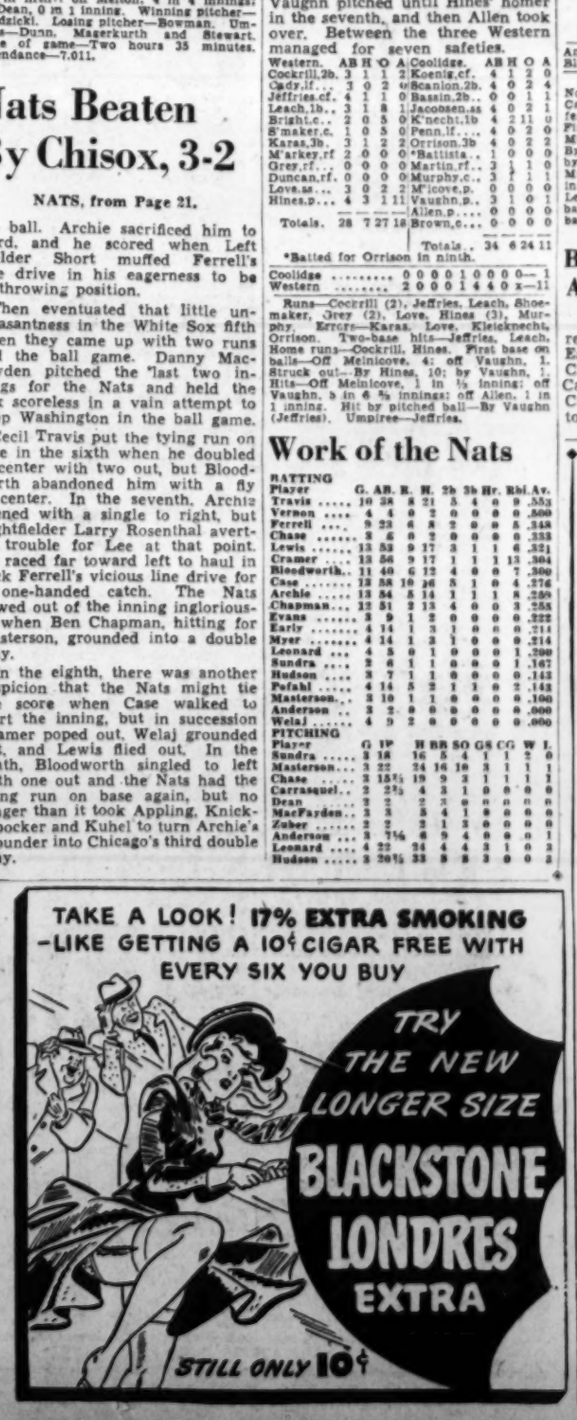
Meanwhile Freddy Nau, O'Donnell's second baseman, slides safely into third on the error



17% EXTRA SMOKING MAKES HIT

"Like getting a cigar free with every six you buy," say delighted smokers

Thousands of local cigar smokers are taking advantage of the "extra dividend" offered by the sensational new cigar called the Blackstone Londres-Extra. This new longer size cigar gives 17% extra smoking. Compared to the regular size Blackstone Londres, that's like getting a ten-cent cigar free with every six you buy. Yet the price remains only ten cents. And the quality which made the regular Blackstone Londres an outstanding favorite has been maintained 100% in the new Blackstone Londres-Extra. As Mr. William Waterman, president of Waitt & Bond, the makers, said in a recent statement: "I give my personal guarantee that the tobaccos used in the new longer-size Blackstone Londres-Extra are the same fine, costly tobaccos that have won so many friends for our regular size Londres cigar in the past." Smoke one today!

Ocean Blue Equals Record Winning Rennert at Pimlico

Picture Gives Race To Letellier Entry; Riding Light Third; Double Pays $397.70

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., April 29.—Equalling the record for the event, Crispin Oglebay's Ocean Blue was credited with a nose victory over Mrs. A. B. Letellier's Handy Tom in a thrilling battle to the wire today. The race was the eighteenth running of the $2,500 added Rennert Handicap and Ocean Blue stepped the six furlongs in 1.11 4-5, matching the time made by Worthmore in winning the 1924 renewal. However, the time was a full second over the track record shared by Main Mast and Con Amore.

Carrying top weight of 120 pounds, Ocean Blue was giving ten pounds to Handy Tom. Many in the crowd of 10,000 did not believe Ocean Blue had gotten up but the picture showed him in front by a margin not greater than two inches. Third money in the field of eleven went to Walter M. Jeffords' Riding Light.

Victor Pays $5.50

Ocean Blue's victory was the first success for the favorite players in a flat race at the meeting. He paid $5.50, but despite the excellent time, did not gain backers for the Preakness. He appeared to have been ridden out. Owner Crispin Oglebay collects 2,900 as the result of his colt's victory.

Not more than a length separated Ocean Blue and Handy Tom, the latter a 12-1 shot, from start to finish. They hooked up in earnest in midstretch and it was a game, hard battle from there to the wire with Ocean Blue appearing to lug in on his rival nearing the end. The announcement of Handy Tom's defeat brought a mild booing from the backers of the son of Sazerac.

$123.20 Shot Wins

The high point of the program from a monetary angle was the $123.20 mutuel paid by Longstone, a first-time starter who won the second race. This 2-year-old raced all over the track, but he was driving to the front at the wire. He carried the colors of C. J. Meister and was ridden by Jockey Lucas Dupps.

Those who played Longstone with Wire Me, the $10.70 winner of the first race, received a pay-off of $397.70 in the daily double. The numbers were "12 and 12," both horses winning from the extreme outside post positions.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OCEAN BLUE, $5.50, $4.10, $2.90; HANDY TOM, $9.50, $6.00; RIDING LIGHT, $5.50.

OCEAN BLUE came up on the outside of HANDY TOM in the stretch drive and was barely up for the photo decision. HANDY TOM raced clear of ROUGH COMMAND going to the turn and held on with good courage while being crowded by the winner. RIDING LIGHT gained gradually to the stretch and then weakened. PETE JR. had a rough trip.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:17. Winner, H. Neusteter's b. g. (5), by Sun Meadow—Irish Morn. Trained by H. Neusteter. Value to winner, $700. Time, 2:01¾.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MEADOW MORN, $11.40, $3.70, $2.90; HOWARD, $2.50, $2.30; BREEZING ALONG, $4.00.

MEADOW MORN rallied gamely when placed to a drive and held sway to the end. HOWARD raced very wide throughout and hung in the final sixteenth. BREEZING ALONG moved up boldly nearing the stretch and then weakened. GRAND DUKE set the pace for the half and stopped.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:46½. Off at 5:47. Winner, H. A. Parr 3d's br. h. (6), by Wrack—Pretense. Trained by R. A. White. Value to winner, $700. Time, 1:46½.

*From round 3.

Play was begun in the top-ranking Morphy Class. M. R. Paul and S. Adler counted their game in the District championship tourney, which brought that event to a close, as their game scheduled for round 2 in The Post's tourney. Adler was the winner. Paul played a first-round game with E. Nash, which was won by Paul.

A. S. Kussman, newly crowned District champion, will meet all comers free of charge at the Chess Divan tonight in an exhibition of his skill at simultaneous play.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

Maryland racing fans can prepare themselves for a delayed-action bomb. It is reported that officials have in their hands a stimulating case against a well known and successful trainer. Nothing has been said about it as yet, but there will be a lot of noise soon. Yankee Chance has come into the picture as a Preakness possibility and if he continues to train as his mile trial in 1.40 2-5 last Monday at Belmont Park indicates, Trainer Ed Snyder may send the C. V. Whitney colt here. The son of Peace Chance and Yankee Maid started only twice last season and failed to win, but Trainer Snyder was of the opinion the colt required plenty of time for development and held considerable promise. About 35 horses will be in the sale to be held in the Pimlico centerfield Friday morning, May 9, at 10 o'clock, according to Humphrey Finney, field secretary of the Maryland Breeders Association, sponsoring the auction. The estate of the late Charles H. Thieriot, New York sportsman, has consigned the Supremus mare Precept and her colt foal by Challenger II, also the yearling filly by Jean Bart from Precept. Sunpatic, the former Willis Sharpe Kilmer stallion, has been entered by Clyde Asher. Other consignments have been made by Cockade Farm, Hillendale Farm, Howard Bruce, Merryland Farm and Mill River Stable. Charles Joseph McLennan is the name selected for the son born last week to Mr. and Mrs. Charles McLennan. The name honors the late "Little Joe" McLennan, the infant's grandfather, who was one of the most popular officials American racing has ever known. G. C. Greer claimed Rough News from Mrs. J. Y. Christmas out of the seventh race Monday for $2,000. Arthur White will ship his large stable of jumpers to Belmont Park at the conclusion of the meeting. He Rolls, winner of the Arkansas Derby for Mrs. V. P. Noyes, was given a 6 furling trial in 1.16 3-5 and is expected to sport silks before the week is out. See you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—POST HASTE was well played last time and figures best of these. ELDER has flashed speed and should be a keen factor. SUNSET BOY has worked well for this.

Second race—EBONITO needs to retain only a flash of class to turn back such as these. DOUBLE BACK finds rather cheap company and should be in the money. CHALLANTE is as good as those recent outings.

Third race—KELLSBORO is in good hands and has schooled well. SIMOON likes the jumping course and is dangerous. SALEM comes from a good barn.

Fourth race—HI-LIGHT has done about everything asked in Maryland and is the day's best bet. ELMADA won on an off track at the other course. BUCKETS had plenty of closing speed in that last.

Fifth race—HAPPY HOME went beserk in the paddock last time and sulked. Should beat these. GOLDEN HOUR has speed and is dangerous. HILDENE was forward factor last out.

Sixth race—WESTNESIA ought to win a sprint at the Graw. This distance suits. ROYAL MAN has all his stretch punch and is a threat. FENELON to take care of the others.

Seventh race—NILON is a doubtful starter but will take it all if in action. ANTI AIR was well meant last time. BURNER should be close with these.

Eighth race—TONY STEEL was conditioned in a sprint and is ready for this route. GENERAL MOWLEE was second last out. OVERSIGHT for a place in the pay circle.

Best bet—HI-LIGHT

U. S. Steel Net In Period Sets 12-Year Peak

By the Associated Press

New York, April 29.—The United States Steel Corporation—world's largest maker—experienced the biggest outpouring of steel in its history in the first quarter of this year, but its profits were only 40 per cent of the most lucrative three months of the World War days.

Nevertheless, net profit as reported today for the quarter ended March 31 was $36,559,995, making it the best first quarter since 1929, and the best for any quarter since the fourth three months of that year.

This was well over the $2,793,212 (revised) earned in the final quarter of 1940, and more than double the $17,003,995 for the first three months of last year. The results would have been $5,000,000 higher, but for the fact the directors set aside that amount to provide for additional taxes and "other contingencies attaching to the present high rate of operations."

$1 Dividend Voted

Although profits were equivalent, after regular preferred dividends, to $3.47 a common share, directors continued their conservative disbursement policy by ordering a dividend of $1 on the common stock, the same as three months ago. (Total common dividends for 1940 were $3 a share.) The net for the preceding three months was $3.04 common share, and for the same period of last year, $1.24.

The highest earnings of the World War period were $90,500,000 for the fourth quarter of 1916. By comparison current results reflect lower prices, higher taxes and other factors.

Irving S. Olds, chairman, said in an interview after the directors meeting, that the company's direct defense orders were not large, but all defense work, including "indirect business which we guess is defense business," accounted for between 40 and 50 per cent of the concern's current activity.

Export Trade Lags

Olds indicated that steel shipments to England were lagging. He said export business in 1940 made up about 20 per cent of the business, for the first quarter of 1941 it averaged only about 10 or 11 per cent, due to slackened shipments to England and enlarged domestic use.

He viewed present steel capacity somewhat apprehensively, saying there was enough capacity in the industry to take care of increasing defense requirements, but adding: "Domestic demand might go up. In that case, there will be a strain on production capacity."

Olds said the company would feel the effects of the recent soft coal mining stoppage for some time ahead. Before the tieup, the company had 73 blast furnaces in operation, and the equivalent of 11 furnaces was put out of operation. He added if the stoppage had continued longer, "a drastic cut" in operations would have resulted.

He pointed out it takes two weeks for coal from Kentucky and West Virginia to get to Chicago, and 10 days to two weeks to get coke ovens going.

Record Shipments

Steel shipped in the first quarter amounted to 4,951,271 tons, biggest in history, 60 per cent more than the like quarter of 1940 and 9 per cent more than the preceding quarter.

Shipments during this period were at the rate of 100.6 per cent of theoretical capacity, compared with 93.3 in the previous quarter and 64.1 in the same period of 1940.

Olds indicated that capacity production would continue for some time, as quickly as the coal shortage is recovered from. He said the backlogs of orders was equal to four or five months of the recent rate of shipments. On imported materials, he said they were comfortably supplied, having seven to eight months' supply of such materials as ferro-manganese, palm oil and tin.

Olds said the recent 10-cent-an-hour wage increase would boost pay rolls about $62,000,000 annually. For the quarter just ended, the number of workers averaged 279,459, and the total pay roll was $125,744,513.

The common dividend is payable June 20 to stock of record May 20. The regular quarterly of $1.75 was ordered on the preferred, payable May 20 to stock of record May 2.

I. B. M. Sales Up 166% in Period

New York, April 29 (AP).—United States and Canadian sales of International Business Machines Corporation are running about 166 per cent ahead of last year, Thomas J. Watson, president, said at the annual stockholders' meeting today.

The company is manufacturing some defense parts under subcontract, he said, adding that a plant at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., has been purchased to make machine guns for the Watervliet Arsenal. A separate company has been organized to handle the operations at Poughkeepsie, to be known as Munitions Manufacturing Co. The plant at Endicott, N. Y., will take care of some of the work, he said.

Nebraska Utility Sells McCook Unit

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—Jackson E. Cagle, counsel for John Nuveen & Co., investment house, announced today the Consumers Public Power District of Columbus, Nebr., had purchased the Nebraska Light & Power Co. plant serving McCook, Nebr. The purchase price was $444,000.

McCook is the home city of Senator George W. Norris, veteran advocate of public ownership of utilities. Cagle said municipal purchase of the property had been rejected by the McCook electorate at least twice within the last year.

Pepsi-Cola and Loft Merger Vote Is Slated

New York, April 29 (AP).—Stockholders of Pepsi-Cola Co. and its parent, Loft, Inc., will be asked at a special meeting at Wilmington, Del., on May 29 to ratify a proposal of directors to merge the two concerns.

The proposal provides that the surviving corporation shall be named Pepsi-Cola Co, and for a conversion of stock.

Loans of 22 Capital Banks Rise $16,904,000 in Year

Loans of the 22 active banks in Washington totaled $132,107,000 on April 4, 1941, as compared with $115,203,000 on March 26, 1940, the comptroller of currency reported yesterday.

However, the gain in deposits far outstripped that in loans during the year. Deposits as of April 4 totaled $387,412,000, against $332,929 on the corresponding date last year.

This means that of the $54,483,000 gain in deposits local banks found profitable outlet for only $16,904,000. The remainder of the savings gain was invested mostly in low-yield Government bonds.

Total assets of the D. C. banks showed a gain of $64,806,000 during the year, rising from $422,750,000 to $487,556,000.

G M. Votes Bonuses for Drafted Aides

By the Associated Press

Wilmington, Del., April 12.—Payment of accrued bonus awards to employes drafted for military service was approved by stockholders of the General Motors Corporation today after a heated discussion precipitated by an editor of a C. I. O. union publication.

Alexander L. Crosby, new editor of the Auto Workers' weekly, organ of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers Union, introduced a resolution at the annual stockholders' meeting calling upon the corporation to pay all drafted employes the difference between their wages and their Army pay.

Crosby voted by proxy the stock of Carl Haessler, managing editor of the weekly.

The resolution was seconded by Lewis D. Gilbert, of New York, a minority stockholder, who said he believed in such payments but did not agree they should be so extensive.

The resolution was defeated by a voice vote.

John Thomas Smith, vice president and general counsel for the corporation, who presided at the meeting, told the shareholders that the primary interests of the corporation at the present time were involved with national defense. The corporation, he said, could not design its Government work on a profit basis.

The bonus amendments passed at the meeting will pay to drafted employes reeciving more than $2,400 annually their proportionate share of bonus under a company plan which provides for accrued payments over a period of three years.

The amendments also provide that an employe with less than a year's service, which under the plan, he must have to participate in the bonus plan, would receive his proportionate share of bonus if he were drafted into the Army.

Directors of the corporation were reelected.

Aircraft Backlog At 4-Billion Mark

New York, April 29 (AP).—Unfilled orders of aircraft manufacturers have crossed the $4,000,000,000 mark for the first time, totaling $4,030,000,000, Aviation Magazine reported today. This backlog is four times as great as a year ago.

The publication said a score or more of additional aircraft plants would be built in preparation for new orders that would flow from the lease-lend and supplementary defense appropriations.

Sun Oil to Redeem Rest of Preferred

New York, April 29 (AP).—Sun Oil Co. of Philadelphia has called for redemption on June 1 the remaining outstanding shares of $100 par 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock not exchanged for class "A" shares. Of the 100,000 shares of old preferred outstanding, 93,136 shares have been exchanged. The remainder will be paid off at $115 a share and dividends.

U. S. Exports Leap in March On Arms Aid

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department disclosed yesterday that lend-lease shipments of arms to Great Britain and Greece swelled United States merchandise exports in March to $357,565,000, the highest total in 14 months, and that March imports of $267,784,000 set a four-year high.

The department did not designate what materials were shipped on the lend-lease plan.

However, foreign deliveries of airplanes jumped from 344 craft, worth $19,267,000, in February, to 481 planes, worth $27,506,000, in March. Similarly shipments of aircraft engines jumped from $8,271,000 to $13,782,000. Exports of firearms and ammunition increased from $12,671,000 to $14,014,000, while deliveries of merchant vessels gained from $2,495,000 to $3,079,000.

Sharp Rise Noted

Imports were stimulated partly by Government purchases of strategic defense materials. The March figure compared with $233,696,000 in February and $216,755,000 in March of last year.

March exports exceeded imports by $89,781,000, a margin substantially smaller than in the same month last year, but ahead of recent months.

For the first quarter of 1941, exports totaled $986,302,000, imports $750,151,000, and the export excess was $256,151,000. In the first quarter of last year, exports totaled $1,067,971,000, imports $658,815,000, and the export excess $409,156,000.

Figures Distorted

Department experts said comparisons with last year were distorted by the fact that France, Italy and a large part of the European continent were still receiving goods from the United States a year ago, but now are blockaded.

The department said 71 per cent of all first quarter exports were "finished manufactured goods," reflecting the desire, particularly of England, for ready-made goods so that home industries could be devoted to war production.

Aircraft shipments in the quarter increased from $47,340,000 to $74,260,000 this year, and shipments of airplane engines increased from $8,192,000 to $27,763,000.

U. S. Gold Imports Shrink in Week

Gold imports totaled $9,633,194 in the week ended April 23, returning to the usual low levels of recent months. Shipments in the preceding week were increased by $132,000,000 of South African gold which arrived on a navy cruiser.

Principal shipments last week were $4,7178,258 from Australia, $2,363,827 from Canada, and $1,281,920 from the Philippines.

Mexico Ships Silver

New York, April 29 (AP).—A shipment of 1,039 bars of silver, valued at $400,000, arrived from Mexico today aboard the Cuba Mail liner Monterey.

Line officials said it was the largest consignment of silver shipped by Mexico in recent years and that since the inauguration of President Manuel Avila Camacho in December shipments have increased.

They interpreted the shipment as intended to build up credits in the United States for Mexican's purchase.

Stocks Lose Major Part of Early Advance; Rails Buoyant on Coal Strike Settlement

New York, April 29—Settlement of the coal strike offset bearishness over war developments and taxes sufficiently to draw more buyers into today's stock market.

The extension of yesterday's belated recovery was at the best in the morning when favored steels, rails and industrials pushed up fractions to more than a point. Prices began to give way after mid-day and initial advances were deducted or converted into declines in many instances at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks managed to retain a net gain of .1 of a point at 39.6. The composite was up .2 at noon. Dealings, lively in the morning, dwindled as quotations tapered but transfers for the full proceedings amounted to 511,990 shares, largest since April 9. They compared with 310,810 Monday.

U. S. Steel was well in front most of the day but slipped in the final hour and ended off ⅛ of a point at 52¼. After the close "Big Steel" directors voted a dividend of $1 a share on the common and disclosed net for the first quarter was $3.47 a share, best for this period since 1929. Profits for the like 1940 months were $1.24 a share and $3.04 in the final three months of the year. Two preceding dividends of $1 each had been declared. The company also announced a $5,000,000 reserve had been set aside to provide for additional taxes and other contingencies attaching to the current high rate of operations.

Unitid Aircraft got up to 1⅛ and the company voted a dividend of 50 cents o share on the common after the session concluded. Last previous disbursement was 10 cents in March of last year.

Rails, generally, were among the best performers, still reflecting expectations of mounting traffic as the threat of fuel shortage was removed by adjustment of the mining controversy.

Stocks emerging with modest plus marks included Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Gulf Mobile & Ohio preferred, Union Pacific, Standard Oil of Ind., DuPont, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville and Sears Roebuck. Nickel Plate preferred got into new high ground for the year.

American Telephone fell to a new low since last June and losses were posted for Montgomery Ward, U. S. Rubber, Western Union, North American, American Can, Anaconda, Westinghouse and Woolworth.

Moderately Higher in the Curb were American Cyanamid "B," Bell Aircraft, Glen Alden Coal, Brewster Aero and Gulf Oil. Turnover here was around 75,000 shares versus 54,000 yesterday.

Rail loans took a fresh grip on bond market leadership today with a large quata of new gains ranging from fractions to around 2 points. Some realtively inactive carrier issues which had lagged in the spring rise pushed up 3 to 4 points.

Activity in the rail division largely accounted for a substantial increase in turnover, volume amounting to $13,056,300 face value compared with $8,215,450 Monday.

Bonds in general were helped by a lift to sentiment given by settlement of the labor tieup in the soft coal fields, in which the railroads had a vital concern.

Low yield liens were steady. U. S. Governments showed little action. Treasuries were narrowly mixed in the stock exchange but a shade higher in the over-the-counter market.

Widest moves in the foreign sector included a 10-point drop in Berlin City ½s (with declarations) and a 6-point slide in Berlin City electric 6½s. Dealings were small in both. Japanese 5½s rose about 2. Austrailian 4½s gained 1¼.

Rail Earnings Up $85,699,653 In First Quarter

Earnings of Class One railroads, before interest and rentals, amounted to $201,503,219 in the first three months of 1941, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday. This compared with $115,903,566 in the corresponding period of 1940 and $173,060,112 in the same period of 1930.

Earnings in the quarter this year, the association said, were at the annual rate of return of 4.15 per cent of the railroads' property investment. This compared with 2.41 per cent in the same period last year and 3.48 in the first quarter of 1930.

The Class One carriers had earnings, before interest and rentals, of $80,627,172 in March, compared with $37,034,270 in March, 1940, and $80,046,885 in March, 1930.

Ford Sets 130,000 As Output in May

Detroit, April 29 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co., its production lines idle for approximately half of the current month because of labor troubles, has projected an aggregate output of slightly more than 130,000 passenger cars and trucks for the month of May.

To carry out this program the Ford production divisions will operate on a six-day a week basis, excepting for the Memorial Day holiday. The Ford Co., which instituted the five-day week in its plants late in 1925, plans to operate six days a week for most if not all of the ensuing three months, paying time and one-half for the additional day.

Cotton Upsurge Leads Rise in Commodities

By the Associated Press

Speculative commodities felt the stimulating influence of a revival in cotton futures yesterday.

A lethargic performer for the past week or more, cotton futures pushed up nearly $1 a bale on broad buying prompted by expectation of favorable House action on a proposal for a 75 per cent parity loan on the raw fiber. Chicago wheat closed ½ cent a bushel lower to ⅝ cent higher. Corn was ⅛ cent lower to ⅜ cent higher.

Other New York futures markets on the improved side were: Cottonseed oil, up .01 to .02 of a cent a pound; wool tops, up .2 to .4 of a cent; copper, .03 to .08 of a cent. Rubber was the star performer of import staples, rising .35 to .50 of a cent a pound on dealings for forward delivery.

Hides, strong in recent sessions, slid off .06 to .11 of cent. Domestic sugar and silk recorded small declines.

WHY ON EARTH DO THEY DO IT?

To Investors With an Eye for Speculative Profit
Will certain of the railroads now being reorganized be among the leading railroads of the next decade?
Since this is a question which every investor with speculative funds may well explore, our Research Department has prepared careful analyses of five reorganization railroad bonds.
The railroad industry is now in a period of recovery. Class I railroads in 1940 showed an improvement of almost $100,000,000 in net operating income over the previous year. This record is the best reported since 1930. Many reorganization railroads earned last year fixed charges in full on their old bonded indebtedness for the first time in eleven years. But even more significant from the standpoint of possible profit are these provisions in the reorganization plans for the railroads:
1 - Drastic reduction in their debt
2 - Average reduction of 66⅔ in fixed interest charges
3 - Absence of important maturities for two or three decades
The picture is further brightened by the strengthened financial position and improved physical condition of these reorganization railroads, as well as their favorable situation under present tax laws.
We shall be glad to send you our Reorganization Rail Portfolio containing complete analyses of the five reorganization railroad bonds which appear most attractive at the present time. But please remember that these bonds, despite the favorable possibilities, remain essentially speculative.
Sincerely yours,

Ocean Blue Equals Record Winning Rennert at Pimlico

Noses Out Handy Tom; Pays $5.50

Picture Gives Race To Letellier Entry; Riding Light Third; Double Pays $397.70

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., April 29.—Equalling the record for the event, Crispin Oglebay's Ocean Blue was credited with a nose victory over Mrs. A. B. Letellier's Handy Tom in a thrilling battle to the wire today. The race was the eighteenth running of the $2,500 added Rennert Handicap and Ocean Blue stepped the six furlongs in 1.11 4-5, matching the time made by Worthmore in winning the 1924 renewal. However, the time was a full second over the track record shared by Main Mast and Con Amore.

Carrying top weight of 120 pounds, Ocean Blue was giving ten pounds to Handy Tom. Many in the crowd of 10,000 did not believe Ocean Blue had gotten up but the picture showed him in front by a margin not greater than two inches. Third money in the field of eleven went to Walter M. Jeffords' Riding Light.

Victor Pays $5.50

Ocean Blue's victory was the first success for the favorite players in a flat race at the meeting. He paid $5.50, but despite the excellent time, did not gain backers for the Preakness. He appeared to have been ridden out. Owner Crispin Oglebay collects 2,900 as the result of his colt's victory.

Not more than a length separated Ocean Blue and Handy Tom, the latter a 12-1 shot, from start to finish. They hooked up in earnest in midstretch and it was a game, hard battle from there to the wire with Ocean Blue appearing to lug in on his rival nearing the end. The announcement of Handy Tom's defeat brought a mild booing from the backers of the son of Sazerac.

$123.20 Shot Wins

The high point of the program from a monetary angle was the $123.20 mutuel paid by Longstone, a first-time starter who won the second race. This 2-year-old raced all over the track, but he was driving to the front at the wire. He carried the colors of C. J. Meister and was ridden by Jockey Lucas Dupps.

Those who played Longstone with Wire Me, the $10.70 winner of the first race, received a pay-off of $397.70 in the daily double. The numbers were "12 and 12," both horses winning from the extreme outside post positions.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRAGIC ENDING, $11.10, $4.30, $2.60; KANSAS, $3.20, $2.30; ICE WATER, $2.40.

TRAGIC ENDING came gamely when placed to a drive and wore down KANSAS under a strong hand ride in the closing stages. KANSAS worked his way to the lead approaching the stretch, but could not resist the winner. ICE WATER moved up menacingly in the stretch and fought it out gamely. SILVER ROCKET weakened.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Rennert Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:47½. Off at 4:48. Winner, C. Oglebay's br. c. (3), by Blue Larkspur—Anchors Awead. Trained by J. P. Jones. Not value to winner, $2,900. Time, 1:11⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—OCEAN BLUE, $5.50, $4.10, $2.90; HANDY TOM, $9.50, $6.00; RIDING LIGHT, $5.50.

OCEAN BLUE came up on the outside of HANDY TOM in the stretch drive and was barely up for the photo decision. HANDY TOM raced clear of ROUGH COMMAND going to the turn and held on with good courage while being crowded by the winner. RIDING LIGHT gained gradually to the stretch and then weakened. PETE JR. had a rough trip.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:17. Off at 5:17. Winner, H. Neusteter's b. g. (5), by Jim Meadow—Irish Morn. Trained by H. Neusteter. Value to winner, $700. Time, 2:01⅘.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

Maryland racing fans can prepare themselves for a delayed-action bomb. It is reported that officials have in their hands a stimulating case against a well known and successful trainer. Nothing has been said about it as yet, but there will be a lot of noise soon. Yankee Chance has come into the picture as a Preakness possibility and if he continues to train as his mile trial in 1.40 2-5 last Monday at Belmont Park indicates, Trainer Ed Snyder may send the C. V. Whitney colt here. The son of Peace Chance and Yankee Maid started only twice last season and failed to win, but Trainer Snyder was of the opinion the colt required plenty of time for development and held considerable promise. About 35 horses will be in the sale to be held in the Pimlico centerfield Friday morning, May 9, at 10 o'clock, according to Humphrey Finney, field secretary of the Maryland Breeders Association, sponsoring the auction. The estate of the late Charles H. Thieriot, New York sportsman, has consigned the Supremus mare Precept and her colt foal by Challenger II, also the yearling filly by Jean Bart from Precept. Sunpatic, the former Willis Sharpe Kilmer stallion, has been entered by Clyde Asher. Other consignments have been made by Cockade Farm, Hillendale Farm, Howard Bruce, Merryland Farm and Mill River Stable. Charles Joseph McLennan is the name selected for the son born last week to Mr. and Mrs. Charles McLennan. The name honors the late "Little Joe" McLennan, the infant's grandfather, who was one of the most popular officials American racing has ever known. G. C. Greer claimed Rough News from Mrs. J. Y. Christmas out of the seventh race Monday for $2,000. Arthur White will ship his large stable of jumpers to Belmont Park at the conclusion of the meeting. He Rolls, winner of the Arkansas Derby for Mrs. V. P. Noyes, was given a 6 furling trial in 1.16 3-5 and is expected to sport silks before the week is out. See you on the rail.—BILL.

First race—POST HASTE was well played last time and figures best of these. ELDER has flashed speed and should be a keen factor. SUNSET BOY has worked well for this.

Second race—EBONITO needs to retain only a flash of class to turn back such as these. DOUBLE BACK finds rather cheap company and should be in the money. CHALLANTE is as good as those recent outings.

Third race—KELLSBORO is in good hands and has schooled well. SIMOON likes the jumping course and is dangerous. SALEM comes from a good barn.

Fourth race—HI-LIGHT has done about everything asked in Maryland and is the day's best bet. ELMADA won on an off track at the other course. BUCKETS had plenty of closing speed in that last.

Fifth race—HAPPY HOME went beserk in the paddock last time and sulked. Should beat these. GOLDEN HOUR has speed and is dangerous. HILDENE was forward factor last out.

Sixth race—WESTNESIA got up to win a sprint at the Graw. This distance suits. ROYAL MAN has all his stretch punch and is a threat. FENELON to take care of the others.

Seventh race—NILON is a doubtful starter but will take it all if in action. ANTI AIR was well meant last time. BURNER should be close with these.

Eighth race—TONY STEEL was conditioned in a sprint and is ready for this route. GENERAL MOWLEE was second last out. OVERSIGHT for a place in the pay circle.

Best bet—HI-LIGHT

U. S. Steel Net In Period Sets 12-Year Peak

By the Associated Press

New York, April 29.—The United States Steel Corporation—world's largest maker—experienced the biggest outpouring of steel in its history in the first quarter of this year, but its profits were only 40 per cent of the most lucrative three months of the World War days.

Nevertheless, net profit as reported today for the quarter ended March 31 was $36,559,995, making it the best first quarter since 1929, and the best for any quarter since the fourth three months of that year.

This was well over the $2,793,212 (revised) earned in the final quarter of 1940, and more than double the $17,003,995 for the first three months of last year. The results would have been $5,000,000 higher, but for the fact the directors set aside that amount to provide for additional taxes and "other contingencies attaching to the present high rate of operations."

$1 Dividend Voted

Although profits were equivalent, after regular preferred dividends, to $3.47 a common share, directors continued their conservative disbursement policy by ordering a dividend of $1 on the common stock, the same as three months ago. (Total common dividends for 1940 were $3 a share.) The net for the preceding three months was $3.04 common share, and for the same period of last year, $1.24.

The highest earnings of the World War period were $90,500,000 for the fourth quarter of 1916. By comparison current results reflect lower prices, higher taxes and other factors.

Irving S. Olds, chairman, said in an interview after the directors meeting, that the company's direct defense orders were not large, but all defense work, including "indirect business which we guess is defense business," accounted for between 40 and 50 per cent of the concern's current activity.

Export Trade Lags

Olds indicated that steel shipments to England were lagging. He said export business in 1940 made up about 20 per cent of the business, for the first quarter of 1941 it averaged only about 10 or 11 per cent, due to slackened shipments to England and enlarged domestic use.

He viewed present steel capacity somewhat apprehensively, saying there was enough capacity in the industry to take care of increasing defense requirements, but adding:

"Domestic demand might go up. In that case, there will be a strain on production capacity."

Olds said the company would feel the effects of the recent soft coal mining stoppage for some time ahead. Before the tieup, the company had 73 blast furnaces in operation, and the equivalent of 11 furnaces was put out of operation. He added if the stoppage had continued longer, "a drastic cut" in operations would have resulted.

He pointed out it takes two weeks for coal from Kentucky and West Virginia to get to Chicago, and 10 days to two weeks to get coke ovens going.

Record Shipments

Steel shipped in the first quarter amounted to 4,951,271 tons, biggest in history, 60 per cent more than the like quarter of 1940 and 9 per cent more than the preceding quarter.

Shipments during this period were at the rate of 100.6 per cent of theoretical capacity, compared with 93.3 in the previous quarter and 64.1 in the same period of 1940.

Olds indicated that capacity production would continue for some time, as quickly as the coal shortage is recovered from. He said the backlogs of orders was equal to four or five months of the recent rate of shipments. On imported materials, he said they were comfortably supplied, having seven to eight months' supply of such materials as ferro-manganese, palm oil and tin.

Olds said the recent 10-cent-an-hour wage increase would boost pay rolls about $62,000,000 annually. For the quarter just ended, the number of workers averaged 279,459, and the total pay roll was $125,744,513.

The common dividend is payable June 20 to stock of record May 20. The regular quarterly of $1.75 was ordered on the preferred, payable May 20 to stock of record May 2.

I. B. M. Sales Up 166% in Period

New York, April 29 (AP).—United States and Canadian sales of International Business Machines Corporation are running about 166 per cent ahead of last year, Thomas J. Watson, president, said at the annual stockholders' meeting today.

The company is manufacturing some defense parts under subcontract, he said, adding that a plant at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., has been purchased to make machine guns for the Watervliet Arsenal. A separate company has been organized to handle the operations at Poughkeepsie, to be known as Munitions Manufacturing Co. The plant at Endicott, N. Y., will take care of some of the work, he said.

Nebraska Utility Sells McCook Unit

Chicago, April 29 (AP).—Jackson E. Cagle, counsel for John Nuveen & Co., investment house, announced today the Consumers Public Power District of Columbus, Nebr., had purchased the Nebraska Light & Power Co. plant serving McCook, Nebr. The purchase price was $444,000.

McCook is the home city of Senator George W. Norris, veteran advocate of public ownership of utilities. Cagle said municipal purchase of the property had been rejected by the McCook electorate at least twice within the last year.

Pepsi-Cola and Loft Merger Vote Is Slated

New York, April 29 (AP).—Stockholders of Pepsi-Cola Co. and its parent, Loft, Inc., will be asked at a special meeting at Wilmington, Del., on May 29 to ratify a proposal of directors to merge the two concerns.

The proposal provides that the surviving corporation shall be named Pepsi-Cola Co. and for a conversion of stock.

Loans of 22 Capital Banks Rise $16,904,000 in Year

Loans of the 22 active banks in Washington totaled $132,107,000 on April 4, 1941, as compared with $115,203,000 on March 26, 1940, the comptroller of currency reported yesterday.

However, the gain in deposits far outstripped that in loans during the year. Deposits as of April 4 totaled $387,412,000, against $332,929 on the corresponding date last year.

This means that of the $54,483,000 gain in deposits local banks found profitable outlet for only $16,904,000. The remainder of the savings gain was invested mostly in low-yield Government bonds.

Total assets of the D. C. banks showed a gain of $64,806,000 during the year, rising from $422,750,000 to $487,556,000.

G M. Votes Bonuses for Drafted Aides

By the Associated Press

Wilmington, Del., April 12.—Payment of accrued bonus awards to employes drafted for military service was approved by stockholders of the General Motors Corporation today after a heated discussion precipitated by an editor of a C. I. O. union publication.

Alexander L. Crosby, new editor of the Auto Workers' weekly, organ of the C. I. O. United Automobile Workers Union, introduced a resolution at the annual stockholders' meeting calling upon the corporation to pay all drafted employes the difference between their wages and their Army pay.

Crosby voted by proxy the stock of Carl Haessler, managing editor of the weekly.

The resolution was seconded by Lewis D. Gilbert, of New York, a minority stockholder, who said he believed in such payments but did not agree they should be so extensive.

The resolution was defeated by a voice vote.

John Thomas Smith, vice president and general counsel for the corporation, who presided at the meeting, told the shareholders that the primary interests of the corporation at the present time were involved with national defense. The corporation, he said, could not design its Government work on a profit basis.

The bonus amendments passed at the meeting will pay to drafted employes reeciving more than $2,400 annually their proportionate share of bonus under a company plan which provides for accrued payments over a period of three years.

The amendments also provide that an employe with less than a year's service, which under the plan, he must have to participate in the bonus plan, would receive his proportionate share of bonus if he were drafted into the Army.

Directors of the corporation were reelected.

Aircraft Backlog At 4-Billion Mark

New York, April 29 (AP).—Unfilled orders of aircraft manufacturers have crossed the $4,000,000,000 mark for the first time, totaling $4,030,000,000, Aviation Magazine reported today. This backlog is four times as great as a year ago.

The publication said a score or more of additional aircraft plants would be built in preparation for new orders that would flow from the lease-lend and supplementary defense appropriations.

Sun Oil to Redeem Rest of Preferred

New York, April 29 (AP).—Sun Oil Co. of Philadelphia has called for redemption on June 1 the remaining outstanding shares of $100 par 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock not exchanged for class "A" shares. Of the 100,000 shares of old preferred outstanding, 93,136 shares have been exchanged. The remainder will be paid off at $115 a share and dividends.

U. S. Exports Leap in March On Arms Aid

By the Associated Press

The Commerce Department disclosed yesterday that lend-lease shipments of arms to Great Britain and Greece swelled United States merchandise exports in March to $357,565,000, the highest total in 14 months, and that March imports of $267,784,000 set a four-year high.

The department did not designate what materials were shipped on the lend-lease plan.

However, foreign deliveries of airplanes jumped from 344 craft, worth $19,267,000, in February, to 481 planes, worth $27,508,000, in March. Similarly shipments of aircraft engines jumped from $8,271,000 to $13,782,000. Exports of firearms and ammunition increased from $12,671,000 to $14,014,000, while deliveries of merchant vessels gained from $2,495,000 to $3,079,000.

Sharp Rise Noted

The month's exports compared with $303,388,000 in February and $350,784,000 in March last year.

Imports were stimulated partly by Government purchases of strategic defense materials. The March figure compared with $233,696,000 in February and $216,755,000 in March of last year.

March exports exceeded imports by $89,781,000, a margin substantially smaller than in the same month last year, but ahead of recent months.

For the first quarter of 1941, exports totaled $986,302,000, imports $750,151,000, and the export excess was $256,151,000. In the first quarter of last year, exports totaled $1,067,971,000, imports $658,815,000, and the export excess $409,156,000.

Figures Distorted

Department experts said comparisons with last year were distorted by the fact that France, Italy and a large part of the European continent were still receiving goods from the United States a year ago, but now are blockaded.

The department said 71 per cent of all first quarter exports were "finished manufactured goods," reflecting the desire, particularly of England, for ready-made goods so that home industries could be devoted to war production.

Aircraft shipments in the quarter increased from $47,540,000 to $74,260,000 this year, and shipments of airplane engines increased from $8,192,000 to $27,763,000.

U. S. Gold Imports Shrink in Week

Gold imports totaled $9,633,194 in the week ended April 23, returning to the usual low levels of recent months. Shipments in the preceding week were increased by $132,000,000 of South African gold which arrived on a navy cruiser.

Principal shipments last week were $4,7178,258 from Australia, $2,363,827 from Canada, and $1,281,929 from the Philippines.

Mexico Ships Silver

New York, April 29 (AP).—A shipment of 1,039 bars of silver, valued at $400,000, arrived from Mexico today aboard the Cuba Mail liner Monterey.

Line officials said it was the largest consignment of silver shipped by Mexico in recent years and that since the inauguration of President Manuel Avila Camacho in December shipments have increased.

They interpreted the shipment as intended to build up credits in the United States for Mexican's purchase.

Fenner & Beane Expand

New York, April 29 (AP).—Fenner & Beane, members of the New York Stock Exchange, confirmed today that they had arranged to take over four Granberry & Co. offices, located at Louisville, Cincinnati, Williamsport, Pa., and Columbus, Ohio.

Stocks Lose Major Part of Early Advance; Rails Buoyant on Coal Strike Settlement

New York, April 29—Settlement of the coal strike offset bearishness over war developments and taxes sufficiently to draw more buyers into today's stock market.

The extension of yesterday's belated recovery was at the best in the morning when favored steels, rails and industrials pushed up fractions to more than a point. Prices began to give way after mid-day and initial advances were deducted or converted into declines in many instances at the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks managed to retain a net gain of .1 of a point at 39.6. The composite was up .2 at noon. Dealings, lively in the morning, dwindled as quotations tapered but transfers for the full proceedings amounted to 511,990 shares, largest since April 9. They compared with 310,810 Monday.

U. S. Steel was well in front most of the day but slipped in the final hour and ended off ⅛ of a point at 52¾. After the close "Big Steel" directors voted a dividend of $1 a share on the common and disclosed net for the first quarter was $3.47 a share, best for this period since 1929. Profits for the like 1940 months were $1.24 a share and $3.04 in the final three months of the year. Two preceding dividends of $1 each had been declared. The company also announced a $5,000,000 reserve had been set aside to provide for additional taxes and other contingencies attaching to the current high rate of operations.

Unitid Aircraft got up to 1⅛ and the company voted a dividend of 50 cents o share on the common after the session concluded. Last previous disbursement was 10 cents in March of last year.

Rails, generally, were among the best performers, still reflecting expectations of mounting traffic as the threat of fuel shortage was removed by adjustment of the mining controversy.

Stocks emerging with modest plus marks included Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Gulf Mobile & Ohio preferred, Union Pacific, Standard Oil of Ind., DuPont, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville and Sears Roebuck. Nickel Plate preferred got into new high ground for the year.

American Telephone fell to a new low since last June and losses were posted for Montgomery Ward, U. S. Rubber, Western Union, North American, American Can, Anaconda, Westinghouse and Woolworth.

Moderately higher in the Curb were American Cyanamid "B," Bell Aircraft, Glen Alden Coal, Brewster Aero and Gulf Oil. Turnover here was around 75,000 shares versus 54,000 yesterday.

Rail loans took a fresh grip on bond market leadership today with a large quata of new gains ranging from fractions to around 3 points. Some realtively inactive carrier issues which had lagged in the spring rise pushed up 3 to 4 points.

Activity in the rail division largely accounted for a substantial increase in turnover, volume amounting to $13,056,300 face value compared with $8,215,450 Monday.

Bonds in general were helped by a lift to sentiment given by settlement of the labor tieup in the soft coal fields, in which the railroads had a vital concern.

Low yield liens were steady. U. S. Governments showed little action. Treasuries were narrowly mixed in the stock exchange but a shade higher in the over-the-counter market.

Widest moves in the foreign sector included a 10-point drop in Berlin City ½s (with declarations) and a 6-point slide in Berlin City electric 6½s. Dealings were small in both. Japanese 5½s rose about 2. Austrailian 4½s gained 1¼.

Rail Earnings Up $85,699,653 In First Quarter

Earnings of Class One railroads, before interest and rentals, amounted to $201,503,219 in the first three months of 1941, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday. This compared with $115,903,566 in the corresponding period of 1940 and $173,060,112 in the same period of 1930.

Earnings in the quarter this year, the association said, were at the annual rate of return of 4.15 per cent of the railroads' property investment. This compared with 2.41 per cent in the same period last year and 3.48 in the first quarter of 1930.

The Class One carriers had earnings, before interest and rentals, of $80,627,172 in March, compared with $37,034,270 in March, 1940, and $60,046,885 in March, 1930.

Ford Sets 130,000 As Output in May

Detroit, April 29 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co., its production lines idle for approximately half of the current month because of labor troubles, has projected an aggregate output of slightly more than 130,000 passenger cars and trucks for the month of May.

To carry out this program the Ford production divisions will operate on a six-day a week basis, excepting for the Memorial Day holiday. The Ford Co., which instituted the five-day week in its plants late in 1925, plans to operate six days a week for most if not all of the ensuing three months, paying time and one-half for the additional day.

Cotton Upsurge Leads Rise in Commodities

By the Associated Press

Speculative commodities felt the stimulating influence of a revival in cotton futures yesterday.

A lethargic performer for the past week or more, cotton futures pushed up nearly $1 a bale on broad buying prompted by expectation of favorable House action on a proposal for a 75 per cent parity loan on the raw fiber. Chicago wheat closed ½ cent a bushel lower to ⅝ cent higher. Corn was ⅛ cent lower to ⅜ cent higher.

Other New York futures markets on the improved side were: Cottonseed oil, up .01 to .02 of a cent a pound; wool tops, up .2 to .4 of a cent; copper, .03 to .06 of a cent. Rubber was the star performer of import staples, rising .35 to .50 of a cent a pound on dealings for forward delivery.

Hides, strong in recent sessions, slid off .06 to .11 of cent. Domestic sugar and silk recorded small declines.

WHY ON EARTH DO THEY DO IT?

Will certain of the railroads now being reorganized be among the leading railroads of the next decade?
Since this is a question which every investor with speculative funds may well explore, our Research Department has prepared careful analyses of five reorganization railroad bonds.
The railroad industry is now in a period of recovery. Class I railroads in 1940 showed an improvement of almost $100,000,000 in net operating income over the previous year. This record is the best reported since 1930. Many reorganization railroads earned last year fixed charges in full on their old bonded indebtedness for the first time in eleven years. But even more significant from the standpoint of possible profit are these provisions in the reorganization plans for the railroads:
1 - Drastic reduction in their debt
2 - Average reduction of 66⅔% in fixed interest charges
3 - Absence of important maturities for two or three decades
The picture is further brightened by the strengthened financial position and improved physical condition of these reorganization railroads, as well as their favorable situation under present tax laws.
We shall be glad to send you our Reorganization Rail Portfolio containing complete analyses of the five reorganization railroad bonds which appear most attractive at the present time. But please remember that these bonds, despite the favorable possibilities, remain essentially speculative.
Sincerely yours,
George A. Garrett

Retiring Census Director Given Farewell Party

William Lane Austin, who retired yesterday as director of the Census Bureau after 40 years' service, was presented a gold watch Dr. Virgil D. Reed, acting director, at a farewell celebration, by the staff in his office.

AUSTIN

His outstanding record of service with the bureau, which encompassed five decennial censuses of the 16 taken since establishment of the bureau in 1790, were lauded by Malcolm Kerlin, administrative assistant to the Secretary of Commerce.

The new director is expected to be J. C. Capt, of Texas, who has been appointed by the President, subject to confirmation by the Senate.

Capt. W. L. Darnall Dies at 52 After Brief Illness

Capt. William L. Darnall, Dental Corps, U. S. Navy, commander of the Naval Dental School here, died yesterday at Naval Hospital after a brief illness. He was 52.

Capt. Darnall, who had resided at the Westchester Apartments since taking command of the dental school two and a half years ago, was a native of Indiana and a graduate of the University of Indiana.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Zella Bratton Darnall; a son, William, student at Northwestern University Dental School; a daughter, Mrs. L. W. Smith, jr., of Honolulu; a sister, Miss Nora Darnall, of Lebanon, Ind., and a brother, Chester Darnall, of Lebanon.

Funeral services will be held at the grave in Arlington Cemetery at 10:30 a. m. Friday.

Weather Conditions

U. S. Dept. of Commerce, Weather Bureau, Washington, Tuesday, April 29—7:30 P. M.

Forecasts.

For the District of Columbia—Clear Wednesday with highest temperature about 83 degrees Wednesday afternoon; Thursday fair and continued warm; light southerly winds.

For Maryland—Fair and continued warm Wednesday and Thursday.

For Virginia—Fair, warmer on the coast Wednesday; Thursday fair in east, and increasing cloudiness in west portion; light showers in extreme southwest portion Thursday night; continued warm.

Weather Conditions.

Showers have again occurred from Texas northward to Wyoming and the the Dakotas in the deep mass of moist air of tropical origin that continues to move northward between the anticyclones over the eastern half of the United States, with highest pressure 1026.4 millibars (30.31 inches), at Norfolk, Va., and a shallow trough of low pressure that extends from the Dakotas to western Texas. Tucumcari, N. Mex., 1008.5 millibars (29.78 inches), and Pierre, S. Dak., 1011.9 millibars (29.88 inches). An extensive low-pressure system from the Pacific is advancing slowly eastward over the Far West, Blythe, Calif., 1003.7 millibars (29.64 inches). A minor disturbance is moving rapidly southeastward over Maine, Greenville, Me., 1013.8 millibars (29.93 inches). Except for cooler weather along the middle Atlantic and north Atlantic coast due to on-shore winds the temperature has continued to rise slowly over the eastern half of the United States and the weather is now unseasonably warm over most of this area.

Leonardo Crovato Funeral Services Will Be Held Today

Last rites for Leonardo Crovato, 72, president and founder of the American Mosaic Co. here, will be held today at 9 a. m. at the home, 5301 Eighth Street Northwest, followed by requiem mass at 9:30 a. m. in Holy Rosary Church, Third and F Streets Northwest.

Mr. Crovato, who died Monday at his home after a long illness, was born in Udine Province, Italy, and came to this country in 1894. He moved here a short time later and became engaged in the terrazzo and tile contracting business.

He founded the American Mosaic Co. in 1903 and previously had been one of the founders of the National Mosaic Co., Inc.

Mr. Crovato was a member of the Board of Trade and the Tile and Marble Contractors Association. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Oliva Crovato.

Burial will be in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Briton Fibs, Goes to Jail

London (Wednesday), April 30 (AP).—Danely Ralph Milner, 47, father of six children, was in jail today because his zeal to join the army led him to fib about his age.

He was sentenced to six weeks at hard labor for obtaining a birth certificate attesting that he was only 41.

Truck Knocks Men From Scaffold

TILE-SETTERS UPSET—Trailer truck striking scaffold at 2015 West Virginia Avenue Northeast yesterday knocked three tile-setters from the 15-foot framework. The men, treated at Casualty Hospital, were identified as Joseph Visetin, 52, 302 H Street Northwest; Joseph D. Ambrosia, 26, 941 K Street Northwest, and Andrew Malvasio, 54, 226 Second Street Northwest

Dewey to Head $10,765,000 Drive Of Service Groups

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, April 29.—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey today accepted the bid of United Service Organizations to head its $10,765,000 campaign in behelf of soldiers, sailors and workers in defense industry.

Plans for the drive, to raise funds to man and maintain welfare and recreational centers throughout the country, were laid at a meeting in Washington April 17.

Scheduled to start June 3 and run to July 4, the campaign will employ some 150,000 workers in 800 towns and cities, all under Dewey's direction.

SPACIOUS CENTER-HALL PLAN
DETACHED BRICK HOME—$12,900
Situated on beautiful wooded lot in the Forest Section of Chevy Chase, Md., convenient to grade and high schools, close to several country clubs. Built and sold in 1930 for $22,000, this home has seven really large rooms, two tile baths, den on first floor, two finished rooms in attic, oil burner, 2-car built-in garage. The owner lives out of the city and the house is in need of redecorating, but at this low price it is unquestionably the most house for the money, in any comparable neighborhood, on the market today.

SUPERMAN — THE TRAP IS BAITED — BY JERRY SIEGEL AND JOE SHUSTER

IT IS INSULATED AGAINST HEAT. WHEN SUPERMAN ENTERS, FROM OUR PROTECTED CONTROL ROOM WE WILL RELEASE TERRIFIC HEAT INTO THE ROOM!
IF SUPERMAN SEEKS TO RELEASE YOU, THE DEADLY HEAT WILL REACH YOU. AND IT WILL TAKE BUT A FEW MINUTES FOR THE HEAT TO REDUCE HIM TO ASHES!
THAT ATTENDS TO HER!
HURRY— WE MUST GET INTO THE CONTROL ROOM BEFORE SUPERMAN ARRIVES!

As probably most of you know, WJSV's "Magic Carpet" program is a quiz show, emceed by John Charles Daly, participated in each day by various local clubs and other organizations and sponsored by the Continental Baking Co. in the interest of Certified Double-flavor bread.

But all that seemed to have been missed by one of its listeners the other day. She telephoned in to WJSV and asked if they wouldn't immediately send to her one of those "magic carpets" they were giving away. She seemed pretty unconvinced, too, when things were explained to her.

The "Magic Carpet" has been on WJSV's air now ever since November 1, 1938, and you've heard it faithfully every weekday morning at 8:30. All of which is productive of some nice, juicy statistics, for it means that there have been something like 600 broadcasts, 150 solid hours of entertainment. Since five contestants appear on each program, it means that approximately 3,000 persons from the Washington vicinity have been heard over WJSV and, since there are any number of spectators for each broadcast, those figures become almost astronomical.

Now, having informed you of all this, it's only fair to inform you that from now on "Magic Carpet" is being heard at 5:15 in the afternoon, hat's so that late risers can hear it, too.

The Post Radio Highlights

The National Folk Festival's opening tomorrow in Constitution Hall is presaged by three special programs from WINX. At 1:15 p. m., Miss Sarah Gertrude Knott, director of the festival, will introduce a group of students of Gordon Junior High School in American folk songs. In the evening from 7:30 to 8 will come an airing direct from the Hall of the arrival and rehearsals of the groups. Again at 9:20, WINX will open its mike for more on the spot preliminaries of the three-day fete.

7, WMAL—The Quiz Kids receive the Movie-Radio Guide award for first place in the children's program division of its annual Star of Stars poll.

9, WMAL—Vice President Wallace, Edward J. Flynn and James A. Farley are the speakers at the Twenty-sixth Anniversary Dinner of the New York Young Democratic Club. Thomas Boyle is chairman.

9:30, WJSV, WRC, WMAL and WOL—President Roosevelt, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Postmaster General Frank Walker address the Nation on the eve of the campaign to sell defense stamps and bonds. Secretary Morgenthau opens the half-hour, is followed by the Postmaster General speaking from Des Moines and finally by the President, talking from the White House.

Contract Bridge

Bidding larceny was observed at a recent team-of-four championship when declarer made a sacrifice bid of three diamonds on this hand to keep the opponents from an easy slam. He paved the way to the save with psychics. The deal, with neither side vulnerable and South dealer:

	♠ 7 2 ♡ 9 7 ♣ K 10 ◇ J 9 8 7 6 3 2
♠ 8 5 4 ♡ A 8 5 3 2 ◇ None ♣ Q J 8 6 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ A K J 3 ♡ Q J 10 4 ◇ K Q 5 ♣ 4 3
	♠ Q 10 9 6 ♡ K 8 ◇ A 10 4 ♣ 9 7 5 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Dble
Redble	Pass	1 NT	Dble
2 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dble
Pass	Pass	2 NT	Dble
Pass	Pass	3 ◇	Dble
Pass	Pass	Pass

The contract of three diamonds, doubled, was set two tricks. North managing to take one club trick in addition to his six tricks in the trump suit.

When the hand was played by North and South's teammates, they reached six hearts and made an overtrick. West established a diamond honor for a spade discard and ruffed two clubs in dummy.

As North was jotting down his top score, he remarked that he wouldn't have minded even if the hand hadn't been so profitable, as he had had enough fun just bidding it.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — BY MILTON CANIFF

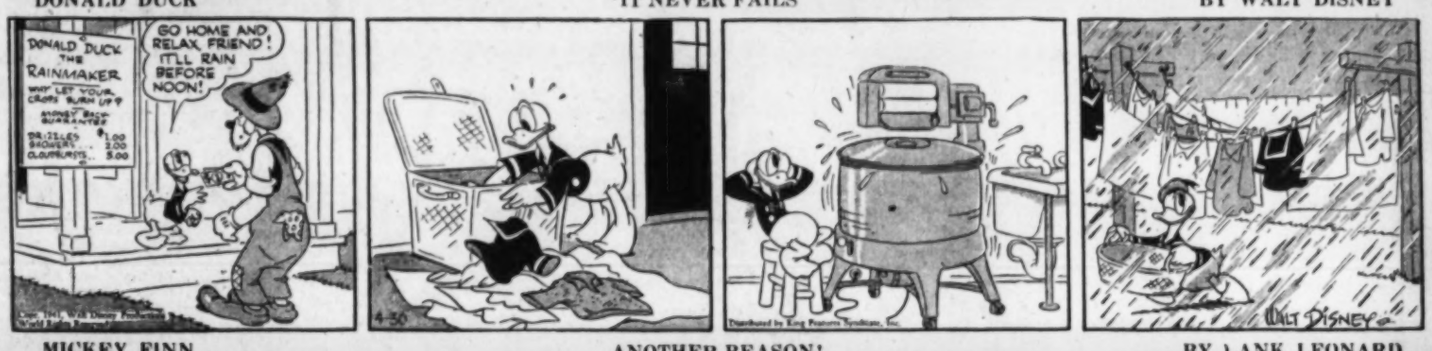
R-G1 IS CLEVER! HE DOES NOT RISK HIS PLACE ON THE RAIDER CREW BY COMING HERE!... INSTEAD HE SENDS A YOUNG ONE WITH PROPER CREDENTIALS! BRING THE BOY TO ME!
4-30
...YOUR CLOTHES WILL BE DRIED AND SEARCHED! YOU MAY BATHE WHILE YOU TELL ME YOUR STORY, MR. TERRY LEE!
THAT'S A GOOD STUNT TO KEEP ME FROM RUNNING AWAY... BUT IT'S PLENTY OKAY BY ME!
MEANWHILE...
NO WORD FROM TERRY OR KIEL!... WHAT IF THEY FOUND THOSE SIGNAL FLAGS ON THE KID AND TOSSED HIM TO THE TUNA!... I FEEL SORTA UNEASY!
THE WOMAN KNOWN AS MADAME LUSTRE LIVES IN THIS BUILDING! SHE PROBABLY DOESN'T KNOW OF KIEL'S DEATH — SO IT IS ROUTINE SECRET POLICE BUSINESS TO ELIMINATE HER BEFORE SHE TALKS TOO MUCH! I WILL ATTEND TO IT PERSONALLY... MIGHT BE AN AMUSING DIVERSION!
MILTON CANIFF

CALLER TO MAUL HER

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — BY DALE ALLEN

ARREST THAT MAN, OFFICER! I ACCUSE HIM OF BURNING DOWN GOVERNOR BLACKSTON'S HOUSE... OUR HOME!
WHY! IT'S MILTON LEACH! AIN'T YOU OUT ON BAIL--ON CHARGE OF TAKIN' A SHOT AT THE GOVERNOR?
TRUE, MY EAGLE EYED COSSACK FRIEND--BUT I WARN YOU, YOU HAVE NO LEGAL RIGHT TO DETAIN ME!
"THIS OLD PARTY IS TALKING DRIVEL! HER SON IS ACCUSED OF THIS BIT OF ARSON!--SHE'S TRYING TO SHIELD HIM!
THAT PROVES IT!
MY SON IS BEING QUESTIONED ABOUT THE FIRE--BUT LEACH HAD NO WAY OF KNOWING THAT--UNLESS HE...!
GET IN THE CAR, THE BOTH OF YOU! WE'LL TRY TO UNTANGLE THIS MESS!
DALE

DONALD DUCK — IT NEVER FAILS — BY WALT DISNEY



MICKEY FINN — ANOTHER REASON! — BY LANK LEONARD

ANY SIGN OF TEX EARL YET, JOHNNY?
NO, MICKEY—BUT HE COULD'VE EASILY SLIPPED INTO TOWN WITHOUT US KNOWING IT! SUPPOSE YOU GIVE SOME OF THE HOT SPOTS A LOOK TONIGHT—YOU MIGHT SEE HIM!
I THOUGHT THIS WOULD BE THE FIRST PLACE YOU'D HEAD FOR, MICKEY!
WELL, I KNEW THE FLOOR SHOW WENT ON AT THIS HOUR AND I WANT TO HAVE A TALK WITH TOMMY! GEE, HE CAN DANCE, CAN'T HE?
HAVE YOU SPOKEN TO HART SINCE I SAW YOU LAST, TOMMY—ABOUT GETTING MORE MONEY?
YES—AND HE BAWLED ME OUT AGAIN! HE'S GOT ME HOOKED AND—
A GENTLEMAN ASKED ME TO BRING THIS NOTE BACK TO YOU, MR. TAPP!
READ THAT, MICKEY! IT'LL GIVE YOU AN IDEA OF WHY I'M SORE!

DIXIE DUGAN — SLIPPING OUT — BY J. P. McEVOY AND H. J. STRIEBEL

HOW LONG HAVE YOU BEEN HERE, MA?
SEE FOR YOURSELF! (SIGH)
WHERE'S THE MAN WHO'S FOLLOWING YOU?
THAT'S HIM STANDING OUTSIDE!
LET'S SLIP OUT THE BACK WAY
O.K.— I'M CERTAINLY GLAD YOU'RE HERE

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — AULD LANG SYNE — BY FRANK MARTINEK

LET'S SEE, MABEN-MABLEY-MACK, GENE MACK
WHO'S THAT, SKIPPER?
3998
YOU REMEMBER GENE MACK, RED, OUR OLD SHIPMATE IN THE WORLD WAR. GREAT FELLOW—BIG CORPORATION PRESIDENT NOW AND—GET THIS—HE OWNS A SUPER-YACHT
AHA!
HE'S THE ADVENTUROUS TYPE FORMERLY IN THE NAVAL RESERVE. IF WE CAN INTEREST HIM IN A SECRET CRUISE TO THE CARIBBEAN—
LISTEN—SOMEONE KNOCKING!
RAP-RAP-RAP-RAP-RAP
RED! THAT OLD SECRET SIGNAL! IT DATES BACK TO OUR FIRST BATTLES WITH THE SCORPION. WHO'S OUT THERE?

BIG CHIEF WAHOO — BY SAUNDERS AND WOGGON

SORRY TO BRING YOU BACK FROM HOLLYWOOD SO SOON, MINNIE-HA-CHA, BUT YOU'VE GOT A CHANCE TO BE OF GREAT SERVICE TO YOUR GOVERNMENT!
WHATEVER IT IS, STEVE—I'M READY!
I'VE TOLD YOU ABOUT "NIHILITE", DAD'S NEW SUPER-EXPLOSIVE—WELL, YOU AND WAHOO ARE TO CARRY THE SECRET FORMULA TO WASHINGTON—BY TRAIN. I'LL LEAVE AT THE SAME TIME—BY PLANE—AS A DECOY!
DECOY?
YES! WE SUSPECT DAD'S BUTLER, SOKO, OF BEING A KYMURIAN SECRET AGENT—HE AND HIS RATS WILL STOP AT NOTHING TO GET THAT FORMULA!
THEN OUR FIRST PROBLEM IS TO FIND A WAY OF CARRYING IT THAT THEY'LL NEVER SUSPECT!
RIGHT! BUT HOW?

KING Of THE ROYAL MOUNTED — See "King of the Royal Mounted" as a movie serial, Fridays, at Ashton Theater, Clarendon, Va.

LET'S BE HONEST WITH EACH OTHER, SHEILA. I KNOW YOU'RE FOND OF KING, BUT I LOVE HIM! YOU PROBABLY WON'T UNDERSTAND, BUT THAT'S WHY I CAME ALONG!
OH, REALLY! WELL, BETTY, GET THIS. I'M JUST AS ATTRACTIVE AS YOU ARE AND I DON'T INTEND TO PULL ANY PUNCHES!
YOU'VE GOT A LOT TO LEARN, SHEILA. KING'S ON DECK-BUSY TRAILING THE POLKA DOT PIRATE AND UNTIL HE GETS HIM, HE WON'T NOTICE EITHER OF US!
WHY DO YOU WANT ME TO STEER FOR THE TRUCK FERRY CROSSING, KING?
BECAUSE, JIM, THE ONLY OTHER BOATS ON THIS PART OF THE LAKE ARE FISHING CRAFT AND THE POLKA DOT PIRATE WOULDN'T BOTHER THEM!

Utility Honors 77 Employed Over 25 Years

Seventy-seven Washington Gas Light Co. employes with at least 25 years' service, including one who had worked with the utility company 45 years, were honored last night at the first annual dinner of the firm's Quarter Century Club.

Vice Presidents Everett J. Boothby and Robert C. Owers presented to the veteran workers pins bearing the emblem of the gas company, at the banquet at the Mayflower Hotel.

Last in the line of employes receiving pins was C. Clay Bayly, assistant rate engineer, who joined the company in 1895 and whose father served the utility 36 years. Boothby expressed appreciation of the management for Bayly's long service to the company.

Strickland Gillilan, humorous writer and speaker, was the principal speaker. The following also addressed the diners: Marcy L. Sperry, president; Boothby and Owers; and the following directors: Albert W. Atwood, Christopher H. Pope, Sidney F. Taliaferro, and Corcoran Thom. James D. Dingwell, jr., personnel officer, was the toastmaster.

Separate Air Force Urged By Scrugham

Charging the Army and Navy high command with "blind resistance" to change and failure to heed the lessons of the European War, Chairman Scrugham of the House Naval Appropriations Committee yesterday urged Congress to create an independent, unified air force.

In a speech on the floor during consideration of the conference report on the $3,415,521,750 naval supply bill, Scrugham startled the House with his scathing indictment of Army and Navy chiefs and advocacy of the separate air force issue.

Previously considered a member of the "big navy" rather than the "separate air force" group, the naval chairman called for immediate abolition of the present "hydra-headed air authority" to free air development from "entrenched bureaucracy."

Millions Wasted

Specifically, Scrugham charged that the present system is not developing offensive air tactics, that millions of dollars are being wasted by duplication of Army and Navy air facilities, that air bases are not properly bomb-proofed and that outlying air bases lack adequate water supplies.

"The importance of air supremacy is generally realized in this country," he said, "but not by some of the aeronautics chiefs who seem to be mentally fighting future wars with the tactics and equipment of 1917 and 1918."

Naval airplanes, Scrugham contended are considered as only "an adjunct to the surface ship, and training and tactics "tend largely toward protection of the fleet."

Like Marine Corps

"The victors of the wars today and tomorrow," he said, "will be those who can best ignore and overreach armies and navies and use their air superiority to strike directly at vital spots like water, food and power sources, munitions plants, harbors and airdromes."

As a preliminary step toward unification of the Army and Navy air forces under a separate command, Scrugham urged that naval aviation be made a unit similar to the Marine Corps with its own supply service.

He declared that Congress must act in the matter rather than wait for the President for the generals and admirals would block such an administrative move.

Recalls Mitchell

Recalling that the late Gen. William Mitchell had been disciplined years ago for urging a separate air force, Scrugham said:

"Today the reasons for a unified air organization have increased tenfold, but the powers of the dead hand of entrenched bureaucracy have likewise multiplied and constitute a formidable opposition."

Scrugham had been leading a fight to decentralize naval air bases, and in the conference report approved by the House after he spoke a proposal for the establishment of a naval air base at Boulder Lake in his home State of Nevada was defeated. It had been voted by the House Appropriations Committee though not advocated by the Navy.

Public Urged to Support Fund for Scientific Research

Although they are being employed to destroy life and property, science and technology remain the handmaindens of cultural and social development, according to the president of the National Academy of Sciences.

Addressing the Academy's annual banquet last night at the Carlton Hotel, Dr. Frank B. Jewett made a strong plea for public support of the National Science Fund, newly organized under sponsorship of the N. A. S. to foster research.

Dr. Robert Williams Wood, of Johns Hopkins University, was presented with the Henry Draper Gold Medal for outstanding work in astronomical physics.

Among other accomplisments Dr. Wood developed machines capable of cutting 30,000 lines to an inch in the making of spectrascopic gratings which break up the lines of light from the stars into their various parts, the medal citation read.

Jewett pointed out that the research fund can contribute to the defense program by supporting fundamental scientific research in fields from which national defense applications are likely to emerge.

Groundwork for New Enterprise

"One of the important tasks of science today," said Dr. Jewett, "may well be to lay the groundwork for new industrial enterprise to fill the gap after the artificial stimulus of defense orders and the armament business falls off.

"Unless fundamental research can be carried on now in the university and engineering school laboratories, at a time when industrial organizations are being pushed to the limit to meet national defense needs, the basis for the industrial development and production of the next decade may be placed in jeopardy."

He said present economic and social conditions are making it extremely difficult for institutional and commercial laboratories to carry on fundamental research; hence the need for something like the National Science Fund, which will solicit contributions from "altruistic people who are willing to invest capital funds for the long range welfare of the country."

"I look forward," Dr. Jewett declared, "to the time when it will contribute significantly to the advancement of the welfare of mankind."

Laymen, Scientists on Board

The fund will be directed by a joint board composed of 12 laymen and 20 scientist members of the Academy, with William J. Robbins, director of the New York Botanical Garden, serving as acting chairman.

The lay group, announced yesterday, is made up as follows: Winthrop W. Aldrich, John W. Davis, Walter S. Clifford, Carlton J. H. Hayes, Elihu Root, jr., and Lewis L. Strauss, of New York; James F. Bell, Minneapolis; Homer L. Ferguson, Newport News, Va.; Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress; Harvey S. Mudd, Los Angeles; Tom K. Smith, St. Louis, and Harold H. Swift, Chicago.

Members of the scientists' board are Roger Adams, J. R. Angell, A. F. Blakeslee, Isaiah Bowman, A. H. Compton, J. B. Conant, Edwin G. Conklin, L. P. Eisenhart, H. S. Gasser, former President Herbert Hoover, E. O. Lawrence, F. R. Lillie, R. A. Millikan, A. N. Richards, W. J. Robbins, Harlow Shapley and G. H. Whipple.

Also, serving ex-officio, the following: Dr. Jewett, as president of the National Academy of Sciences; R. G. Harrison, chairman of the National Research Council, and Irving Langmiur, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

B'nai B'rith Lodges Plan Joint Parley

B'nai B'rith lodges of Washingtond and vicinity will hold a joint meeting tonight at the Jewish Community Center to discuss final plans for the forthcoming grand lodge convention and the Golden Jubilee of Argo Lodge.

In addition to Argo Lodge and the Argo Women's Auxiliary, the Capitol Lodge of this city, the Cardozo Lodge of Arlington, Va., and the Southern Maryland Lodge of the fraternal order will be represented.

Palestine Leaders To Speak at Dinner

Dr. Chaim Weizmann, of London, Zionist leader, and Maj. Victor Cazalet, chairman of the Palestine Committee of the British House of Commons, will speak at a dinner meeting of the American Palestine Committee at 8 p. m. today at the Shoreham Hotel.

Senator Alben W. Barkley, of Kentucky, will preside at the dinner. The American committee was formed recently to promote interest in the Jewish national homeland. Senators Robert F. Wagner, of New York, and Charles L. McNary, of Washington, are cochairmen of the organization.
